British Unprepared at the Start of War—Find Use of Huts Best.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Copyright: 1917: By The Tribune Company.]
[SPECIAL CABLE TO CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, March 31.—Perhaps no better evidence of the sincere effort of England to cement good relations with the United States exists than in the present willingness of John Bull to reveal to Uncle Sam some of the wounds suffered on account of military unpreparedness and to give to his cousins across the sea a tip on how to avoid "getting one in the same place."

The British regular army, which hurled its comparatively puny self against the German machine of modern war in August, 1914, was the best trained army that had ever left England. The men had been trained under officers who did and could lead them in active service.

BEST OF BRITISH FORCES.

In endurance and marching power, skill at arms, intelligence, and morale that body of men was the greatest England had ever produced.

I never saw that force, but allowing full credit to all good things said about it I do not believe that in marching power, skill at arms, intelligence, endurance, or morale it could approach, man for man, the same qualifications that were so frequently proven by the United States soldiers who made the waterless marches across Chihuahua deserts on Pancho Villa's trail, men who pushed south with Pershing over unheard of obstacles, or rode mountain passes with Dodd at Guerrero.

QUICK TRAINING COUNTS.

But the pitiful ineffectiveness of these comparatively small but highly trained units when considered in the gauge of modern warfare is not a lesson to be learned from England.

It is not so much the years of training that regular armies have during peace intervals, but the years of training that have to be crammed into short periods of months for new armies that must be mobilized if the will of the nation is to be carried out. England's armies had to be housed, fed, clothed, armed, equipped, distributed in units, taught drill, discipline, and technical skill needed in modern soldiers and finally animated with esprit de corps, and the true military spirit.

Good work cannot be obtained from a soldier unless he is properly housed and fed. The uniform helps to turn a mob into an army.

MEN FLOCK TO COLORS.

England found, as undoubtedly the United States will find, that the least difficulty to be encountered in the creation of the first new army is obtaining men. More recruits volunteered for England's first armies than could be dealt with adequately, and before this raw material could be converted into military effectiveness.

Those few professional fighting men who gave up their lives in the initial defense of the nation did not die in vain. The difficulties of those training periods and lives that are to be saved by overcoming the perils of unpreparedness are matters of importance in any present day consideration of national security.

$25 BOOKKEEPER IN SUMPTUOUS OFFICES NABBED

F. D. Lamont Taken as Forger—Mystifies the Police.

Frank D. Lamont has been maintaining two pretentious offices, with costly furniture in each, soft carpets, and a stenographer, in the Twentieth Century building. He has been maintaining a home, with a wife and four children, and he has had an automobile at his beck and call. The home is at 7335 Stewart avenue.

Yet Mr. Lamont, who is 39 years old, has been drawing for a long time a salary of only $25 a week as bookkeeper for the Commonwealth Commercial company. When F. A. Schumacher, with the Pinkerton agency, and a city detective walked into one of his fine offices, with "Lamont Services" painted upon the glass door, they found Mr. Lamont ready to welcome business. Engraved stationery said he was a public accountant.

He Rocks Complacently.

He rocked back and forth and said he was glad to see them. Then they arrested him on a charge of forging the name of J. E. Bayrd, president of the Commonwealth Commercial company, Rookery building, to checks. Charles L. Larkin, chief of detectives, said last night that Lamont had confessed.

It is said that in the last six months Lamont secured something like $10,000 of his employer's money by forging checks of $500 or more and then "doctoring" the statements of balances in the bank. The police say that he told a story of turning over $4,000 to a "Mr. Smith" to invest in New York real estate.

Got No Receipt.

Lamont declared he got no receipt for this money and is placing his faith in the integrity of Mr. Smith, whose first name he could not recall, to carry the deal through with honesty and dispatch. Each of the two fine offices in the Twentieth Century building is maintained as that of a public accountant.

On the door of one the police found "Frank D. Lamont" and on the other "The Lamont Services." They have not solved the mystery of the two offices nor have they learned how he managed to operate them and retain his position for so long as bookkeeper for the Commonwealth Commercial company.

Costs $1.60 to File a 99 Cent Claim in Court

It cost $1.60 to file the claim for 99 cents of the American Multigraph company of Cleveland against the estate of the late Fritz von Frantzius yesterday in the Probate court. The filing fee was charged against the estate. An aggregate of $70,000 claims has been filed thus far against the estate.

THE GERMAN CRISIS

President likely to deliver his war address to congress on Tuesday; many messages of public support sent to White House.

Eighteen senators declare for war while only three oppose; many refuse to give views until Wilson has spoken.

Two Americans killed and eighteen missing on unwarned British craft sunk by German submarine.

SUMMARY OF THE WAR

British forces in France capture eight more towns on Somme front; raids on German trenches near Ypres result successfully. Paris reports advances by French.

British forces in Mesopotamia advancing to the north of Bagdad have occupied the town of Kalaat Felujah and the areas of Deltawah and Sindiyah and Sheraban.

TEXAN, CARRYING OWN ARTILLERY, SEEKS TO ENLIST

He was long and lank and booted. He entered room 531, Rookery building, and Maj. C. R. Vincent faced him. The major is after 300 recruits and he wants 'em right now.

"Is this the artillery?" the stranger asked.

"It is, of the I. N. G.," replied Maj. Vincent. "Have you had any experience with artillery?" The stranger rested a heavy "six gun" on the table and spoke:

"Me experienced with artillery? Say, I've packed it since I was 8 year old. I can cut a man off at the pockets at 200 yards."

Then the major explained to him that artillery is great, big guns on wheels, and that 90 per cent of his men, so far, are college graduates and that mathematics is an important thing in artillery fire, etcetera. The Texan left, but men of his spirit are still wanted.

BRITISH WIN EIGHT TOWNS; FRENCH GAIN

Allies Reach Road Made Historic by Retreat from Mons.

BY ARTHUR DRAPER.

LONDON, March 31.—Eight villages adjoining the Hindenburg line fell to the British today and last night, two of them just southwest of Arras on the road to Cambrai, and six of them, including the important center of Vermand, facing St. Quentin from the west.

Occupying Vermand, the British are once more back on the road of Sir John French's memorable retreat from Mons when the "first hundred thousand" were thrust from Belgium and almost cut to pieces. It was at Vermand that the Eighth brigade halted after the battle of Le Cateau.

Hendecourt Lez Cagnicourt, below Arras, was captured by Gen. Haig's troops yesterday evening. They continued to thrust eastward and brought in a number of additional prisoners and machine guns.

CONQUEST WON EASILY.

In the neighborhood of Vermand the British encountered little opposition and were able to establish themselves in Marteville and Soyecourt, as well as Vermand. Artillery fire drove the Germans from St. Emilie and enabled the British to take possession of the town. North of Roisel, along the valley of the Cologne river, the British advance was resumed and the villages of Jeancourt, Hervilly and Heudicourt were captured.

Meanwhile the British pressure north of Arras is continuous. Many attacks are reported northeast of Neuville St. Vaast, east of Loos and north of Ypres. British raiding parties were flung forward, destroying the enemy's dugouts and bringing back prisoners and war material to their own lines.

Gen. Haig is evidently testing the German strength in this sector, preparatory to an attack in force to turn the northern pivot of the Hindenburg line.

SUCCESSES BY FRENCH.

Paris reports brilliant progress at several points along the new German line after a lull of several days in the fighting. The French successfully attacked along the Neuville-sur-Marival front, northeast of Soissons, and drove eastward, capturing several important supporting posts. They repulsed five German counter attacks.

It is reported from France that the Germans have caused extensive floods along the Yser, indicating their intention to keep strictly on the defensive.

WARNS ENGLAND OF RAID.

Gen. O'Moore Creagh, in the Weekly Dispatch, gives a warning that Gen. von Hindenburg has a maneuvering mass of nearly a million Germans and may use large numbers of them to invade England. He says:

"Gen. von Hindenburg may elect, under the cover of a great naval battle, to throw as many transports as possible onto these shores, in the hope that a large proportion of them may avoid being sunk.

"We can imagine what work Hindenburg's men, once they had dug themselves in, would set about accomplishing. With our resources, no raiding party, no matter on what forlorn stretch of coast they landed, ought to be at liberty more than four hours, although that is far too long for men of the Huns' charming habits and tendencies."

First Clash with Aliens Somewhere in Illinois

Five Austrians on their way from a dance attempted to cross a bridge guarded by a patrol under Sergt. J. R. McAdams. When halted they cursed the soldiers and showed fight. The infantrymen clubbed their rifles and made the battle short. One Austrian was stabbed slightly with a bayonet. All five were arrested and turned over on an open charge to the civil authorities.

MASSMEETING URGES ACTION FOR UNIVERSAL SERVICE

THE following resolutions were framed by the committee on resolutions and adopted by the patriotic massmeeting at the Auditorium theater last night:

Whereas, the nation is on the verge of war; and whereas, American ships have been sunk on the high seas by the submarines of the imperial German government with the loss of American lives, in violation of specific and solemn treaty obligations and in violation of international law; therefore we, citizens of Chicago, in massmeeting assembled, "with malice toward none, with charity for all, but with firmness in the right," do hereby resolve:

1. That as loyal Americans, without regard to political party lines, we approve the action of the president of the United States in severing diplomatic relations with the German empire.
2. That we pledge our hearty support to the government in every act to protect the safety of our citizens, the honor of our nation, and the cause of freedom and democracy throughout the world.
3. That we urge congress immediately to enact a law providing for universal obligatory military training and service as the only efficient, just, and democratic method of national defense.
4. That we urge congress without delay to equip our existing troops and all troops to be raised with the most modern appliances of war, so that the equipment and effectiveness of our army and navy shall be second to none.
5. That if war occurs we urge the government of the United States to conduct it with all the power of the nation.
6. That a committee, of which the presiding officer of this meeting shall be a member, be appointed by the chair to place these resolutions before the president of the United States and the proper committees of congress and to urge the adoption of the policies declared therein.

FIRE PERIL SEEN IN 2 PLATOONS

The fire fighting force of Chicago is cut this morning by more than 300 men. If the city has the good luck to get through the day without a fire of consequence the chief of the department will breathe easier. The possibility of fire has been recognized by the military authorities, who have placed armed guards at certain of the city's public works.

Reversing his earlier decision, Fire Marshal O'Connor last night issued a general order inaugurating the double platoon system throughout the department. This order becomes effective at 8 o'clock this morning and will have the effect of cutting down the fire force at any given time by nearly 25 per cent.

Fears a Catastrophe.

The fire chief admitted Chicago will be lucky if it gets through the day without some catastrophe resulting from inadequate fire protection.

"I'd rather lose my job than tackle a big fire without adequate facilities," continued the chief. "But the city council has ordered me to put the double platoon system into effect and the corporation counsel has informed me that I've got to obey that mandate.

"My first order was to make it apply to only five companies. I thought that would comply with the spirit of the ordinance. But later I talked to the corporation counsel again and he said I would have to issue a general order."

The Order.

Here is the order issued to all battalion chiefs:

"Commencing at 8 o'clock a. m., April 1, in compliance with ordinance passed by city council Oct. 30, 1916, you are hereby ordered to install twenty-four hour off, twenty-four hour on system in all companies in your battalion with the exception of fireboat companies.

"You will submit to me a written report not later than 9 o'clock a. m. Monday on the practicability of this off system in your battalion, together with the effects of the same upon the fire service."

Reduction in Strength.

Chicago's fire fighting force now includes 1,970 men. Under the present system of twenty-four hours off in every seventy-two hour period, there are approximately 1,300 men on duty at any given time. Beginning today there will be less than 1,000 on duty. Companies which formerly had eight to twelve men ready to respond to a fire call will have six or less.

"The issuance of the order is nothing less than a calamity," said Charles P. Whitney, chairman of the fire department committee of the Chicago board of underwriters.

Problem in Finance.

It is estimated it will require 437 additional men at a cost of $320,000 to keep up the efficiency of the department. But city officials say there is no money available for this purpose.

The city council does not meet till Wednesday. Chief O'Connor said he may decide in the meantime to cancel the double platoon order, regardless of the city ordinance.

NATION AWAKES TO DEFENSE PLEA

Recruiting and Mobilizing of Resources Progress Over the Country.

New York, March 31.—A generous response to the appeal for the nation's defense is shown today by figures on recruiting and reports of patriotic movements gathered from all sections of the country by the United Press. Men and women are responding to the call and even boy scouts are giving pledges of national service.

Legislatures are appropriating defense sums; bankers are considering the raising of funds for war needs; recruiting stations are outdoing themselves; patriotic meetings are scheduled or have been held in a number of cities. Nearly every city reports a sentiment that is waiting only the real call to arms to plunge states and cities into a real rally to the colors.

"Pacifist West" Enlists.

The west, called pacifist, reports just as much preparation, just as much of a martial air, almost the same stimulation in recruiting as other sections.

Millions of dollars have been appropriated by states. Massachusetts and Vermont each appropriated $1,000,000 and New Hampshire followed with $500,000. Governors of the six New England states are in constant communication, working toward the common end of preparing the section for eventualities.

Daily drills for soldiers are being held in the downtown streets of western cities to stimulate recruiting and recruits are drilling on the roofs of skyscrapers during lunch hour. Colleges, universities, and public schools are drilling students.

A bill appropriating $1,000,000 for war use in the event of hostilities has been introduced in the Minnesota state legislature. Two volunteer regiments of 900 and 700 men have organized.

Indiana Guard Growing.

Autos are carrying speakers over Indiana seeking to stimulate recruiting. Six new companies of the national guard are being formed in that state, with almost 400 men already enlisted.

The governor of Ohio has signed an order providing for a military census.

Regiments of cavalry and infantry are being organized in Tennessee. Nearly 400 recruits have been obtained for guard service in three Tennessee towns.

Los Angeles will have a home defense organization of 10,000, according to preparations being made by the chief of police. Three thousand already have agreed to serve.

The Oregon militia gained 250 recruits in thirty-two hours. Naval and marine recruiting stations are enlisting ten to fifteen men daily in Oregon.

Iowa's naval recruiting was double its previous best record. Military recruiting is going on so fast it is almost certain new state regiments will be formed.

New York state will have an inventory of all military resources. Recruiting has been rapid here, with women speakers touring the streets of New York encouraging enlistments. Naval stations showed a gain of 1,500 for the week. Preparations are being made to fill men's jobs with women workers.

ARMY SERVICE BY ALL, SLOGAN OF BIG RALLY

Preparedness and Patriotism Inspire Notable Gathering.

With the cloud of war big on the nation's horizon, Chicago's patriotism flared up last night in one of the most enthusiastic massmeetings in the city's history. The meeting was held in the Auditorium. The hall was crowded and the doors closed at 7 p. m. and thousands were unable to get in.

The supreme note of the night was preparedness. The resolutions that were adopted and the addresses which sent the audience in whirlwinds of cheers that almost lifted the roof showed that if the people of Chicago do not want war, they are at least ready in spirit to meet it if it comes. The meeting was a profound expression of loyalty to the country.

FLAGS ARE EVERYWHERE.

The stage was draped with American colors. Banners hung from the balconies and other vantage points. Every person in the hall was presented with a small flag. When the audience rose in tense moments to thunder out their enthusiasm, the house became a riot of color with the fluttering of thousands of stars and stripes.

A prefatory hour, from 7 to 8 o'clock, was devoted to a concert of patriotic airs, led by the Chicago band, with William Weil as director.

THE BAND PROGRAM.

The songs began with "Onward, Christian Soldier," and ran the gamut of "The Star Spangled Banner," "The Red, White, and Blue," "America," "Dixie," and "Illinois." The crowd shouted for "Tipperary," the marching song of the English soldiers in France. It was not on the program, but some one in the top gallery struck up the song.

In a moment the audience was in the full swing of the melody. The band fell into line and one might have thought from the cheers and the waving of flags that followed that "Tipperary" was the American national anthem.

NOTABLES ON STAGE.

On the stage were Gov. Lowden, Maj. Gen. Barry, U. S. A., and staff, and officers of G. A. R. posts and veterans of the Spanish-American war. The front seats were occupied by civil war veterans. Behind them were grouped the Daughters of Veterans and in the boxes were Col. Milton G. Foreman and staff of the First Illinois cavalry and Col. Joseph B. Sanborn and staff of the First Illinois infantry and other officers of the Illinois national guard.

Bishop Samuel Fallows opened the meeting with an invocation in the spirit of a nation on the brink of war. The gray haired veteran of the civil war said: "We are met to inform president and congress of our unwavering determination to maintain the honor of the nation and the rights of universal man," and asked divine aid "to teach our hands to war and our fingers to fight." "The battle is Thine," he added, "and the glory of the victory shall be Thine for ever and ever. Amen."

DICKINSON READS CALL.

Jacob M. Dickinson, former secretary of war, and chairman, read the call for the meeting. He emphasized the necessity for national preparedness and universal military and naval service. He carried the audience with him when he referred to "the parasites of pacifism" who are preaching peace when "our citizens are being murdered on the high seas."

"If you support this shameful doctrine of pacifism," he said as he pointed dramatically to the old warriors of the Grand Army of the Republic in the front rows, "tear from the breasts of these veterans the emblems of honor which a grateful nation has placed upon them and drive them forth as pariahs."

LOWDEN VOICES FAITH.

Gov. Lowden declared his faith in the loyalty of the American people, no matter from what forbears they sprang, and said he would not have faith in his native land if he doubted the fealty of German-Americans.

"It is time," said the governor, "that something happened in this country to accentuate the average citizen's sense of duty to his country. If this crisis brings universal military service it will be worth all it costs."

Judge John P. McGoorty and Dr.

SWORD RATHER THAN DISHONOR

THE spirit of Chicago as voiced by orators at the patriotic mass-meeting at the Auditorium last night:

GOV. FRANK O. LOWDEN—The question is not whether we prefer peace or war. When war comes in spite of all our strivings for peace, the entire strength of the nation should be marshaled back of it. There is no middle ground. It is peace altogether or war altogether. You can not have both at the same time.

JUDGE JOHN P. McGOORTY—There can be no doubt that the American people favor peace, but not peace at any price. The sword should be the last resort, but rather the sword than dishonor. This is a time for prompt action tempered by moderation and wisdom. I believe the American nation is prepared to accept any eventuality in a manner worthy of its best traditions.

FORMER SECRETARY OF WAR JACOB M. DICKINSON—The essential idea of our national life is the association of a free people for mutual protection in the pursuit of life, liberty and happiness. No nation can have the respect of its people unless it is willing to hazard all for this purpose. German citizenship is assured world-wide protection. American citizenship is in danger of becoming a term of world-wide contempt. The United States must vindicate its right to be a nation by protecting the property and lives of its citizens against unjust aggression.

DR. FRANK W. GUNSAULUS—To give every drop of our blood and every dollar of our wealth at such an hour to those who are beating back the haughty plans of proposed world despotism is to consecrate anew the blood of Americans to the cause of free government and to dedicate the wealth of the nation to ideals which alone have made this nation worth while in the annals of mankind. Any other course will leave our stagnant blood in rotten veins and at last turn the heart of Americans into hideous gold.

If every mother's son of this nation could take down the old flintlock of 1776 or the musket of 1863 and be drilled into a loyal understanding of how the nation was made and saved in fire and blood, we would soon cease to hide behind the Atlantic in our mental babyhood and thank God for the safety of water.

Frank W. Gunsaulus made stirring speeches, the minister quoting the Bible to prove that war, if it be a righteous war, is not contrary to the concepts of Christianity.

"No peace can last," he said, "unless it be achieved by a war of justice and the victory of right over wrong."

RESOLUTIONS OFFERED.

President Harry Pratt Judson of the University of Chicago then presented the resolutions which approved the severance of diplomatic relations with Germany, pledged support to protect the safety of citizens and the honor of the nation, urged the enactment of an immediate law providing for obligatory universal military training and service, and called upon the United States in the event of war to prosecute it "with all the power of the nation."

Maj. R. R. McCormick of the First Illinois cavalry seconded the resolutions. He pointed to Col. Foreman and his staff and said that Gen. Parker, under whom the First cavalry served on the Rio Grande, had declared in the Army and Navy Journal that the regiment was ready for war. He called attention to Col. Sanborn and his staff of the First Illinois infantry in another box and said that the First regiment, as far as the training and equipment can go, "is ready for war with Germany today."

Asks Three Questions.

In three questions which he propounded to the audience Maj. McCormick brought the meeting to a dramatic climax.

"With regular soldiers and national guardsmen, the United States army numbers not more than 300,000 men," he said. "Germany has 10,000,000 trained soldiers. Will you leave us to fight such an enemy alone?"

The audience answered "No" in thunderous tones.

"For forty years the genius of the German race," Maj. McCormick continued, "has devoted itself to training and equipping the German army, until today it is the most effective military machine in point of arms and munitions in the world's history. The American army is equipped with inferior guns and munitions. Will you send us to the front with our antiquated arms to fight the best equipped soldiery in the world?"

Again the crowd roared "No."

Crowd Pledges Aid.

"I will be in the army in a few days," Maj. McCormick went on, "and, like all soldiers, I will be muzzled. Men in the army cannot speak for their lives. They cannot lift a voice for better armament or food supplies. Will you, the free citizens of Illinois, go to congress to fit us properly for war and make congress stand behind us?"

"Yes," shouted the audience.

Then Chairman Dickinson put the resolutions and they were carried without a dissenting voice, with a shout like the roar of battle.

While the meeting was in progress the crowd that was denied admission assembled in Grant park and listened to a band concert of patriotic airs. Recruiting squads of the First infantry worked in the crowd and obtained many volunteers who later were signed for service.

PLEA FOR NATION ARMY

Universal training and undivided support of President Wilson in the present national cricis was the keynote of former Secretary Dickinson's address. He suggested also that the United States will welcome Germany into the sisterhood of world republics when the people of that country gain their independence.

"Our ships have been sunk," said Mr. Dickinson, "and our citizens have been ruthlessly put to death by the German government on the high seas, where they were within their rights under recognized principles of international law. American citizenship is in danger of becoming a term of world-wide contempt.

"The United States must vindicate its right to be a nation by protecting the property and lives of its citizens against unjust aggression. If the outrages already inflicted are not sufficient to arouse the spirit of our people, then we are cravens impervious to insult and will inevitably sink into a Chinese passivism and inconsequence as a nation, that will certainly invite despoilment of our hoarded wealth, the destruction of our cities, the devastation of our country, the desecration of our national monuments, the violation of our women, and the deportation of our children into captivity.

No War Lust.

"The crime of war lust cannot justly be charged upon us. No other nation has done more to promote the spirit of peace among nations and the establishment of tribunals for the settlement of international differences without appeal to arms. We are the only nation that ever went to war solely in behalf of the rights and liberties of other people. After establishing Cuba in her independence at our own cost we promptly withdrew our armies.

"We have so long and so constantly idealized peace that there has sprung up in our midst a noxious parasite, not from American soil, but attaching itself to the body politic from which it draws its existence and whose protection it enjoys. I mean those so-called pacifists who exalt, even in a crisis like this, when our citizens are being murdered on the high seas, a general theory of humanitarianism above the country that shelters them and who would denationalize us, deny every principle of patriotism, scoff at the monuments of our national heroes, and turn to the wall the pictures of Washington, Jackson, Lincoln, and Grant, who through war and the direct results of war achieved their country's love and a place among those immortal few that were not born to die.

Cry of "Militarism."

"Such pacifists try to terrify us with a cry of 'militarism.' If there be such a risk I would take the chances and trust to the sense and strength of our people to deal with our own military, rather than suffer the degradation and outrage that will certainly come from foreign militarism if we proclaim the shameful doctrine of nonresistance.

"This threat is a bogy to frighten those ignorant of our history.

"Some urge that we are wholly unprepared and should take no hostile action until we are adequately prepared. Such a course is abject submission or a war with Germany after this war is over.

"If we fight we must act with those who are now fighting Germany. The result will be quicker and surer, the outlay and hazard less; we will be at the council board when the terms of peace are adjusted and will have friends and not stand isolated when the war is over. If we have unsettled issues with Germany and have no part in the treaty of peace then God help the United States.

Militarists in Germany.

"If we wage war with Germany we should make it plain to the German people at large that we do not regard them as responsible for our differences; that we believe that it is a condition brought about by their military rulers; that we bear them no malice; that we would gladly welcome them to the sisterhood of republics, and that if they shall achieve control of their own affairs our contest with them will soon be ended.

"For our unpreparedness our whole people are responsible. That we can almost immediately evolve tremendous forces that will potentially affect the result of the present war is manifest. Through our finances, our factories, our shipping, our light sea craft, aeroplanes, and navy we can soon become a powerful factor. The question of putting troops in the field is more remote, but if the war shall last a year we can accomplish much in that direction.

Volunteer Idea Undemocratic.

"The only way to impose the burden of national defense is by universal training and, when necessity shall arise, by universal services. It is not democratic to leave the sacrifice to be borne alone by volunteers. We should here and now let congress know how we stand on this question. If we go in it must be with all our might. We should have no war or should wage war to the limit of our power.

"It is said that President Wilson will merely present the facts to congress and make no recommendation. I do not believe it. The American people look for leadership. I believe that our president will lead courageously in a way that Americans who are lovers of their country can proudly follow."

NO HALF WAY STAND

Gov. Lowden in his address declared himself strongly in favor of military training and said that there was no halfway stand that the nation could take in the present international crisis.

"The question is not whether we prefer peace or war," said the governor. "If it were, this vast audience would acclaim peace. It is our true policy to be just and honorable in our international relations and to make any concessions consistent with our vital interests in order to avoid war.

"But when war comes in spite of all our strivings for peace, the entire strength of the nation should be marshaled back of it.

"The strong man avoids, if possible, conflict with his fellow man. He shrinks from giving cause for offense. He sacrifices much to escape a clash. But if he fails to avoid the contest, he finds it the highest prudence to cast all prudence to the winds and to devote his entire strength to his cause. So must nations face war which is forced upon them. They must not count the cost in advance; they must not shrink from the results, whatever the results may be.

Opposed to Militarism.

"I am opposed to militarism as a method of government. But in my judgment the only sure defense in a democracy against militarism is universal military service. The only alternative to universal service is a professional army. History teems with examples of nations which have lost their liberties through a professional soldiery, but I know of no instance where a people has lost its liberties through a citizen soldiery passing automatically back and forth between the pursuits of peace and the army's ranks.

"Means must be devised promptly to insure the largest possible production of food supplies. It must be recognized that the boy or man who puts all his energies into the increased supply of food is as truly a soldier of the republic as he who, in uniform, fights in the ranks.

"It must be reserved for the Mississippi valley to make the decisive stand against the dangers rushing in upon us from the blackness all around. I suggest that the governors of the food producing states of the Mississippi valley hold a conference for the consideration of this great question.

"It is all or nothing. We cannot be half hearted. We cannot go half way. We either shall vindicate our mission and show to all the world that a great people can govern themselves, or we shall become but an episode in the history of the world. The decision is upon us. God grant that we may so decide that when, next May, we bear blossoms to our soldiers' graves, we may go without shame in our hearts."

NATION GUARDS ITS HONOR

Judge McGoorty said the nation was ready to accept any eventuality in guarding its honor.

"This is probably the greatest patriotic demonstration held in Chicago during the last fifty years," said Judge McGoorty. "Valor receives a deserved tribute in having the veterans of the civil and Spanish-American wars occupying the post of honor on this historic occasion. Although this wonderful assemblage may have a military aspect, its purpose is not to arouse a spirit of war, but to emphasize the imperative need of immediate and complete national preparedness.

"There can be no doubt that the American people favor peace, but not peace at any price. For nearly three years we have witnessed the horrors of modern warfare. We cannot be unmindful of its terrible consequences. The sword should be the last resort, but rather the sword than dishonor. This is a time for prompt action, tempered by moderation and wisdom.

Nation for Honor.

"I believe the American nation is prepared to accept any eventuality in a manner worthy of its noblest traditions. The American public may differ as to whether the incoming congress should declare for armed neutrality or a state of war. However we may differ as to procedure, I confidently believe the American people are united upon the paramount necessity of maintaining our country's honor and defending, if need be, our country's flag.

"In this crisis we should not forget that our foreign born citizens have voluntarily adopted this country and assumed all of the obligations of citizenship for themselves and for their children. They cherish these United States as the land of opportunity and the foremost champion of civil and religious liberty. Fear not for the loyalty of America's adopted sons and daughters.

"In every battle for American independence and American honor the alien has heroically shown his love and devotion for his adopted country. From the very beginning of our country's history the foreign born have been an essential part of our national life and our national being. We are a composite people. In this supreme hour we must be a united people.

"When the final word is spoken we will obey the call of our president and of our congress. We will stand by—for we are one people. At this moment, whether we believe peace or war more desirable, we must prepare for an adequate national defense.

"Universal military training will inculcate a spirit of obedience and of service. There is no danger, in my opinion, that we will thus become a military nation. Such a possibility is opposed to the genius of our people.

"Verging towards war as we have been for many months, let us show that the spirit of valor and sacrifice of '76 and '61 still lives.

"Let us prepare. May an all wise God guide our councils aright. Let us in every crisis prove ourselves to be worthy of the priceless heritage of liberty, ready to pay the supreme sacrifice, if necessary, for its preservation."

DEFENSE OF FREEDOM

Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus said the youth of the nation need no better lesson than defense of the free constitution of the United States by universal service.

"War is never so fearful to any nation of people as when that nation is more afraid of it than it is of ill gotten wealth or dishonorable safety," said Dr. Gunsaulus.

"The desolations of soul, the collapse of conscience, and the intellectual boobydom which come with fear and nest safely with cowardice are a brood of consequences worse than bloody fields, honorable graves, and vacant chairs at the hearthstone.

"When the hearthstone of a country's faith that humanity is capable of self-government, has been saved through the fires of a just and righteous war, there begins again the new day of progress.

"We need not prepare ourselves to run about the world by way of entangling alliances and enter the wars of others, though if we shall have men in America like Sir Philip Sidney, we must be as knightly as he, and each say to himself in truth, 'Wherever there is a good war, I will go to it.'

"Shameful Suicide."

"Moments arise when we cannot permit other nations to wage the battle alone and do all the fighting against autocracy and tyranny.

"To offer every drop of our blood and every dollar of our wealth at such an hour to those who are beating back the haughty plans of proposed world despotism is to consecrate anew the blood of Americans to the cause of free government, and it is to dedicate the wealth of the nation to ideals which alone have made this nation worth while in the annals of mankind. Any other course will leave our stagnant blood in rotten veins, and at last turn the heart of Americans into hideous gold."

U. S. TO DEMAND AMERICANS ON MOEWE BE FREED

Washington, D. C., March 31.—Official dispatches from Copenhagen today confirmed reports that two American seamen had arrived there from Germany with the story that some fifty others taken in raids by the commerce raider Moewe were held in detention camps.

Reports from many sources have convinced officials here that Americans captured on the British steamer Esmeralda are held. As yet no reply has come to an inquiry sent through the Spanish foreign office a week ago as to whether there were Americans among the crews of vessels captured.

Dispatches from Minister Egan today told of the two seamen reaching Copenhagen. They were Alexander Meyer and Jack Benson, taken from the Norwegian bark Straut. They said that in addition to fifty men from the Esmeralda the Germans are detaining one from the British steamer Brecknorshire. All, they said, are in a detention camp at Westphalia. The two were released because they were on an unarmed ship.

This government, it is considered certain, will make a vigorous demand for the release of the American sailors.

UNITED STATES UNPREPARED FOR BIG SCALE WAR

Secretary Baker Bares Weakness in Replies to Questions.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 31.—[Special.]—As it grows evident that the president will this week ask congress to give consent to a declaration of war with Germany, the tragic unpreparedness of the nation becomes a clearer fact.

This fact of the nation's lack of preparation looms forth in all its horror from the frantic efforts of the administration to prepare the county for war on short notice and undo the harm of the pacifistic policies that have ruled the government for four years past.

Woeful Shortage of Ships.

If the navy be sent to sea for war operations within the next eight months it will brook catastrophes that will horrify the American people. In fact, there are high naval officials who doubt that the navy can be prepared for effective use in war within a year.

There are only fifteen battleships in full commission and ready for action, but even these cannot be risked in the open sea with German submarines at large because of the lack of supporting craft.

Under modern conditions a battleship goes to sea literally surrounded by destroyers to ward off submarines. It is only under such conditions that the British fleet emerges from the safety of British harbors protected by submarine nets.

Tragic Unpreparedness.

For this purpose the American navy has only thirty-eight destroyers, about two for every battleship in full commission, and only one for each capital ship if the administration ever succeeds in getting to sea the ten battleships, seven armored cruisers, and four first class cruisers now in reserve for want of crews.

Even more tragic is the condition of unpreparedness of the land forces.

In rifles, machine guns, field artillery, aeroplanes, ammunition, clothing, and other equipment there is a shortage in the amount needed for an adequate army and even in the amount authorized by congress that almost staggers belief.

Army Supplies Details.

THE TRIBUNE is enabled to present the proof of this statement in a questionaire concerning the details of army equipment. This questionaire, the replies to the questions being furnished by Secretary of War Baker, follows:

First—What is the total amount and total value of field artillery which ought to be accumulated in anticipation of the possible breaking out of war?

Nine hundred and seventy-eight firing batteries.

Second—How much of this requisite has actually been completed, according to your latest available figures?

One hundred and eighty-three and one-half firing batteries completed; value, including harness, $18,025,902.

Nation Hopelessly Behind.

Third—How much of this requisite has been authorized and appropriated for over and above the amount completed?

One hundred and forty and one-half firing batteries and seventeen ammunition batteries authorized and appropriated for; value, including harness, $19,188,670.

Fourth—What is the total amount and total value of field artillery ammunition which ought to be accumulated in anticipation of the possible breaking out of war?

Seven million four hundred and fifteen thousand rounds; value, $170,000,000.

Fifth—How much of this requisite has actually been completed, according to your latest available figures?

Seven hundred and seventeen thousand five hundred rounds, completed; value, $10,289,300.

Lack Machine Guns.

Sixth—How much of this requisite has been authorized and appropriated for over and above the amount completed?

One million five hundred and nine thousand five hundred rounds authorized and appropriated for over and above amount completed; value, $22,860,700.

Seventh—What is the total amount and total value of machines which ought to be accumulated in anticipation of the possible breaking out of war?

Seventeen thousand two hundred and eighty-three machine guns required, per recommendations of the machine gun board, 1916; value, $49,694,450.

Eighth—How much of this requisite has actually been completed, according to your latest available figures?

One thousand three hundred and twenty-five machine guns on hand, serviceable, although not of the adopted type. These will be replaced by adopted type as soon as available; value, at price of adopted model, $3,771,000.

Need Million Rifles.

Ninth—How much of this requisite has been authorized and appropriated for over and above the amount completed?

Four thousand seven hundred and twenty-five guns complete, with the exception of certain articles which can be obtained more quickly than the guns, can be procured from funds available; value, $10,221,000.

The Treat board report did not consider the number of rifles to be accumulated in anticipation of the possible breaking out of war. The answer to question No. 10 is based on the number of rifles which it is considered should be on hand for an army of approximately 1,000,000 men, as provided by the act of congress approved June 3, 1916.

Tenth—What is the total amount and total value of rifles which ought to be accumulated in anticipation of the possible breaking out of war?

One million five hundred thousand rifles; value, $29,250,000.

Eleventh—How much of this requisite has actually been completed, according to your latest available figures?

Seven hundred and thirty-six thousand rifles completed; value, $14,352,000.

Twelfth—How much of this requisite has been authorized and appropriated for over and above the amount completed?

One hundred and ten thousand rifles authorized and appropriated for over and above the amount completed; value, $3,200,000.

WAR IS INDORSED BY 18 SENATORS; THREE OPPOSED

Many Members of Upper House Delay Decision Until Session.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 31.—[Special.]—Eighteen United States senators in Washington tonight answered "yes" to the question:

"Do you believe congress should adopt a resolution declaring that a state of war exists between the United States and Germany?"

Three senators answered "no." The negatives came from McCumber of North Dakota, Stone of Missouri, and Vardaman of Mississippi.

Twenty-four senators said they did not wish to speak now on the issue and would await the address of the president.

Senators who had no hesitancy in saying that they would vote for a declaration of a state of war were the following:

DEMOCRATS.

Beckham [Ky.],
Broussard [La.],
Chamberlain [Ore.],
Fletcher [Fla.],
Hughes [N. J.],
Husting [Wis.],
James [Ky.],
Owen [Okla.],
Pittman [Nev.],
Simmons [N. C.],
Swanson [Va.],
Williams [Miss.].

REPUBLICANS.

Brandegee [Conn.],
Curtis [Kas.],
Poindexter [Wash.],
Wadsworth [N. Y.],
Warren [Wyo.],
Weeks [Mass.].

Illinois Men Silent.

Among those who refused to commit themselves were Senators Sherman and Lewis of Illinois.

Senator Simmons of North Carolina, chairman of the finance committee, who came to the capital today, was emphatic in his declaration on the subject and urged a direct declaration of war.

Owen Issues Statement.

Senator Owen of Oklahoma issued a statement tonight declaring that the people of his state were ready to support war. Senator Owen said:

"In answer to a telegram which I sent to a large number of cities in Oklahoma asking the state of public opinion with regard to the anticipated action of the president in advising that a state of war exists or a declaration of war against the German Hohenzollern government, I received replies from various organizations, chambers of commerce, rotary clubs, civic organizations, etc., in Oklahoma. They were all of like purport—that they would stand by the president and congress in declaring that a state of war exists, or in declaring war. Some suggested that, while preferring peace, they would stand by the president in defense of American rights."

Wall Paper Draperies

THE plea for simplicity of design if not exactly coloring has reached us direct from Paris. Gray Tapestries, ecru self-toned effects, seam reducing hand stipple patterns—perfectly neutral—are designs that are offered in our exhibition—designed and executed by the great European manufacturers.

Meanwhile, simplicity is the right keynote to strike and to Parisians it is to learn to suppress COSTLY simplicity, due to increased cost of evesything they buy.

As an example of artistic decoration, we illustrate a decoration that can be materialized economically and with pleasing results.

IMMENSE CROWD SILENT, AWED, AS TROOPS GO BY

People's Attitude Shows They Sense Parade's Deep Meaning.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

It was a strange day, hard to analyze or interpret. One might find in it almost what he chose.

The crowds downtown were enormous. By noon they filled the sidewalks and swarmed out into the streets, blocking the crossings, delaying traffic. Equally great was the crush of automobiles and other vehicles. They poured into the loop in apparently endless streams from all sections of the city.

The city woke under a gray, lowering sky. The air was hot and oppressive with humidity. All day threatening clouds lay close, opening now and then to let in fugitive glimpses of the sun.

The sharp breeze which whipped the flags in the early morning died away towards noon, so that their folds drooped almost lifeless against the staffs. Only at intervals they fluttered in fitful breaths of air.

Display of Flags Spotty.

A ride through the loop in the late morning showed that while most buildings flaunted the stars and stripes—and many more than a single flag—there was no such general flowering of the red, white and blue as many people expected or as the city has shown on other less important occasions.

The display of flags seemed spotty. La Salle street, for instance, was ablaze with color, while on some of the others the eye had to seek to find a single flag high up on its tower. One noted that flags on buildings where the signboards bore German names were quite as frequent as any others.

When the men of the First regiment, I. N. G., swung up Michigan avenue from their armory in the morning the sidewalks were already crowded.

Men in Fine Form.

The men made a splendid appearance. They were mostly tall, lank, young chaps, with cheeks almost as brown as their khaki uniforms, and they marched with a dash and precision that told of their long hikes last summer along the Mexican border.

The big regimental band which led them, following a heralding platoon of mounted police, played stirring marches as they tramped.

But martial and trim as was the marching column, it was not greeted by anything which the most imaginative would call an ovation. Pretty girls leaned out of the windows of skyscrapers and clapped their hands. One or two tossed down flowers to their military heroes.

But mostly the crowds along the avenue were silent as the battalion marched by. Whatever emotions were stirred were not expressed. Men and women along the streets were not smiling or chatting.

If they were not indifferent they were sober and self-contained. They seemed to be looking through and beyond the boys who quick stepped by at platoon front.

Two Interpretations Seen.

A pacifist might have judged that the people were condemning even a hint of war; a patriot that they were facing with soberness and solemnity what may be a great national crisis.

Back of the hospital company, with its litters, came half a dozen big automobiles, filled with recruiting parties. The officers and men were accompanied by pretty chorus girls from attractions playing at the local theaters. Some of these rosy Amazons wore army overcoats and waved alluring flags at the likely young fellows along the way.

What real enthusiasm was displayed—if enthusiasm be measured by noise—was roused during the morning by the efforts of a fife and drum corps of old men, in the uniforms of the Grand Army, who rode about the loop in a wagon advertising the meeting of the evening.

The old boys were wrinkled and gray, but they knew perfectly well how to shrill out "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching," so that crowds quickly gathered about them and clapped their hands for more.

Seamen Welcomed by All.

The splendid big band from the naval training station at Great Lakes, followed by detachments of red cheeked, trim apprentice seamen, presently followed the state infantrymen in their march. To this inland city seamen are still a novelty, and the boys who are to help man the battleships were welcomed everywhere with hand clapping.

Early in the afternoon the gray armored cars of the Northwestern Military academy came slipping through the loop after their run from Lake Geneva. Spattered with mud and manned by cadets in gray uniforms they somehow seemed to suggest, however dimly, the machinery of modern war and the crowds watched them—without applause—as long as they were in sight.

As the day grew on it became evident that the spirit of the people was being more deeply stirred. At least it found freer expression. Late in the afternoon when the stalwart troopers of Col. Foreman's First Illinois cavalry rode through the loop there were even scattered cheers and bursts of hand clapping to welcome them.

Cavalry Hard and Fit.

They, too, with their experiences on the border behind them, sat their horses like soldiers and looked hard and fit. At the rear of the battalion came the machine guns, carried on mule back, and the regimental field kitchen, perhaps the only convenience of its kind in the whole armed forces of the United States.

That the spirit of the crowds grew deeper and stronger as the day went on was shown by the scenes about some of the recruiting automobiles. One of them, carrying the banner of the First regiment—"first in name and first in active service"—drew up at the corner of State and Madison streets. Two buglers sounded their shrill call. The crowd, already thick, quickly became denser.

"Traitor" Stills a Pacifist.

A young man in the center began to argue against enlistment. In an instant three others—none of them in uniform—were shaking their fingers in his face.

"You're a traitor!" cried one. "You ought to be lynched!" shouted another. The protestant slipped away, frightened, into the crowd, which quickly swallowed him up. Two of the three others got into the waiting machine and rode off to the armory to enlist.

Even earlier in the day, when the soldiers of the First were marching, their martial air so affected the leader of a crowd of young men on the curb that he called out:

"That's what we all ought to be doing. Come on!"

And three of the party jumped into one of the automobiles reserved for recruits. By 5 o'clock Col. Sanborn reported that the First regiment had enlisted 150 men during the day.

Boy Scouts Follow Cavalry.

It was part of the reasoned confusion of the day that after the cavalry had clanked by, long troops of little boys in khaki—members of the United States Boy Scouts—should march smartly through the loop, while the tired crowds smiled and waved their hands at them.

It was not a day of noise and wild enthusiasm. There were no light hearted cheers, no rowdy outbursts. One got the impression rather of a people groping their way, facing what may be a great crisis in the national life, soberly and with something like awe.

Old men say that during the time from the first election of Lincoln to the firing on Fort Sumter the country went through just such a period of doubt, uncertainty, and silent, grim facing of what the unknow future might develop.

AEROPLANES COMING HERE FOR SCHOOL

DEFENSE TALKS TRANSFERRED TO AUDITORIUM

Ticket holders for the National Security league meeting on Tuesday evening are warned that this meeting has been transferred from Orchestra hall to the Auditorium theater. It is further announced there will be no meeting in Orchestra hall on Tuesday night.

The announcement is made that the meeting will be in the Auditorium so that none will seek entrance to Orchestra hall, by a misinterpretation of the plans.

Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, Henry L. Stimson, former secretary of war, and Frederick R. Coudert of New York will speak in the interest of universal military service.

VOPICKA WOULD GO TO WAR FOR NATION'S HONOR

"I would go to war if it was for the glory and defense of my government or to defend the glory of humanity," said Charles J. Vopicka, former United States minister to Serbia, Roumania, and Bulgaria, yesterday in his first public address since his return to this country from the warring countries. He spoke before the members of the Irish Fellowship club at their weekly luncheon in the Hotel Sherman.

Mr. Vopicka in his address did not talk on the German situation. He said, however, that during his stay in Berlin he was given a banquet by the Germans and treated kindly.

Aero Club of Illinois Offers Men and Plans

At a luncheon held yesterday by the Aero Club of Illinois the members unanimously voted to send a letter to President Wilson donating their machines and services to the government in the event of a war.

There are 103 members of the club now flying in Memphis, Tenn., and they are contemplating a flight to Chicago in the near future, and will recruit men for the aerial service for the government.

Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, U. S. N., will address the club at a luncheon next week.

Man Who Shot Self to Foil Slow Death Succeeds

Last Wednesday doctors told Tony Falkenburg, 906 North Marshfield avenue, that he had about two months to live. He went home and told his brother, Charles, that he intended to prove the doctors were wrong. He got a revolver, went into the back yard, and shot himself twice. Last night he died at St. Elizabeth's hospital.

25 LEAVE TODAY FOR CAPITAL TO FIGHT WAR CALL

'Protest Special' Is Arranged For by German-Americans.

When the "protest special" leaves Chicago Sunday morning for Washington, D. C., it will bear about twenty-five German-Americans who will make a concerted effort to persuade the Wilson administration to abandon its announced determination to enter into war on the side of the allies.

The train will leave over the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at 10:45 o'clock and will arrive in Washington Monday morning at 8:20. The members of the party will get into touch with Louis P. Lorchner, head of the Henry Ford "peace" expedition, whose present headquarters is in Washington. The best steps for presenting their plea to congress then will be decided upon.

Three Leading Spirits.

All day Saturday the organization of the party was carried on by three of the moving spirits. These are Gustave Jacobson of the local office of the Hamburg-American Steamship company; Rudolph Seifert, cigar dealer at 80 West Washington street, and Julius Goldzier, attorney, with offices at 133 West Washington street.

In addition to these the party will include George A. Schmidt, V. von Puttkamer, the Rev. Schubert, the Rev. Russ, Michael F. Girten, Ferdinand Walther, Mrs. Karl Beuhl, Emanuel Gall, Ernst Kiehl, Jacob Willig, Gustave Carus, and others, ten of whom will come from La Salle. Each person will pay his own fare.

Counter Move Started.

In opposition to the campaign is a movement launched in Chicago by Ellery C. Stowell, a prominent New York attorney and reputed to be a world authority on diplomacy and international law. By means of a telegram sent to numerous Chicago attorneys Mr. Stowell called upon Chicago to send a special delegation to Washington to demand the assertion of staunch Americanism. His telegram reads:

"Various cities have begun preparations for special trains to reach Washington Monday, to confer with representatives and urge immediate action against Germany, each passenger to pay his own fare. Organize a special train, if possible. Word from Washington makes this advisable."

TRAIN HITS AUTO; TWO WOMEN AND BABY DIE

Two women and a baby were killed last night on "Death Crossing" just out of Hammond, Ind., and Arthur Watson, 8138 Harper avenue, driver of the car, was badly injured when his motor was struck by a Baltimore and Ohio passenger train.

The women killed were Mrs. Anna Watson and her 10 months old baby and Mrs. James Watson, sister-in-law of the Watsons. The Watsons and Mrs. Wallace had been taking dinner in the Hammond Beach inn, it being the opening night. They were diving home around 7 o'clock when the collision occurred.

Watson, who regained consciousness, told Dr. H. Timms of St. Margaret's hospital in Hammond he had looked carefully before emerging upon the railway tracks, but had failed to see the train that struck him. There are tracks of a half dozen railroads at the point and there is no watchman nor gate.

The machine driven by Watson, which was a small one, was completely destroyed, several of the parts being strewed over the right of way for more than 300 feet. Mrs. Watson, Mrs. Wallace, and the baby were killed instantly. The bodies were removed to undertaking establishments in Hammond.

No Limit, Apparently, to U.S. Shipbuilding Capacity

Philadelphia, Pa., March 31.—Despite a scarcity of labor, both skilled and unskilled, and the large requirements of the United States government, American shipbuilders yesterday assured the agents of the Cunard Steamship company they could meet the company's specifications for 114 passenger steamers at an approximate cost of $120,000,000.

ASKS AMERICA TO GIVE BILLION TO HELP FRANCE

Washington, D. C., March 31.—[Special.]—A bill to have the United States extend financial assistance to France to the extent of one billion dollars has been prepared by Congressman Montague of Virginia, former governor of the Old Dominion, and will be introduced by him in the house of representatives when congress meets on Monday.

Mr. Montague will introduce two bills on the subject. One proposes to extend to France on behalf of the people of the United States a gift of one billion dollars. The other would make France a gift of five hundred million and a loan of five hundred million.

Garibaldi at 70 Cables Offer to Join U. S. Army

ROME, March 31.—Gen. Garibaldi, son of Italy's liberator, wants to aid the United States against Germany "anywhere in Europe." Though 70 years of age and forced to use a crutch, Garibaldi's fire is undiminished. He cabled recently to President Wilson, formally offering his services to America. Today, through American Ambassador Page, the general received the president's formal thanks for his offer.

Calls for List of Men as Officers in Emergency

Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Barry, commanding the central department of the United States army, yesterday received instructions from Washington directing that a list be kept of applicants for commissions in the officers' reserve corps whose qualifications are below requirements as to education and military knowledge. These men are to be held for call in case of extreme necessity.

Anti-Militarists Urge Congress to Avoid War

Washington, D. C., March 31.—The American Union Against Militarism sent a letter to each member of congress today urging that there be no declaration of war against Germany.

PRESIDENT GETS MANY PLEDGES OF PEOPLE'S AID

Wilson May Make His War Address to Congress on Tuesday.

Washington, D. C., March 31.—Preliminary to a declaration that a state of war exists between Germany and the United States—expected to follow close upon the assembling of congress in extraordinary session on Monday—the government today bent every effort to hurry eleventh hour preparedness measures, acting on the proposition that war is an imminent certainty.

The White House was impressed by messages received with the feeling that a wave of war sentiment is sweeping the country. The messages brought resolutions adopted at patriotic massmeetings in different states, and there were reports from returning senators and representatives that the nation stands ready to back up the president.

Wilson May Speak Tuesday.

Predictions were made at the capitol that the house will be organized promptly so that the president may deliver his message making recommendations for congressional action. Unless there should be an unlooked for change Mr. Wilson will speak on Tuesday.

News of the sinking of additional ships by German submarines and the resulting loss of more American lives increased the tension but slightly.

Call More State Troops.

Secretary of War Baker conferred with the president and afterwards announced that more than 7,000 additional national guardsmen had been ordered out for police duty in different states. He also said that complete plans for raising a larger army had been drawn up at the war department. There are now about 50,000 national guardsmen already called for federal duty.

President Wilson has almost finished his message to congress. He remained in his study much of the day, and also was in close touch with the war, navy, and treasury departments regarding preparedness plans.

Plans of pacifists for attempting to keep congress from declaring a state of war attracted some attention, but most of the reports to the administration indicated that the nation as a whole believes that the time for war has come.

A statement today by Chairman Stone of the senate foreign relations committee that he would vote against war, but would support the government in any policy decided upon, was the most noticeable anti-war development.

Flags Seen Everywhere.

The advent of the "war congress" is being heralded by patriotic demonstrations of every kind in Washington.

Thousands of flags fly from the homes and public buildings in the capital. Many of those fluttering from government structures and the taller buildings are emblazoned in the light of giant searchlights which are shot from nearby roofs.

Hundreds of men and women on "a pilgrimage of patriotism" are coming to town from every part of the nation to stage a counter demonstration to that planned by pacifists in an effort to avert the war.

For the first time in the history of any nation a woman will vote in deciding peace or hostilities for her country. Miss Jeanette Rankin holds the responsibility for speaking the voice of American womanhood. Her vote on the war resolution has aroused the curiosity of the country.

Fleet of U-Boat Chasers Reaches Eastern Seaboard

New York, March 31.—[Special.]—Thirty-five submarine chasers arrived from Detroit this morning at the yards of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad in Hoboken. The utmost secrecy was maintained with regard to their destination.

MEN WHO TOOK HAY OATH GIVEN SUNDAY AT HOME

First Infantry Officers Are Kept Busy by Work of Recruiting.

Col. J. B. Sanborn and Lieut. Col. James M. Eddy of the First Illinois infantry were unable to appear in the march of their regiment yesterday owing to the press of business incident to recruiting.

"It will not take long for the regiment to get on a war footing," said Col. Sanborn, taking time to review the situation in the work of recruiting. "We have been averaging seventy acceptances a day. All the recruits are being given the Hay oath. We are doing everything possible to get men, and we think our average is good. All the commissioned officers of the regiment have taken the Hay oath. Only about 15 per cent of the men have failed so far to take this oath."

No Mustering In Order.

Col. Sanborn issued an order at night permitting all men who had taken the Hay oath to go home until tomorrow morning. All others will be detained at the armory for guard duty. All noncommissioned officers who have declined to take the Hay oath will revert to their positions as privates.

Company D, First infantry, in command of Capt. H. W. Smith, was detailed to guard duty last night.

The First infantry band will give a free concert in the armory at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The guardsmen will be the guests of the Garrick theater management tomorrow night. All guardsmen will attend in full uniform.

Meetings in High Schools.

Capt. Irving G. McCann of the First infantry said he conferred with Superintendent of Schools John D. Shoop and that the latter has arranged to have a massmeeting in one of the high schools Monday or Tuesday night to interest high school students in enlistment.

He said the board of directors of the Young Men's Christian association has granted the infantry permission to open a recruiting office in the Y. M. C. A. hotel, South Wabash avenue and East Eighth street.

War orders were not confined to Chicago regiments, as evidenced by orders to Company D, Sixth infantry, to abandon its quarters, 1118 West Lake street, Oak Park, for "somewhere in Illinois."

PREPARING AT SPRINGFIELD.

Springfield, Ill., March 31.—Special train equipment was rushed out of Springfield tonight, carrying tentage and quartermaster supplies for the Illinois regiments that were ordered into the federal service.

All of the tents and camp paraphernalia have been kept at the Springfield arsenal in readiness for an expected general mobilization of the Illinois regiments.

Officers of the quartermasters' corps made a final survey of the state fair grounds and of Camp Lincoln, in conformity with Gen. Barry's orders, looking forward to the possible use of these sites for mobilization camps. All is in readiness, Col. H. O. Tripp said.

A bill will be offered tomorrow in the general assembly, making an emergency appropriation of $1,000,000 for mobilization purposes.

Ready to Serve Nation; Pay Second Consideration

The young man came yesterday to the navy recruiting station, 130 North Fifth avenue, learned that he would have to serve four years, asked many questions about the perils and trials of a navy at war, found the medical examiner was out on duty, so said:

"I'll come back Monday morning and enlist." Then he walked down the hall. Returning soon, he asked:

"Do I get any pay for all this?"

ALL SHOULD SERVE

Capt. Moffett Asks for Recruits, but Says It's a Shame to the Nation That Service Must Be Solicited.

Capt. W. A. Moffett, Great Lakes Naval station commandant, last night issued a call to Chicago to "get behind the navy and universal service."

"I have faith in Chicago," said the commandant, "and I know that the city will respond nobly to the task before it. Chicago should do its best to demonstrate that a large portion of the country resents the fact that congress failed to provide a navy strong enough to protect this country in time of need.

"Every man who wants to see duty in two months' time should join the navy.

"Chicago can raise a mighty voice right away for universal service. I know that in this emergency universal service can do no good right away, but if congress could be pulled into line a universal service act would put the fear of God into this nation.

"It is a disgrace to think that the navy has to go out and appeal for men to enlist in the service of their country. In my mind the continuance of a nation rests, if it is bordered by seas, upon the ability of the navy to protect it; if the navy of that country perishes, the country perishes with it."

PUBLIC HANGING OF VILLA REBELS ECHO OF BATTLE

Chihuahua City, Mexico, March 31.—Seventy rebel prisoners taken during Villa's attempt to capture this city yesterday were hanged publicly today as a warning to the Villa element of the population.

While the city remains protected by a cordon of infantry, reports have been brought to headquarters by cavalry patrols that Villa's scattered main forces are concentrating at some western point.

They were overtaken on their retreat yesterday by a force under Gen. Favilla and lost sixty killed. This brings Villa's losses to about 900 killed, wounded, and prisoners.

A "TIN SOLDIER" KILLS HECKLER AND ENDS LIFE

Kansas City, Mo., March 31.—Leslie McGrath, Missouri national guardsman, who last night shot and killed J. Presley Erganbright, because Erganbright called him a "tin soldier," committed suicide today by shooting himself through the heart.

Two notes were found on the dead militiaman's body. One was written to his captain and read: "Have Bill Bateman blow taps over me, please."

The other was addressed to his mother. It read: "Good-by to all, I am doing my duty."

PLAN TO COMBAT PACIFIST PARADE

Washington, D. C., March 31.—[Special.]—Pacifists of the Emergency Peace federation who are planning a demonstration at the capitol Monday are to meet opposition in their lobbying activities from a group of anti-pacifists organizing in New York under the name of "The Pilgrimage of Patriotism."

Though the plan to invade the capital was a spontaneous reaction of the pacifists' plan to stage a demonstration, it is stated the principal object of the anti-pacifists is to show President Wilson there are more who will stand by what he says than there are those who will oppose any warlike moves.

New York Fur Sale Ends; Trades Total $2,500,000

New York, March 31.—Sales amounting to nearly $2,500,000 were made at the fur auction that ended here today, it was announced at the close of business. The prices on nearly all varieties of furs averaged higher than at the January sale.

HOW ENGLAND HOUSES TROOPS LESSON TO U. S.

technical skill is impossible without proper arms and equipment, most important are the leaders, without whom it is difficult to attain high standards of skill or enthusiasm.

MEN'S QUARTERS PROBLEM.

England first encountered the problem of quartering its men in training, and this undoubtedly will be a matter for early solution in the United States. In the British isles at the outbreak of the war there were available accommodations in barracks for about 175,000 single men.

These accommodations were immediately increased to 262,000 by transforming the married quarters, the women being sent to their homes, and by utilizing accessory buildings. I doubt whether there is similar barracks accommodations in all of the army posts in the United States at the present time.

As reservists and first territorial forces began arriving, England's mass of troops numbered perhaps 800,000 and had to be housed in hired buildings and billets, and as such conditions had been beyond all previous contemplation an entirely new machinery of quartering committees, boards for the assessment of rents, values, and damages, and new rules and regulations had to be constructed off hand.

Delays and difficulties arising from this shortsightedness could be eliminated now in the United States by preparation of plans so that organization machinery could be put into immediate operation when necessity arises.

England found many objections to the housing of troops in training in hired buildings or ordinary billets, with or without subsistence, and frequently it was found that assembling of men from billets scattered over wide areas and at great distances from training centers made the system almost prohibitive.

England found the only satisfactory method of housing the large numbers that had to be dealt with was in huts built in camps near the training grounds. This decision was reached during the first week of the war and the first plans were ready by Aug. 14, 1914.

Build Huts for 500,000.

The first proposal was to build huts for 500,000 men, but this accommodation was increased later to nearly 1,000,000, which did not include the construction of large establishments, store sheds, aeroplane sheds, hospital huts, and rifle ranges.

Gas and electric light, drainage, and telephones, and sometimes in remote districts entirely new plants had to be set up for these purposes. The hauling of heavy building material necessitated the extensive repairing of all roads and the construction of many new ones and special railway lines had to be laid to all the larger camps.

Camps All Over England.

It was almost a year before huts to hold 750,000 men had been built and completely equipped. These huts were located in every part of England. Vast uninhabited moorlands were transformed into hut communities, with new roads, railways, pumping establishments, power stations, and accommodations for as many as 40,000 men.

Even at this date difficulties of housing new armies is not entirely overcome, as there are still numbers of troops that have to be accommodated by the unsatisfactory methods of billets, but in the main the problem of quartering in chief training centers had been practically solved during the first year of the war.

If the United States contemplates the organization and training of large forces, either for expeditionary purposes or home defense, the war department may well look to the experiences of Great Britain in this all essential matter.

Federal Banks Increase Reserves.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 31.—Total reserves of federal reserve banks increased approximately $13,000,000 during the week just closed.

DETAILED PLANS COMPLETE FOR RAISING ARMY

War Department Chiefs Ready with Data for Congress.

Washington, D. C., March 31.—[Special.]—The war department is ready to furnish detailed plans for the raising of whatever forces congress may authorize when it convenes on Monday.

In preparation for the call for a largely increased army which congress is expected to authorize a special board of army officers, consisting of Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff; Maj. Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, assistant chief of staff; Brig. Gen. Joseph C. Kuhn, director of the army war college, and Brig. Gen. Enoch H. Crowder, judge advocate general, has been holding daily sessions for more than a week.

No announcement of the details of the several plans has been made, but there is a growing belief that the program includes the immediate adoption of some form of compulsory military training which would serve for both the present emergency and for the future.

Want Universal Service.

A great volume of correspondence—both letters and telegrams—is pouring into the White House, the war department, and congress from all sections of the country, urging immediate passage of universal training legislation. Reports daily reaching Washington indicate a decided change of public sentiment toward this form of conscription.

For three hours today the council of national defense, with the advisory commission, consisting of men prominent in business and industry, considered plans for the general mobilization of the national resources to meet the pending emergency. Definite recommendations for the coördination of all resources required to meet any eventuality which may come were gone over in detail.

Following the meeting it was announced that the full council and advisory commission will meet again Tuesday and that the members of the commission will remain in Washington until congress has acted definitely and finally determined the policy which the United States will pursue.

Many Recruits for Navy.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels announced that March was a banner month in recruiting for the navy. Reports show a total of 4,474 recruits for the month, representing a net gain of 3,628 men.

This afternoon there was a total of 62,667 enlisted men in the navy, against 59,039 on Feb. 28.

About fifty bids were opened in the office of Rear Admiral D. W. Taylor, chief of the bureau of construction and repair, for the construction of 110 foot submarine chasers.

GERMAN PLANS KNOWN LONG

Washington, D. C., March 31.—Secretary Zimmermann's speech to the reichstag charging the United States with responsibility for war if it comes brought forth today for the first time official admission that the United States government knew in the middle of January that the ruthless submarine decree was to be issued and that after its issuance three days were allowed to elapse to give Germany opportunity to modify or repeal it before the severance of diplomatic relations was announced.

Count von Bernstorff, it was stated by department officials, knew of the impending decree two weeks before it was issued and made every effort with his government to have it repealed.

Officials here are much aroused by Germany's continued attempt to convict the United States of desiring war and they intend to show that every possible opportunity was given Germany to avoid it.

CHICAGO ASKED TO FURNISH 1,800 MEN FOR NAVY

Recruiting Offices Make Special Effort to Fill Quota.

GAINING

Recruiting for Week and Month Much Larger than Usual.

RECRUITING into the regular army through the Chicago office last week was 200 per cent greater than for the best week in months, according to information given out yesterday at the station, 526 South State street. At the recruiting office of the marines a block south it was said that seventy men accepted in a week broke every record since the days of the Spanish-American war.

The figures on army recruiting for the month were withheld. Other services were recruited as follows in March:

Navy	200
Marines	143
Naval reserve [active one week....]	50

Twenty-four counties in northern Illinois are expected to supply 1,800 men for the United States navy in the next twenty days. This is the Chicago district's share of the 38,500 men to be enlisted by April 20. Recruiting offices were opened at once in a number of factories and office buildings.

Telegram from Admiral.

Lieut. L. M. Stevens at the navy recruiting station, 130 North Fifth street, yesterday received the following telegram, signed by Rear Admiral L. C. Palmer, chief of the bureau of navigation:

"Thirty-eight thousand five hundred additional men are needed immediately to fill the navy's emergency complement. Considering the population of your district, its diversified industries, and its national importance, I have assigned your station a quota of 1,800 men to be recruited by April 20.

"From your estimate of the people and their keen interest in the national defense, can I count upon this number? I believe your district is alive to the urgent need for more men and now is the time to show in a practical way that the people of your district want a powerful navy.

Will Bear Brunt of Fighting.

"Armed guards, composed only of naval officers and American bluejackets, are assigned to every American ship that sails for the war zone, and in any emergency the American bluejacket will bear the brunt of the fighting. The immediate need is for bluejackets, and until the navy's quota is filled you will spare no effort to get recruits, as it is of first and most urgent importance.

"After the navy's complement is filled you will continue your work in assisting the marine corps and army to recruit. Although a spirit of patriotism will be the guiding motive in actuating young men to enlist, do not fail to inform all applicants of the material benefits the navy offers in the way of pay, advancement, and vocational training. Enlist the services of all patriotic Americans in this vitally important work.

"The bureau expects you to use your ingenuity in meeting the conditions outlined in the telegram. Confer with business men, patriotic organizations, and others."

One in Three Accepted.

An average of one man of every three applying for enlistment in army, navy, and marine corps is being accepted. The most rigid examination is for marines; next comes the navy. These services both demand full citizenship, while the army accepts men who have their first citizenship papers.

"It's easier to put a boat out of fix than a battlefield," is the way one recruiting officer explained the difference in requirements. Physical requirements are very high in all branches.

"If the big thing gets to going good we'll take them all," said Maj. Vincent, artillery, I. N. G. "England has had to do it. If a man's got flat feet we can put him on a horse. And if he wears glasses—well, the Germany army nearly all wears glasses, and we've heard that they can scrap some."

As an incentive to patriotism a life size bronze statue of George Washington has been placed on the steps of the Art institute. The statue is a replica of the Houdon sculpture which stands in the legislative hall at Richmond, Va., and shows the "Father of His Country" in a pose of answering "Here!" to the call of 1776.

The Misses Letty Neuman and Marie Brown are shown here adding to yesterday's patriotic event by draping the statue with the stars and stripes.

SENATOR KNOX TO BACK WILSON; WILL GO LIMIT

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 31.—Senator Philander C. Knox tonight publicly pledged his support to President Wilson, regardless of whether the president's future policy will be that of armed neutrality or a "war of aggression to redress the wrongs we have sustained."

The statement was made in the course of an address which Mr. Knox delivered at a great patriotic meeting in Exposition Music hall.

"Believing as I do," Mr. Knox said, "that the president's recommendation to congress will be that congress should declare that the acts of Germany in attacking American ships and destroying American lives are acts of war, in consequence of which we should assume the defensive attitude of armed neutrality, or that they constitute such a grave offense against our rights that it demands a war of aggression to redress the wrongs we have sustained, I intend to support him in either choice."

Boy Scout Exposition Will Be Held in May

Arrangements are being perfected for the opening of the first exposition to be given under the auspices of the Chicago branch of the Boy Scouts of America. The exposition, in which 2,000 boys will take part, will be held May 4 and 5 at the Second Regiment armory, 2725 West Madison street.

The demonstrations will include bridge building, the operation of wireless apparatus, signaling, first aid, woodcraft, and the erection of camps. An immense drum and bugle corps is being drilled daily.

Special interest is being manifested in the exposition by the boys because of their probable service in connection with the army in war. The proceeds of the gate will be used for the equipment and enlargement to 15,000 members.

BERLIN DENIES WHITLOCK WAS EVER CAPTIVE

AMSTERDAM, March 31.—Official denial was received from Berlin today that the German government had ever violated the diplomatic immunity of American Minister Brand Whitlock at Brussels. It was asserted that Whitlock will continue to be treated as minister until he leaves and that all obligations to the American relief commission will be strictly observed.

REBUKE

Women of National Civic Federation Make Scathing Attack on Emergency Peace Clan, Calling It Body of "Moral Cowards."

NEW YORK, March 31.—[Special.]—A scathing attack by women was made public today on the newspaper advertisements of the Emergency Peace federation appealing to women to oppose war on the ground that it will endanger the lives of their husbands, sons, and brothers.

The rebuke was contained in a statement issued by the preparedness committee of the New York and New Jersey chapters of the women's department of the National Civic federation. It denounced the pacifists as "moral cowards" and declared that American women will not now "play the coward's part nor for safety's sake sulk behind the flag of internationalism."

The statement of the women's committe said:

"The pacifist, whether a man or a woman, is a moral coward, because he is a pacifist.

"The road from pacifism to disloyalty and pro-Germanism is a short one; at one end is cowardice and at the other treason. The call of the pacifist to resist resistance is a call to betray our country to the Teutonic enemy."

Spain Offers to Carry Relief Supplies to Syria

Washington, D. C., March 31.—An offer by King Alfonso of Spain to have Spanish ships carry relief supplies to Syria and release the American naval vessels Caesar and Des Moines, now war bound at Alexandria, from that duty has been accepted by the United States.

NAVY LEAGUE'S WOMEN DRIVERS AID RECRUITING

Start on Duty Today—To Make Survey of Soldiers' Families.

Women drivers of the emergency automobile corps of the women's section of the Navy league will start actual service today. They will assist the work of recruiting for the navy and will aid in the investigation of families of soldiers and sailors reported to the Red Cross to be in want.

Miss Florence Spofford, chief of the drivers, has assigned the following women to the Red Cross work: Mrs. M. M. Fay, Miss Rosamond Goodrich, Miss Grace L. Smith, Miss Ellen Henderson, Miss Orel Agar, Mrs. J. P. Henley, and Miss Marjorie Pierce.

Women to Drive Recruits.

All recruits for the navy who use the outlying recruiting stations have before them the prospect of a ride behind a certified driver of the women's automobile corps. Arrangements have been made to have automobiles at all the recruiting stations and the men who want to enlist will be driven to the navy headquarters, where they will be examined by Lieut. L. M. Stevens, and formally enlisted.

More than twenty automobiles will be assigned to this service. Each car will be accompanied by a recruiting officer from Lieut. Stevens' headquarters. The cars will be decorated with Navy league pennants, and khaki uniforms will be worn by the women drivers.

Thanks Mrs. Countiss.

Mrs. Frederick Countiss, chairman of the women's section of the Navy league, received the following telegram from W. H. Stayton of Washington, D. C., executive secretary of the Navy league:

"The Navy league thanks you for your splendid work in forming the corps of emergency automobile drivers. We earnestly congratulate you on the success of this movement and will be grateful if you will keep in touch with naval recruiting officers. The crisis concerning recruiting in the navy is as great an emergency as now faces the country."

"Chicago Day" will be observed at the women's reserve recruiting station at 60 East Madison street tomorrow. Mrs. J. Ogden Armour will be in charge. Yesterday was Evanston Day, and many women of Evanston signed up to do some sort of service in case of need. Miss Dorothy Howell and Miss Margaret Macy of the Northwestern Daily of Northwestern university want to do their bit.

WAR MOVEMENT DETAILS GIVEN IN STATEMENTS

Reports Issued in Various Capitals Tell Results of Fighting.

FRENCH FRONT

BRITISH.

LONDON, March 31.—Hendecourt was captured by our troops yesterday evening. Considerable progress has since been made eastward of the village and a few additional prisoners and machine guns fell into our hands.

We also gained possession of the villages of Marteville, Vermand, and Soyecourt, with little opposition from the enemy, and forced his troops to retire from St. Emilie under the fire of our artillery. We then occupied the village.

Today our advance was resumed along the valley of the Cologne river and the villages of Jeancourt, Hervilly, and Heudicourt were captured by our troops.

Farther north we carried two hostile posts in the neighborhood of Ecoust-St. Mein, in spite of considerable resistance. Other posts held by the enemy west of Henin-Sur-Cojeul were rushed by a small party of our troops, who, after killing or capturing the whole garrison, withdrew with their prisoners and a hostile machine gun.

We carried out successful raids this morning and during the night northeast of Neuville-St. Vaast, east of Loos and north of Ypres. Several dugouts and machine guns were destroyed and prisoners were taken. Early this morning a small hostile raiding party in the neighborhood of Neuville-St. Vaast failed to reach our trenches.

AVIATION.

Successful work was carried out by our airplanes yesterday in spite of unfavorable weather. One hostile machine was driven down out of control; two of our machines are missing.

FRENCH.

PARIS, March 31.—North and south of the Oise there was slight artillery activity.

North of Soissons the enemy directed two counter attacks against the positions that we occupied northeast of Vregny, but both attempts were stopped short by our fire.

On the left bank of the Meuse our artillery shelled the German organizations on Hill 304. The day was comparatively calm on the rest of the front.

AVIATION.

German airplanes last evening dropped bombs in the region of Dunkirk. Two civilians were killed and three wounded.

DAY STATEMENT.

Between the Somme and the Oise, in the sector of Benay, there was spirited artillery fighting. South of the Allette we attacked with success several positions of the enemy on the front between Neuville Sur Margival and Vregny. Our troops made important progress east of this line and brilliantly carried several points of support, notwithstanding the energetic defense of the Germans.

In the Champagne the Germans redoubled their efforts against the positions which we recaptured yesterday west of Maisons de Champagne. In the evening and during the night the Germans made five violent counter attacks. These assaults were broken up by our machine guns and curtains of fire and the enemy suffered very heavy losses. The number of prisoners taken was eighty, of whom two are officers.

In Alsace, near Ammertzweiller, we checked a surprise attack of the enemy. We dispersed German patrols in the region of Pfetterhausen and took prisoners.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, March 31.—Western war theater: A night advance of English detachments on both sides of the wood (Bois d'Havrincourt) failed after a hand to hand fight. Lively artillery efforts accompanied the attack by British battalions on both sides of the Peronne-Fins road. North of Metz-En-Couture the enemy was repulsed. Farther south he arrived at Heudicourt and St. Emilie.

French forces in engagements northeast of Soissons suffered heavy losses from our fire. In the Champagne there was tenacious fighting for the heights south of Ripont. On the ridges of this strip the French attack was repulsed in the center, but his storming detachments entered our trenches for some hours. The trenches were again cleared of the enemy by the thrusting detachments of the division that stood there and which was equally tenacious in attack and resistance.

A combat with the British near Heinin-Sur-Cojeul, southeast of Arras, resulted favorably for us.

In attacks delivered on the plateau of Vregny, northeast of Soissons, the French suffered sanguinary defeat.

BELGIAN.

PARIS, March 31.—The Belgian artillery carried out effective fires against German organizations at Dixmude and Het Sas. There was fighting also with trench guns.

TURKISH FRONT

BRITISH.

LONDON, March 31.—Since March 19 our forces operating to the north and northeast of Bagdad have been actively engaged in pressing back the enemy troops still remaining in this area and generally securing and consolidating the positions.

In the course of their converging movement toward Khanikin, on the Persion border 100 miles north of Bagdad, our own and advancing Russian columns encountered considerable difficulties, the former due to the number of small canals and rivers, most of which had to be bridged and the latter, owing to snow and the devastation of the country by the retreating Turks and the formidable obstacle offered by the position at Paitak pass. In this direction considerable Turkish forces were encountered by our troops.

The enemy has opposed strenuous resistance, in the course of which we inflicted severe losses upon him and captured a considerable number of prisoners besides quantities of foodstuffs and supplies.

On March 23 we occupied Shahroban [Sheraban], after lively fighting on the outskirts of the town.

On the 25th there was severe fighting on the Diala river about Jebel Hamrin [a range of hills stretching north of the Diala river to the Tigris] and in the direction of Kizil Robat [20 miles south of Khanikin] the enemy being heavily punished.

Deltawah and Sindiyah, rich and productive areas some thirty-five miles north of Bagdad, are occupied by our forces who here are confronted by the remnants of the enemy defeated at Kut-el-Amara, which have been reinforced by fresh units.

Fallujah [Kalaat Felujah], thirty-six miles west of Bagdad on the Euphrates, was occupied March 19, the Turkish force offering little or no opposition and retreating in the direction of Hit [sixty miles to the northwest].

TURKISH.

CONSTANTINOPLE, via Berlin, March 30.—In Persia the situation remains unchanged.

Tigris front—Our troops operating on the left bank of the Tigris river yesterday delivered a counter attack and compelled a hostile detachment to retreat, the enemy suffering severe losses. We captured 180 prisoners belonging to the Third Lahore division, two machine guns, three rapid fire guns, and a large quantity of hand grenades and other ammunition.

A hostile squadron, composed of three torpedo boats, two starting ships for airplanes, one auxiliary cruiser, and three seaplanes, was discovered in the Black sea, twenty-seven miles from the coast, on March 26. The seaplanes dropped bombs without success in an open field west of Terkos lake. Our fliers dropped bombs on the hostile ships with good effect. Also in an aerial conflict our aviators were victorious and returned unharmed.

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, March 31.—Caucasian front—There were scouting reconnaissances and rifle firing.

ROUMANIAN FRONT

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, March 31.—There were reconnaissances by scouts and reciprocal firing. Our artillery successfully bombarded German monitors which were endeavoring to approach Galatz.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, March 31.—Front of Archduke Joseph—In the Bystritza valley during advances into Russian trenches east of Girlibaba and south of Meste Canesti more than 200 men were taken prisoner and several machine guns were captured.

The situation is unchanged on the front occupied by the army group of Field Marshal von Mackensen.

RUSSIAN FRONT

GERMAN.

BERLIN, March 31.—Front of Prince Leopold—In some sectors, especially on the Shara, Stokhod, and Zlota Lipa rivers, the activity of the Russian artillery increased. Raiding detachments that advanced against our positions were repulsed. Our own enterprises south of Vilna and northeast of Novo-Grodek had a favorable development. Several blockhouses were blown up and seventy-five prisoners and five mine throwers were brought in.

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, March 31.—Western front—Minor German attacks north of Illukst and in the region of Postavy were repulsed. On the rest of the front there were scouting reconnaissances and rifle firing.

MACEDONIAN FRONT

FRENCH.

PARIS, March 31.—The day of March 30 was relatively quiet on the front of the allied armies in the east. Contrary to the assertions contained in a Bulgarian communique, our troops have maintained all their positions in the region of Lake Presba and checked on March 29 a rather feeble enemy attack.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, March 31.—Quiet conditions prevail on the Macedonian front.

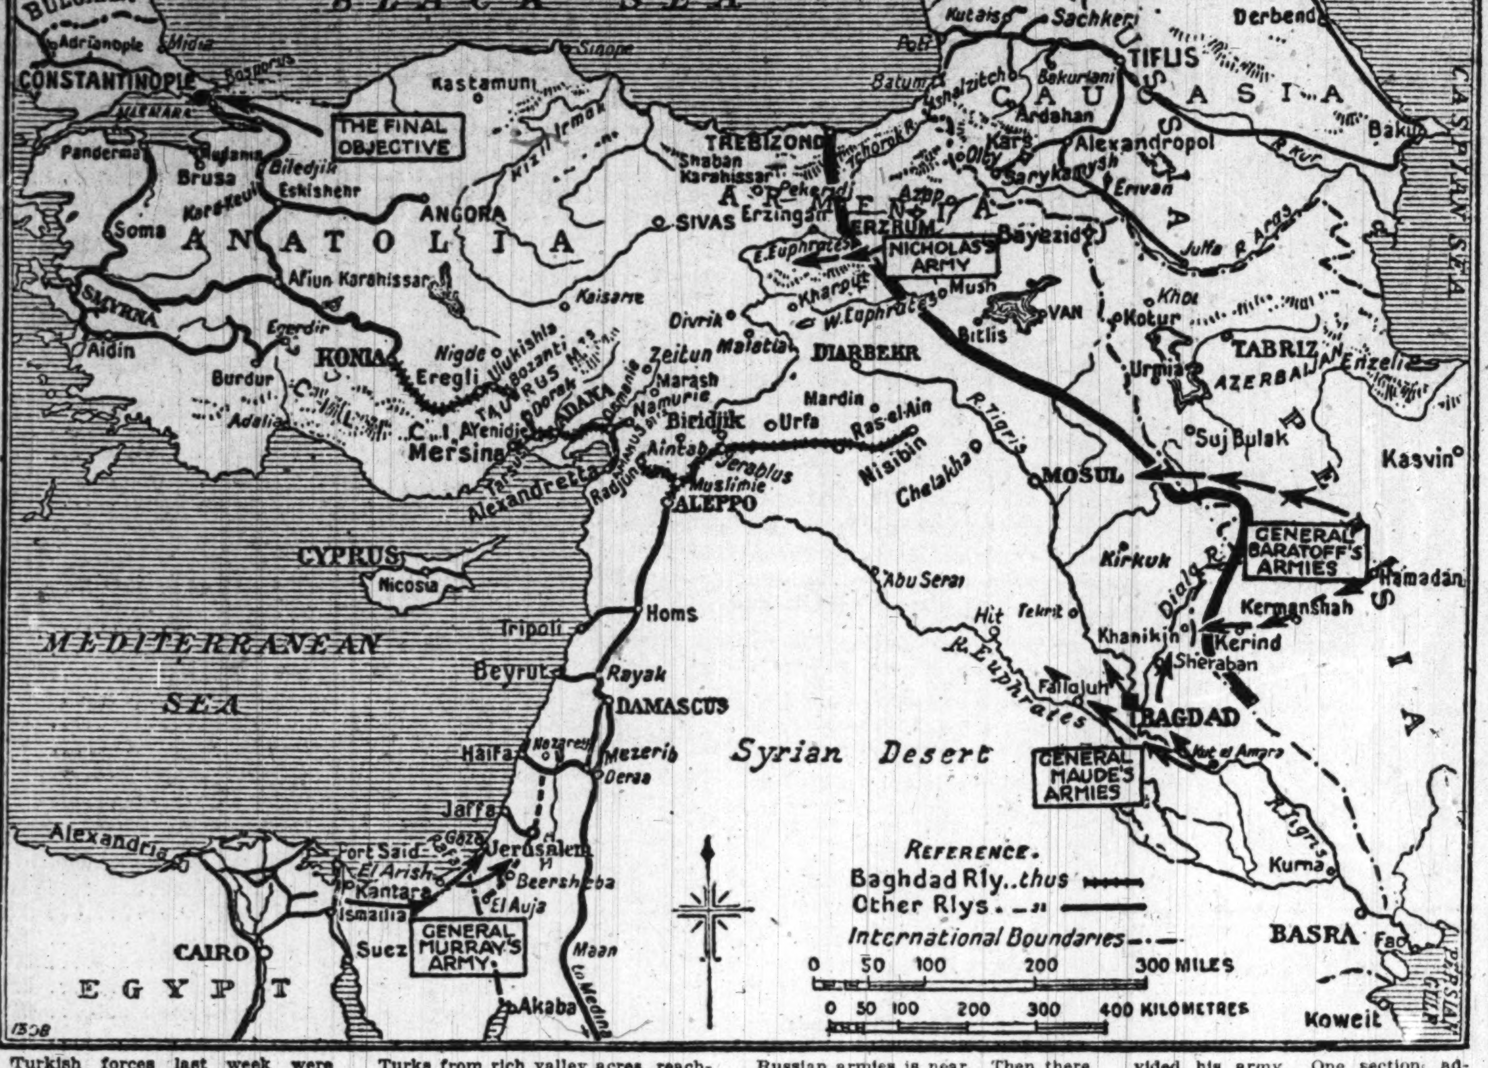
ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN.

ROME, March 31.—In the Trentino the artillery activity was impaired by yesterday's bad weather. On the Carso, the enemy heavily bombarded the northern edge of the plateau and the sector of Hill 144. We replied vigorously. We occupied an advanced post, taking ammunition, etc., between Monte Falt and Castagnavizza.

TURKS DEFEATED IN FOUR THEATERS OF WAR

Showing the Peril to Jerusalem, the Near-Junction of British and Russian Forces Northeast of Bagdad, and Grand Duke Nicholas' Advance in Armenia.



Turkish forces last week were under severe pressure in four theaters of war—Mesopotamia, Palestine, Persia, and Armenia.

Gen. Maude's British army has split into three sections for triple operations west, north, and northeast of Bagdad. The left wing has cut across to the Euphrates and occupied the town of Faliajuh, thirty-six miles west of Bagdad, the Turks falling back toward Hit.

The center column has pushed the Turks from rich valley acres, reaching a point thirty-five miles north of Bagdad. The immediate objective of this division is the important city of Mosul. The British right wing is climbing up the Diala river. Tthe capture of Sheraban, sixty miles northeast of Bagdad, was reported yesterday. It is about thirty miles from the Persian border, toward which the Russian forces of Gen. Baratoff in the province of Kermanshah are advancing from Kerind. A junction between the British and Russian armies is near. Then there will follow a united drive upon Mosul.

Some 150 miles farther north a second Russian army has crossed the Persian frontier into the Turkish province of Mosul.

Further on north, below Trebizond, the Russian army of Caucasia, under Grand Duke Nicholas, has been pushing toward Anatolia.

The most startling defeat of the Turks, however, has been administered by Gen. Murray's British force in Palestine. Gen. Murray has divided his army. One section, advancing up the Mediterranean coast line, has reached within a few miles of the ancient biblical city of Gaza. The right wing has beaten the Turks out of their base at Beersheba and is now only thirty miles distant from Jerusalem.

That the allies finally have the Turks well on the run is evident. The Turks themselves now are alarmed by their successive defeats and Enver Pasha has hurried to the German great headquarters for an interview with the kaiser.

THE WAR A YEAR AGO

April 1, 1916.

Twenty-eight persons reported killed and forty-four injured in a Zeppelin raid on England.

Austria claimed success in assault on Olika.

British and Germans both reported repulse of attacks at St. Eloi.

Germans captured village of Vaux and were stopped in following assault near Fort Douaumont.

Scholle's Special Week On Bedroom Furniture

Solid Mahogany 50-inch Dresser,
Chest of Drawers,
Cane Panel Twin Beds,
4 Pieces, $175

YOU will do well to read this advertisement carefully; it will explain our reason for this entirely unique offering, and will convince you of the great opportunity presented to you.

Our semi-annual sale has closed with the passing of March. In preparing for Spring sales we find in our store a number of incomplete bedroom suites; suites from which pieces have been sold; a dressing table in one case, a chest of drawers in another, a rocker in another, and so on. In none of these is the incompleteness a serious thing, but nevertheless it makes the suites incomplete, as we cannot get the pieces to fill out with, and so we have decided to make a week of getting rid of these.

It's your opportunity and you'd better look at the things we are offering in this way.

Oriental Rugs

While you are here getting bedroom bargains don't forget what we recently told you about our wonderful purchase of Oriental Rugs: bought under an old, old contract and sold now by us at retail at prices that wholesale houses would be glad to pay. We offer these while they last to the patrons of this store and would prefer to see them sold one or two (no more) to a customer.

FRENCH IN LOOTED AREAS SAY THEY OWE LIVES TO U.S.

Only Words of Praise for Commission's Work, Hoover Reports.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

PARIS, March 31.—H. C. Hoover, chairman of the Belgian relief commission, returning to Paris today from a trip through the region evacuated by the Germans on the Somme and on the Oise, said the thing that impressed him the most was the gratitude of the wretched inhabitants of this plundered area toward the United States for keeping them supplied with food.

"As soon as they learned I represented the commission, they rushed forward and tried to embrace me," Mr. Hoover said. "Their affection for the Americans engaged in the distribution of rations among them is as great as their hatred for the Germans, and that's saying a good deal.

Proofs of Appreciation.

"In my visits to Noyon, Ham, and Guiscard and numerous villages between, I received pathetic proof of the people's desire to show their appreciation of our work.

"They would show me how their little reserves of food had been hidden away and sometimes try to turn over to me what was left on the ground that they now are being fed by the French army and no longer are entitled to supplies distributed to them by the commission.

Lives Saved by Americans.

"'Only for America we would all have starved to death,' was the phrase I heard again and again. They were sincerely convinced the Germans would have permitted them to perish of hunger if the commission had not stepped in."

Mr. Hoover described the desolation in the evacuated territory as worse than anything he had ever seen, even in the devastated parts of Belgium.

Political Equality Reception.

AIRMAN

Chicago Aviator Joins Goodyear Experimental Staff to Aid Building of Airships for U. S. Government.

N. D. Rodgers

N. D. Rodgers, Chicago aviator, has answered the war call. He goes at the end of the week to Akron, O., to join the experimental staff of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, which has just closed a war contract with the United States government amounting to nearly $1,000,000.

The work is supplying the air forces with dirigibles, semi-dirigibles, and balloons.

Mr. Rodgers has been flying for seven years in various parts of the country. Cal Rodgers, his cousin, was the first man to fly from the Atlantic to the Pacific, falling to his death in the breakers just as he reached his goal.

Mayor Gill, Seattle, Freed on "Bootlegging" Charge

Seattle, Wash., March 31.—Mayor Gill and Chief of Police Beckingham, on trial for alleged conspiracy to ship liquor into Washington in violation of federal laws, were found not guilty today. The trial began March 6 in the United States District court. Four city detectives, also on trial, were acquitted.

BRITISH REGARD SOCIALIST UNION GERMAN TRICK

Think Its Aim Is to Divide Russians, Also to Influence U. S.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, March 31.—Conflicting views prevail here concerning the real significance of the reunion of the German Socialists in opposition to the government. There is a strong disposition in some well informed quarters to view the whole demonstration as a prearranged trick between Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and the Socialist leaders to influence the Russian Socialists toward an untimely peace on the one hand, and, on the other, partly a game of the pro-German pacifists in the United States in view of President Wilson's forthcoming appearance before congress.

A new demand now has taken definite shape here. The foreign secretary will be asked in the house of commons on Monday to state if the allies will negotiate peace with any member of the Hohenzollern family. It is doubted whether such a pledge will be given, as it might strengthen rather than weaken the position of the kaiser, because the allies would not be justified in refusing acceptable terms and prolonging the war merely because the kaiser is still on the throne.

Russian Situation Improving.

The government and the people here were never in a less pliable mood as regards peace, and there is no expectation that anything is possible along that line until the offensive in the west is over and submarine warfare is acknowledged a failure.

The Russian situation, of course, is the most important element in speculation on the duration of the war. The Prussians are using it to convince their people that peace is near, but the latest news from Petrograd, from an authoritative source, is that the danger of the extremists creating a crisis which might paralyze the army at the front steadily is passing away.

When it is found in Prussia that the Russian revolution, instead of aiding militarism to gain a much needed peace, means the establishment of a permanent menace to Prussian autocracy, the reaction is likely to make its influence felt on the general situation of the central powers.

Stormy Scene in Reichstag.

There were stormy scenes in the reichstag on Friday, according to a Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam, when Socialist deputies foreshadowed the establishment of a republic and demanded that the reichstag have larger powers in the foreign policy.

Dr. Eduard David, the Socialist leader, is quoted by the Colonge Gazette as asking for the creation of a constitutional democratic state.

George Ledebour, Social Democratic leader, said: "If the German emperor urgently advised Emperor Nicholas in 1905 no longer to oppose the justified demands of the people, why did not the chancellor venture to give the same advice to Emperor William? We regard a republic as a coming inevitable development in Germany. The reichstag must have a voice in the conclusion of alliances, peace treaties, and declarations of war. The imperial chancellor must be dismissed when the reichstag demands it."

Shouts of "high treason!" interrupted Herr Ledebour, and the president called him to order.

German Liberals Jubilant.

BERLIN, March 31.—The democratic and liberal German press is jubilant over the present trend of events. Headlined "On the Way to Action," the Vossische Zeitung calls the appointment of the reichstag's constitutional committee a "very gratifying political event, which we may expect to be of considerable influence on our future development.

"It is the corner stone of the new German house, which peace will build us," it continues. "The most significant feature was the fact that Social Democrats, National Liberal, Progressive, and People's parties marched shoulder to shoulder toward the same goal.

"The reichstag's action must bring home to the hesitating chancellor the need to spur himself to action. And this action can only be the reform of the Prussian electoral laws."

Austria Wants Just Peace.

AMSTERDAM, March 31.—A Vienna dispatch quotes Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, as saying in an interview with the Fremdenblatt that the entente could conclude an honorable peace with the central powers at any time and that the proposal of the central empires for a peace conference still held good.

Replying to the question as to whether it was not possible to outline the central empires' peace conditions, Count Czernin said this had already been done, adding:

"We have openly declared that we are waging a war which has been forced on us. Our aim is to gain the assurance of the free and undisturbed development of the monarchy. We must receive guarantees for our existence and for our means of existence. As soon as our enemies abandon their unrealizable ideas of smashing us, as soon as they are ready to negotiate for a peace honorable to them and to us, then nothing stands in the way of negotiations."

The Austrian Socialist leader, Adler, declared in a public speech in Vienna that the present situation is favorable for a resumption of activities by the central powers, according to Vienna dispatches received here today.

Austrian Socialists Seek Peace.

COPENHAGEN, March 31.—A Socialist newspaper of Vienna received here contains a brief announcement that the leaders of the German Socialist party in Austria have adopted a declaration regarding peace. It is addressed to the Russian proletariat and will be forwarded through the International Socialist bureau. The announcement says that the censor prohibits the publication of the text of the declaration.

CURE

New Serum for Treatment of Baby Plague.

New York, March 31.—[Special.]—Results of investigations undertaken by the Rockefeller institute last summer following the outbreak of infantile paralysis and carried on since through a series of experiments on hundreds of monkeys are set forth in the April number of the Journal of Experimental Medicine, the institute publication.

Probably the most important conclusion is that immune serum derived from the blood of those who have recovered from the disease is of definite curative value.

The report contains an analysis of twenty-six cases. In fourteen of them the serum was administered before paralysis had developed. Signs of paralysis followed in only four of these. Of the entire twenty-six a large proportion showed improvement following the treatment.

SWEDEN TO STAY NEUTRAL DESPITE HEAVY PRESSURE

New Cabinet Hopes to Win People's Aid in Effort to Avoid War.

LONDON, March 31.—Sweden will remain neutral despite pressure from all sides to "step this way."

This stand is to be the policy of the new Swedish cabinet, according to a Stockholm dispatch to Reuter's.

The members of the new cabinet are:

Foreign minister—Admiral S. A. A. LINDMAN.
Minister of justice—M. STENBERG.
Minister of war—COL. AKERMAN.
Minister of marine—CAPT. HANS ERICKSON.
Minister of the interior—C. F. VON SYDEW.
Minister of finance—M. CARLESON.
Minister of instruction—M. HAMMARSTROEM.
Minister of agriculture—M. DAHLBERG.
Ministers without portfolio—HAKON ERICSON and M. FALK.

Food Scarce in Sweden.

STOCKHOLM, via London, March 31.—The state economic commission announces that the amount of rye, oats, and mixed grains on hand in the kingdom, or possible to import, is much less than had been estimated, and that it is, therefore, impossible to lift the embargo against the using for fodder of any of the expropriated grains, which it had been hoped could be done.

The strictest measures, the commission says, are needed to insure a supply of breadstuffs lasting until the next harvest. The daily per capita flour ration will be reduced.

Union with Allies Urged.

San Francisco, Cal., March 31.—"A full union with the allies in money, men, and munitions," was urged on President Wilson today and California's senators and congressmen in a telegram sent by the American league of California. The message declares "mercy for all mankind and for the German people calls for a vigorous and aggressive war."

SCOUR SEAS FOR GERMAN RAIDER WITH 11 VICTIMS

Allies' Patrol Ships Busy—283 Survivors at Rio Janeiro.

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 31.—Once again, tonight, the south Atlantic was the scene of a grim game of tag—with British and French patrol vessels scouring the waters for trace of a clumsy three masted sailing vessel flying Norwegian colors.

The sailing vessel is the German raider Seeadler. Its full toll of ships probably has not yet been told, but 283 survivors—two of them women—who arrived here today on board the French bark Cambronne reported eleven vessels sunk by the pseudo-Norwegian. The Seeadler has not been located.

All had grudging admiration for the audacity of the German sea rover's tactics, the utter disregard for all rules of the game in substituting a slow traveling sailing vessel as a raider, instead of the modern ideal of a fast, clean cut, heavily armed cruiser, like the Moewe and Emden.

The Seeadler, according to all versions, was armed with only two sizable guns, although it carried a number of rapid fire cannon and machine guns.

List of Raider's Victims.

The raider's victims as listed by the survivors were:

Gladys Royal (British), 3,268 tons

Lady Island (British), 4,500 tons; sunk Jan. 21.

Horngarth (British), 3,609 tons.

Pinmore (British), 2,431 tons; sunk Feb. 19.

British Yeoman (British), 1,953 tons; sunk Feb. 26.

Perce (Canadian), 364 tons; sunk Jan. 28.

Buenos Aires (Italian), 1,811 tons.

The Seeadler left a German port Dec. 22 and, under the Norwegian flag and escorted by submarines, went to Iceland. From there the Seeadler scurried almost due south around to Madeira and then made a bee line for the upper South American coast.

Its earliest capture was Jan. 3; its latest March 3.

In all cases the raider, bearing the Norwegian flag, would approach close to its victim, signal under some pretext, and, when it was close enough, open fire, at the same time hoisting code signals for the victim to heave to. Usually they did—being taken by surprise.

Members of the crews of the vessels sunk by the German raider, according to A Rua, declare they recognized among hte officers of the Seeadler several pilots from German ships interned in the harbor of Rio Janeiro. The newspaper asks how it was possible for them to make their escape and whether the Germans residing in Brazil were privy to it.

Americans Among Captives.

Among the men from the destroyed ships are several Americans. Those on the Cambronne, so far as is known, are as follows:

Roy Clark of Virginia, from the British Yeoman; John Rondoni of California, from the British Yeoman; Luther Leatters of Ohio, from the Pinmore; Ernest Ray Gilbert of Washington, from the Pinmore, and Manuel Guerrero of Manila [no ship given].

WEST JOINS EAST IN 'RALLY 'ROUND THE FLAG, BOYS'

Many Faint at Great 'War' Meeting at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 31.—Resolutions pledging the president loyal support in any action he may deem necessary to the protection of American rights on land and sea were adopted today at a patriotic demonstration which was probably the greatest in numbers that has ever been held in Independence square.

The Atlantic and Pacific coasts figuratively shook hands at the shrine of American independence when Hiram Johnson of California brought an inspiring message of patriotism from the people of the west.

Dozens of persons were carried out of the crowd fainting or exhausted to emergency tents.

During the meeting a message of welcome was sent to the people of the Virgin islands, who today came under the protection of the flag of the United States.

At the end of the exercises a resolution, in addition to the pledge of loyalty, was adopted indorsing universal military training and urging congress to adopt promptly a bill to put the system into immediate operation.

Mayor Smith opened the meeting and Edgar F. Smith, provost of the University of Pennsylvania, presided. The speakers included C. Stuart Patterson, former president of the Philadelphia Union league; Senator Johnson, Senator Boise Penrose, and Lieut. Gen. S. B. M. Young, retired.

WILSON CALLS TO COLORS 7,000 MORE GUARDSMEN

Washington, D. C., March 31.—The war department late today called into the federal service for purpose of police protection about 7,000 additional national guardsmen.

The organizations named include:

Oklahoma—First regiment, infantry.

Louisiana—First regiment, infantry.

District of Columbia—Third regiment of infantry.

Texas—The Second, Third, and Fourth infantry, and the First separate squadron of cavalry.

Arkansas—First regiment infantry.

Rhode Island—The Second, Fifth, Twelfth, and Fifteenth companies of coast artillery, equipped as infantry.

Troops on Duty in Michigan.

Detroit, Mich., March 31.—The Second battalion of the Thirty-third Michigan infantry, which arrived here from the Mexican border yesterday, today was ordered out to guard public property in Michigan.

DESERT CAUCUS, REFUSING HELP TO ELECT MANN

Three Members of House Bolt and Bi-Partisan Plan Is Abandoned.

Washington, D. C., March 31.—Republican members of the incoming house in conference today nominated Representative James R. Mann of Illinois for speaker, named a committee of seventeen to arrange committee assignments, and adopted a resolution to provide for the appointment of a steering committee to guide the conduct of legislation without regard to the outcome of the organization fight. Plans to suggest bipartisan and temporary organization of the house were abandoned.

Both regular and progressive Republicans claimed a victory for their faction. Regulars pointed to the nomination of Mr. Mann and failure to take up the question of his successor as floor leader. Progressives declared they won in the appointment of a committee on committees and of a steering committee.

No Independents Present.

None of the five so-called independents attended the conference. Representative-elect Fuller of Massachusetts, Progressive, who the Republicans hoped would confer with them, arrived today and announced that he first would vote for Representative Lenroot, Wisconsin, for speaker.

There was only one display of open insurgency at the conference. Declaring he would vote for Mr. Lenroot for speaker, Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, bolted the meeting after failing to obtain adoption of a resolution to provide that members present should not be bound by conference action. Representatives Gray of New Jersey and Dallinger of Massachusetts left with Mr. Gardner, but Mr. Dallinger returned later.

Vote for Nominees.

Immediately after Mr. Gardner's withdrawal Representative Longworth of Ohio offered a resolution to bind the members to vote for the conference nominees, and asked that it be voted down. This was done by a large vote, leaving the 195 members who voted for Mr. Mann free to support whom they pleased on Monday.

The prevailing impression that the Democrats will organize the house with Champ Clark as speaker gained further support today with the announcement that Representative Relgesen of North Dakota, a Republican, would be unable to be present on Monday. There is at least one other Republican—Capstick of New Jersey—whose attendance is doubtful, and the Democrats declared tonight there was not the slightest doubt that Speaker Clark would have the necessary votes to elect. In that event Representative Mann is expected to be continued as Republican floor leader.

BRITAIN SPENDS 4 TIMES INCOME

LONDON, March 31.—The exchequer returns for the financial year, which ended today, show a revenue of about $2,760 000,000, against $1,620,000,000 for the preceding year, an increase of $1,140,000,000.

The expenditures were $10,560,000,000, as compared with $7,485,000,000 for the preceding year. There is thus a deficit of $7,800,000,000, which exceeds the estimate given by the former chancellor of the exchequer, Reginald McKenna, by $1,450,000,000.

The REASON for this is that when the war started we purchased thousands of Oriental Rugs at our own prices, and in some cases at less than importers' prices. We have taken advantage of every opportunity offered since to purchase them, and in many cases we have bought entire shipments.

While other merchants hesitated to buy Oriental Rugs during the past two years, we gave our buyers orders to secure every bargain, no matter how large the amount of money involved, as we knew that it would be but a short time when but few Oriental Rugs could be imported, and that it would be years before conditions would be normal. In many sections of Persia, Turkey and Armenia the conditions are appalling; and the Oriental Rug industry—as we have known it—may soon be a thing of the past.

The purchases mentioned above are now in our store, and, as usual, we have placed a low price on them and will give our customers the benefit of the purchases.

We own or control these special trued-up stocks that have made our seeds famous among America's greatest gardeners and truckers.

Gears Were Only a Makeshift

¶ The men who made the first gas cars knew that change-speed gears belonged in the machine shop—not on the road.

¶ But there were so many problems to be solved—motor, ignition, tires, cooling, etc.—that makeshift mechanical transmissions were retained.

¶ Then J. B. Entz, inventor of the self-starter and other electric equipment, grasped the idea that the attractive force of magnetism is easily varied and controlled.

¶ Thus came the magnetic transmission which does away with the power jerks of mechanical gears, substituting power pull—attaining true elasticity and unbelievable ease of operation.

¶ To introduce this revolutionary improvement to the motoring world, the R. M. Owen Company, the Baker R. & L. Company and the General Electric Company (associated in the production of the Owen Magnetic) have waited until the advent of 8-cylinder and 12-cylinder cars proved that people are anxious to get smooth, elastic power with easier and safer driving.

¶ So now the Owen Magnetic is offered for general sale and is purchased eagerly by America's most distinguished motorists—who get keen pleasure from owning and driving "the world's smartest vehicle." Exquisite bodies in stock—or to order.

CELEBRATION OF RUSSIAN REVOLT HELD IN LONDON

Zangwill Cheered When He Contrasts Czar and Kaiser to Wilson.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

(Special Cable to Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, March 31.—Speaking before 9,000 men and women in Royal Albert hall tonight at a monster demonstration celebrating the Russian revolution, Israel Zangwill said:

"The world is tired of these murderous monarchs, who play with the lives of their subjects and drench continents in blood. There is one who for years has spread his toy soldiers about his empire and played with them while the world shuddered. There was another who wrapped his only son in the shirt of a vile peasant monk and spread a veil of medievalism over his nation. How these stage Cæsars, with their tinsel robes and gewgaw helmets, fade into insignificance beside a figure like Woodrow Wilson."

The extreme radical and pacifist crowd, occupying five tiers of galleries in the big auditorium, rose to its feet and cheered. Labor speakers, speaking next, said the government's present demands for further dilution of labor made necessary an immediate dilution of capital. The Russian revolution was hailed as a great means of strengthening internationalism.

Ministers to Visit Front.

The government has decided to abolish the death penalty. Penal servitude for life or for a term of years will be substituted for the death penalty in cases where such a penalty is prescribed by the penal code or by military law.

The government has approved a measure put forward by the minister of commerce introducing a modification in the laws affecting public companies. Among the changes is one whereby the legal restrictions affecting Jews and foreign subjects will no longer be extended to these companies. The restriction applying to subjects of powers hostile to Russia, however, will remain in force.

Russian Promise Overjoys Poles.

PETROGRAD, March 30, via London, March 31.—The proclamation of the provisional government in regard to the freedom of Poland has been received with general enthusiasm by Polish leaders throughout the country.

ROYAL THANKS

Kaiser Sends Imperial Chancellor His Congratulations on Success of the New German War Taxes.

LONDON, March 31.—The German emperor, according to a dispatch received in Amsterdam from Berlin and forwarded by Reuter, has sent a message of congratulation to Imperial Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg on the adoption of the new taxes by the reichstag. The message said:

"My dear Von Bethmann: I thank you for the report of the adoption of new taxes by the reichstag, which in accordance with the federal government has again adhered to the principle that for recurring expenses continuous receipts must be created. Thus a solid foundation for our finances is maintained even during war. Especially additional expenditure for interest on war loans is secured by the new sources of income.

"By granting new taxes the reichstag again has manifested to all the world that the German people will take upon itself all burdens which are necessary for a victorious termination of the war for existence. The secured future of our beloved fatherland will recompense for all sacrifices. Of this I am firmly convinced. God is with us."

The emperor, the dispatch adds, also thanked and congratulated Finance Minister von Roedern on the success of his efforts.

SAYS GERMANS ARE DECEIVED ON SUBMARINE

LONDON, March 31.—In discussing with the Associated Press today the German submarine warfare, Archibald S. Hurd, well known writer on naval subjects, said:

"Admiral von Capelle (German naval minister), struggling against adversity and aware of the contempt in which the new methods of warfare have brought the service to which he belongs, has endeavored to cheer his fellow countrymen and mislead and terrorize neutrals. What would the world have thought had he mentioned the number of submarines that have been lost in the matter of only two months, stated the capital they represented, and given the casualties?

"The submarines displacement ranges from more than 800 to 1,200 tons, and the outlay for construction runs from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 each.

"Submarines in proportion to their size are the most expensive ships ever built. Consequently these losses impose a heavy drain on German finances, material resources, skilled labor, and man power. If salvation is to come to Germany in time to rescue her from her doom it must come soon."

TWO AMERICANS DIE ON UNWARNED BRITISH CRAFT

Eighteen More Are Missing—Others Periled on Three Ships.

Washington, D. C., March 31.—Two Americans were killed and eighteen are missing, according to late dispatches to the state department regarding the sinking of the British steamer Crispin, sent down without warning.

Other messages to the department told of the shelling of the steamer Argo and the submarining of the steamers Eptafolos and Snowden Range, and a Norwegian bark.

Early in the day Consul Frost at Queenstown reported the sinking of the Crispin and later advised the state department two Americans had been killed.

Americans also were aboard the Snowden Range, according to an official Liverpool dispatch.

Reports American Killed.

Consul Frost's supplemental message on the sinking of the Crispin reads:

"Supplementing cable of consul at Swansea March 30, joint affidavit four American seamen—Charles Smith, Everett, Mass.; Frank Brooks, Baltimore; James Fitzpatrick, Chicago, and Albert Grieve, Cincinnati—indicates two Americans, colored firemen, names so far unknown, killed by explosion. Eighteen Americans so far unaccounted for in captain's boat.

"Sixty-nine Americans on Crispin—ten firemen, two seamen, and fifty-seven cattlemen. Carried one gun aft. Submarine German. Ordered rescuing trawler leave vicinity under threat torpedoing. Affidavits officers and further information expected Monday, when affidavits be mailed."

Report on Snowden Range.

The British steamer Snowden Range recently escaped a German raider only to fall victim to a German submarine. The Liverpool consul reported concerning it as follows:

"British steamer Snowden Range, Philadelphia to Liverpool, general cargo and powder, one gun aft, torpedoed without warning, 8:45 a. m., March 28th, eighty-five miles from Holy Head. No vessel in sight; sea calm; weather hazy; no resistance, as submarine was submerged at time of attack.

"Four men killed by explosion. Remainder of crew, including four Americans—James Carroll, Philadelphia; George Alexander, colored, Wilmington, N. C.; Bert Thaubault, Philadelphia, and Patty McCabe, no permanent address—took to boats.

"Submarine emerged, showing German flag, shelled Snowden Range, then boarded and removed provisions and detachable brass, placed bombs, vessel sunk. Crew picked up six p. m., taken Holly Head."

How Argo Was Sunk.

Destruction of the Argo was reported by Consul Armstrong at Bristol, who cabled:

"William Pitts and Spenser Kennedy, colored American seamen, Portuguese sailing ship Argo, from New Orleans for London, carrying general cargo, swear Argo shelled without intentional warning by submarine flying German flag 300 miles off Gravesend 5 o'clock March 23.

"Weather rough, cold; occupants lifeboats at sea four days; suffered from exposure; when picked up by British hospital ship brought into Avonmouth one lifeboat with three colored Americans unaccounted for; their names unknown. Two other Americans, Troy Thomas, Charley Jackson, rescued, suffering from exposure. No other boats near by. Submarine offered no assistance, Argo no resistance."

Loss of Eptafolos.

"Mailing affidavits Roy Adams, Elberton, Ga.; James Dennis, Hampton, Va.; Edward Ryan, Suffolk, Va., firemen on British steamer Eptafolos, sunk by submarine without flag or indication nationality, about fifty miles from Malta, March 23, weather fine, sea calm. Eptafolos bound Malta to Gibraltar, in ballast, without passengers or troops, carried one gun, two gunners. Vessel torpedoed without warning by unseen submarine about 12:30 noon.

"Eptafolos immediately stopped, crew entered lifeboats, for which ample time. Submarine then appeared, took prisoner captain, first, second officers, four engineers, one gunner, and ordered crew steer for Malta, indicating course. No other assistance given by submarine. Crew remained boats from Friday afternoon until reaching Malta Sunday, March 25, about 7 o'clock morning."

Chicagoans on the Crispin.

Newport News, Va., March 31.—Among the Americans signed on here as horsemen on the Crispin, according to British Vice Consul C. E. Kenworthy, was A. H. Mitchell of Chicago; no street address given. James Fitzpatrick, 1148 Monroe street, Chicago, signed as a member of the crew.

GERMANY'S SHIPS RUN SEA GANTLET TO EAST AFRICA

BERLIN, via Sayville wireless, March 31.—How German ships managed to elude British patrol vessels and deliver ammunition and other war materials to German troops in East Africa was described in a statement issued today by the official government press bureau.

In February, 1915, Lieutenant of Reserve Christiansen sailed from a German port, carrying rifles, machine guns, several million cartridges, food, clothing, sanitary equipment, and material for the cruiser Koenigsberg. The vessel, entering the bay at its destination, was shelled by the British cruiser Hyacinthe, but discharged its cargo.

PACIFISTS URGE TAXING WEALTH TO PAY FOR WAR

Amos Pinchot Group Asks Levy on Incomes from $5,000 Up.

New York, March 31.—The strongest pacifist influence in America today suddenly turned from efforts to prevent war to means of financing it.

Simultaneously it became known that a plan put forward by the American committee on war finance, headed by Amos Pinchot, to place the entire financial burden of the war on persons with incomes of more than $5,000 per year has been indorsed in high government circles.

The committee in its announcement today pointed out that the heavy death toll of war will be on the working people of the country because of their greater numbers. With this in view [illegible] for signatures to a pledge to demand legislation for a special war income tax on all incomes over $5,000.

Proposed Tax Schedule.

The schedule calls for a tax of 2½ per cent on all incomes from $5,000 to $10,000 per year. On all incomes over $10,000 a sliding scale beginning at 10 per cent and rising to a point that will permit no individual to retain more than a net income more than $100,000 per year is proposed.

The pledge further calls for legislation limiting net profit on all war supplies to 3½ per cent and provides that no wholesale or retail dealer shall sell foodstuffs or other necessities at a profit greater than 6 per cent during the war.

"We do not believe that any real patriot wants the poor people of the nation to bear the burden of the cost of war in addition to the burden of fighting," Mr. Pinchot said today.

Pinchot has been the leader of the strongest pacifist movements. He and his associates have financed most of the leading pacifist activity.

Congress Leaders Cool on Plan.

Washington, D. C., March 31.—Congress leaders of both political faiths today refused to see anything to be gained from "letting the wealthy pay out the money for a war while the majority of the people, who are not wealthy, volunteer to give their lives." Many Congress leaders refused even to discuss the plan. All senators who would said they were opposed to it.

Some admitted the present income tax laws might be so amended as to bring in more money for the government, but that such legislation as proposed by Amos Pinchot would tend to make for class distinction.

ST. PAUL'S WALLS WEAK; FEAR FALL

LONDON, March 31.—Canon Alexander on Thursday announced that the condition of the walls of St. Paul's cathedral had caused considerable anxiety during the last few weeks. In the great piers and parts adjacent to them serious internal fractures recently have been discovered. The effects of time had combined with the immense and unevenly distributed weight of the dome to produce a condition which if it had not been taken in hand certainly would have resulted in disaster before long.

CHICAGO RECTOR JUST ONE FIGURE IN DIVORCE SUIT

Grand Rapids (Mich.) Wife Said to Have Had Other Admirers.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 31.—[Special.]—The reading of the testimony taken in Chicago of the witnesses in the divorce case of John Goodspeed was put to one side this morning and Miss Eva Walters, sister of Goodspeed's first wife, was called to the stand to testify about the present Mrs. Goodspeed's relations with other men.

The witness testified Mrs. Goodspeed had admitted several times that she was in love with several other men while she was married to Goodspeed. Among them was the Rev. Francis Godolphin, formerly pastor of Grace church in this city, but now a pastor of Grace Episcopal church, in Oak Park, Chicago. Another was the proprietor of one of Grand Rapids' best and largest chop suey restaurants in 1911. Miss Walters said Mrs. Goodspeed used to receive presents from this restaurant man, among them two valuable silk kimonos.

Tells of Rector's Conduct.

Miss Walters testified that the Rev. Mr. Godolphin and Mrs. Goodspeed often went to Reeds Lake, a resort near this city, where they went swimming together. Here the witness sprung a sensation—namely: the "submarine kiss." She said: "Mrs. Goodspeed and the rector would dive off the bank at the same time and while under the water they would kiss each other."

When asked if they ever kissed each other above the water, Miss Walters replied:

"Yes, they often kissed each other above water, for he made love to her many times. She used to call him up over the telephone and use very endearing terms."

The lawyers then brought out that Mrs. Goodspeed was in love with other men, including a prominent business man in one of the neighboring cities, and a Grand Rapids policeman.

Denies She Loves Goodspeed.

Miss Walters was then subjected to a severe cross-examination. When asked if she were in love with Goodspeed, she replied: "I certainly am not in love with him."

"Did you ever have any intentions of marrying Goodspeed, or ask him to build you a cottage at Palm Beach, or to take you for a trip around the world, and was he to marry you after he was free to do so?" were some of the questions put to the witness.

Miss Walters answered them like this: "I had never had any intentions of marrying Goodspeed. I have asked him his advice as to erecting a cottage at Palm Beach and about a trip around the world."

The witness admitted several times that she had kissed Goodspeed, but only as a "sister-in-law" and not as a "lover." The case then was adjourned till Monday morning.

CHICAGO MINISTER SILENT.

The Rev Francis Godolphin was asked last night if he wished to comment on the matters discussed in the Grand Rapids trial.

"I am quite in earnest," he said, "when I tell you I have nothing to say."

MILLERS ASKED TO HELP SAVE FOOD SUPPLY

Washington, D. C., March 31.—A suggestion that American millers might give a great public service in the campaign to prevent a war shortage of food by converting into flour a greater percentage of milled wheat was made in an authorized statement by Carl Vrooman, assistant secretary of agriculture, made public here tonight.

"No step could do as much to increase our food supply immediately," wrote Mr. Vrooman, "as to put the nation on a 'war bread' basis."

He pointed out that while the present milling standard in this country converts only about 72 per cent of the wheat berry into flour, England has adopted an 81 per cent standard; Italy, 85 per cent; Switzerland, 80 per cent, and France, 77 per cent, and all of the belligerents are making bread from wheat flour mixed with rye, barley, corn, and potato flour.

ANTI-KENNEDY MEETING TURNS PATRIOTIC RALLY

McFarland Appeals to Save Ward from "Disgrace."

The anti-Kennedy campaign in the Twenty-seventh ward reached a climax last night at a meeting in Myrtle Masonic temple, Irving Park boulevard and Tripp avenue.

Originally called as a meeting in behalf of James H. McFarland, Republican candidate for alderman, it developed into a patriotic demonstration, in which the speakers forgot ordinary politics and appealed to citizens to oust from the city council the Socialist Kennedy and thereby "save the ward from further disgrace of Socialism."

Besides Henry R. Rathbone, president of the Hamilton club, Mr. McFarland talked America.

"We are assembled here in this great massmeeting to discuss frankly and openly the issues of the greatest election the people of the Twenty-seventh ward have been called upon to decide in recent years," said Mr. McFarland. "The greatest issue of this campaign is patriotism.

"What would happen if John C. Kennedy, the elected representative of this ward, should be called upon to speak for us in this great patriotic demonstration? He would in all probability say just about as he has said in the past: 'If the government of the United States is forced into war with Germany upon the flimsy pretext that now exists the workingmen of this country would be a thousand times justified in starting a violent revolution here at home; although we, as Socialists, are opposed to war.'

"If I am elected alderman and am called upon to express what I think is the sentiment of my constitutents, I shall say whenever and wherever the opportunity presents itself that, irrespective of what the cause may be, it is our duty as loyal American citizens to uphold the hands of the president."

HOYNE EXPLAINS WHY HE STARTED BLACK BELT QUIZ

Says Negroes Themselves Asked Action—Denies the Mayor's Charge.

State's Attorney Hoyne divulged the inside story of why he started his investigation of graft in the black belt, which resulted in the indictment of Ald. Oscar De Priest, while addressing a massmeeting in the Austin High school last night.

The meeting was held in the interest of D. I. Jarrett, Democratic candidate for alderman of the Thirty-third ward, opposed by Irwin Hazen, Republican. Mr. Hoyne chose the city hall as his subject in asking the voters not to support any candidate "indorsed by the most notorious administration with which a city has ever been afflicted." The administration, he said, is sending the city "to the dogs."

Incidentally he related how a complaint against a member of the state's attorney's office when investigated by Chief of Police Schuettler exonerated his own aid and implicated an assistant of City Prosecutor Miller.

About the Black Belt.

Regarding the black belt, Mr. Hoyne said:

"When I suggested that the black belt in the Second ward was rotten, the mayor in his usual way wanted every one to believe that in making this charge I was animated by hostility towards the Negroes. As a matter of fact, I started an investigation at the request of Negro citizens."

He then produced a petition signed by 104 well known Negroes, asking him to clean up the ward. He read the petition, which said the "Second ward has been given over by certain public officials to vice and gambling." Among the signers were the Rev. Moses Jackson, pastor of Grace Presbyterian church; the Rev. Eli T. Martin, Bethesda Baptist church; the Rev. John T. Jenifer, A. L. Jackson, secretary of Wabash Avenue Y. M. C. A.; Dr. George C. Hall, a surgeon, and others.

Letter From Chief.

During his recent absence Mr. Hoyne said a letter from Chief Schuettler was opened by his secretary, Edward Fleming, and found to contain a complaint of police officers that an assistant state's attorney had given aid to gamblers in court. The complaint charged that the assistant prosecutor advised the gamblers to take jury trials to escape severe punishment from the judge, who was "down on gambling." He read this and another letter from Chief Schuettler, in which the latter later wrote that it was not an assistant state's attorney but an "assistant city prosecutor who was referred to."

Mr. Hoyne reviewed his long fight against the city administration and took a few shots at the mayor's attitude on the liquor and closing questions.

WHEAT GRADING IS FIXED BY U. S.

Washington, D. C., March 31.—Official wheat standards were fixed today by the department of agriculture under the grain standards act, to become effective for hard red winter wheat, soft red winter wheat, common white wheat, and white club wheat, July 1, and for all other wheats Aug. 1.

Use of the standards will be required for wheat shipped from all points in the United States in interstate or foreign commerce and sold by grade. Sale of grain by sample or type, however, is permitted.

Wheat is divided into six general classes and a large number of subclasses. The general classes are hard red spring, common and red durum, hard red winter, soft red winter, common white, and white club.

POLICE BREAK UP CROWDS AROUND KOSHER STORES

Plenty of Oratory but Little Violence on West Side.

Disturbances about kosher markets in various parts of the city last night resulted in a number of arrests, but aside from slight injury to one man the food rioting was more vocal than physical. Five hundred persons gathered before the market of Pawlansky Bros., 1235 North Robey street, where Mrs. Rebecca Landsman, 1822 North Irving avenue; David Blumenthal, 1943 Crystal street; Harry Tempkin, 2149 West Division street, and Mrs. Katie Gordon, 1450 North Leavitt street, were attempting to harrangue the crowd. Police of the North avenue station broke up the gathering and arrested the four speakers, who were later bailed out by Stanley Kunz.

Customer Knocked Down.

Abraham Schuller, 81 years old, a customer in the shop, was knocked down in the rumpus and slightly injured.

Crowds gathered in front of most of the kosher shops in the West Twelfth street district and police were called on several occasions. Crowds scattered when the police responded to the call of L. Ladsman, 1400 Hastings street. In the market of Morris Abramovitz, 1344 West Fourteenth street, men and women poured oil on the chickens displayed and took two chickens from a customer and threw them into the gutter. Then the people dispersed.

Orators Arrested.

Abraham Clementz, 3125 Carlisle street, and Herman Wolf, 1515 South Spaulding avenue, were arrested when they attempted to make speeches to a crowd in front of the market of H. Lefkowitz, 3138 West Twelfth street.

It was reported by the Maxwell street police that the crowds were the usual Saturday night strollers, attracted by the prospect of amusement and by the balmy spring air. In most cases business was transacted as usual.

OFFICIAL DOUBTS RAILWAY SECTION MEN PLAN STRIKE

D. L. Bush, vice president, in charge of the operating department of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, declared last night that he knew nothing of the reported unionizing from Chicago to Tacoma of the maintenance of way department of the system. The report came out of Milwaukee and was given to newspapers by N. Jackman, traveling representative of the union.

The dispatch said that the men were to demand a flat increase in wages of 15 per cent and a minimum of two hours for overtime. This means that if a man works ten minutes overtime he will get pay for two full hours. Other things Jackman said would be demanded are improved section houses and bunk cars and pay for Sunday time.

"I have heard nothing of all this," said Mr. Bush at his Evanston home. "If the system has been unionized, as the dispatch says, I of all men should know of it."

W. R. Ryan and R. F. Kelly, listed as representatives of the union in Chicago, could not be found last night.

Two Milwaukee Girls Caught in Chicago.

Two 17 year old girls, who came to Chicago Friday from Milwaukee to find work, were found crying on the corner of Sheridan road and Diversey parkway last night by Lincoln Park policemen. The girls said they left Milwaukee with just enough money to last them overnight and car fare back home again. On the interurban car to Chicago Cile Kwiotawski, who had the money, either lost it or was robbed. The other girl, Helen Ziolkowski, had 80 cents. They found a room in a boarding house for this sum. Then they went out and wandered the streets. They were taken to the Chicago avenue station, given a meal, and then transferred to the Harrison street annex. They will be sent home tomorrow.

SUICIDE THIEF INSANE, SAYS CORONER JURY

"Death by suicide while temporarily insane," was the verdict of the coroner's jury yesterday in the case of William Collins, 5604 South Aberdeen street, who swallowed poison in a cell at the detective bureau, following his arrest.

It developed at the inquest that Collins bought the poison Thursday night at a drug store near where he resided. His wife had told him that detectives visited the house in the afternoon to make inquiry regarding him.

Collins, the police say, confessed to stealing more than $100 worth of merchandise from the Boston Store, where he was employed, and taking it to Milwaukee to dispose of. He also confessed to former thefts, it is said, the total amount being $400.

Jury Trying Thomas for Wife Slaying Still Out

The fate of Joseph Thomas, who is alleged to have murdered his first wife, Crystal, by giving her poison, was still undecided by a jury in Judge Brothers' court last night. The jury had been out a night and a day. Judge Brothers will receive a verdict today if the jurors should reach one by this morning.

Schuettler Orders Aids to Lock Up All Spitters

After a conference with Health Commissioner Robertson yesterday Chief Schuettler ordered commanding officers of the police department to see that the anti-spitting ordinance is enforced.

"With warm weather coming, the health commissioner is anxious to have the spitting nuisance stopped," the chief said. "All spitters will be locked up."

Nebraska Youth Lavishes Finery on Servant Girl Companions.

Escorting in state two Lincoln, Neb., chambermaids, Verne E. Oeschger, the "millionless millionaire" youth of Valparaiso, Neb., was arrested yesterday in the Morrison hotel on charges of passing bogus checks. The young man admitted his identity and said he had left the bucolic confines of his home town to see the world.

That he might not suffer the stings of loneliness, he engaged the society of two young women who told the police they had been chambermaids before meeting Oeschger. Between them, according to the police, they carried some $2,000 worth of silken lingerie and appeared bravely in the hotel lobby resplendent in high laced red shoes and red silk stockings, surmounted by the latest designs in gowns.

Heir to $1,000,000.

Oeschger fell heir to something less than $1,000,000 when his father died. He was given $100,000 to start with, but he indicated a disposition to "bust things up," whereupon his uncle, being executor of the estate, took things in hand and gave the youth, who is 21 years old, $45 a week. This not being sufficient evil unto the day thereof, Oeschger set out cashing checks against his uncle's name by way of getting even.

The two girls said they had been traveling in style for two months. This caused Hinton G. Clabaugh of the federal department of justice to investigate to see if the Mann act has been broken.

Registered as Wife.

In the Morrison hotel Oeschger was registered with one of his companions as "Mr. and Mrs. Johnson" and the other girl was registered as "Mrs. Anderson," the "sister" of "Mrs. Johnson." They had adjoining rooms with a portiere between and when the police arrived the young women were reclining in innocuous desuetude in the fluffiest of fabrics and looking out upon the world through the big end of the telescope.

Oeschger was locked up in the bureau and the girls in the Clark street annex.

Shot Her Baby; Dead.

Mrs. Aligo Wippo, 40 years old, 6438 South Hermitage avenue, died yesterday. She shot herself Thursday night after she had fatally wounded her 4 months old son, Raymond.

Paris Fair for Buyers to Be Held in May Despite War

Despite the great call on the energies of the French nation brought about by work in defense of the country, every branch of industry, agriculture, and commerce will be represented at the tenth Paris fair between May 1 and 15, according to a statement yesterday by the Comite de la Foire of Paris. To facilitate examination by buyers all the machinery and products have been divided in twenty classes, ranging from food to motive power and general machine tools.

Grocery Held Up and $75 Taken in Sheridan Road

An armed man held up Gilbert Werner, owner of a grocery at 4713 Sheridan road, his wife, Mrs. Caroline Werner, and Thomas O'Donnell, a clerk, in the grocery yesterday and took $75 from the cash register. The bandit, still holding the revolver, backed into Sheridan road while many automobiles were passing. Werner followed him but was driven back into the store. The man fled.

No Man Knows the Limit of the HUDSON SUPER-SIX

A hundred rivalries have proved it the greatest motor car performer that's built. Never has a single type won all the worth-while records. But it still is an enigma. Every month reveals some new supremacies—some unguessed possibilities

We called the Super-Six, when it first came out, a 76-horsepower motor. That was 80 per cent more efficiency than was obtained from the same size theretofore.

Since then we have seen it develop vastly more power than that.

We watched it break all the speed records for stock cars. Then it broke its own records by still bigger margins.

In a hundred cities Super-Sixes broke the records on local hills. Then one day, in competition with twenty of the world's famous mountain racing cars, all specially built, a Super-Six special broke the record up Pike's Peak, and became the world's master hill-climber.

A stock Super-Six chassis broke the 24-hour record, to prove supreme endurance. And broke it by 52 per cent.

A Super-Six touring car, heavily loaded, ran from San Francisco to New York. It broke the record of a famous Eight by some 2½ days.

But the car wasn't even fazed. So we turned around and went back, and again broke the record.

How Long Will It Last?

For 14 months, in the severest tests known, we have tried to prove how long a Super-Six will last. But we haven't a line on it.

We have run a Super-Six at record-breaking speed for over 3000 miles. But no part or bearing in the Super-Six showed evidence of wear.

Few of us, probably, will ever know how long a Super-Six will last.

A New Condition

The result, we know, is such performance, such endurance as never was known before. But we have no idea of the limits.

Be Glad It Is a Six

Men should be glad that this great motor is a light and simple Six. That was always, save for vibration, the ideal motor type. And now in smoothness the Super-Six excels all other types.

All these supremacies are attained without adding size or cylinders. We still have the Six simplicity. And this year, by a gasoline saver we greatly increase its economy.

In the past year we have brought Hudson bodies up to the Super-Six standard. Now every Hudson Super-Six looks the ruler that it is.

We built 25,000 last year, yet thousands were unable to get delivery and were disappointed. We shall build 30,000 this year. Just think how much better the Super-Six is known, and therefore how much greater will be the demand. A fine-car buyer who is well informed can have no other choice.

You will save delay—and perhaps disappointment—if you see the Hudson now.

LOEB ATTACKS ALD. MERRIAM AND ROSENTHAL

Says Seventh Ward Council Member Is Menace to School Policies.

Jacob M. Loeb, president of the school board, issued a reply yesterday to the statement given out by Lessing Rosenthal, former president of the Municipal Voters' league, which championed the cause of Ald. Charles E. Merriam in the Seventh ward.

Mr. Loeb not only attacks Mr. Rosenthal, but minces no words in saying that Ald. Merriam has stood for policies that would throw open the schools to politics, and also asserts that Merriam was dominated by Miss Margaret Haley, business agent of "The Teachers' union."

Statement by Loeb.

Mr. Loeb's statement follows, in part:

"Mr. Lessing Rosenthal, the high minded, dignified former president of the Municipal Voters' league, presumes to tell the people of the Seventh ward what they owe to themselves and Chicago. Mr. Rosenthal is, I believe, that same distinguished, unbiased adherent of good government who only lately undertook to persuade Mr. Flannagan, the Democratic candidate for alderman of the Seventh ward, to withdraw in favor of Charles E. Merriam.

"Mr. Rosenthal is, I believe, that same clean and disinterested guardian of our municipal political life, who only lately promised Mr. Flannagan that he would be 'taken care of and rewarded' if he did so withdraw. It seems that Mr. Rosenthal, the reformer, has allowed himself to stoop to the practices of the ward politician.

School Issue Vital.

"Before the recent primary there was one paramount issue, as now—the future and welfare of the 350,000 school children of Chicago. That issue Merriam and his supporters have studiously ignored. I, as president of the board of education, am constrained herein to refer to it.

"The fair and honest Mr. Rosenthal might have included (had he not overlooked his fairness and honesty) in his 'six factors to be taken into account in the present situation,' the fact:

"That Merriam had consorted with the insidious forces bent on undermining our public schools: That he has been the spokesman and tool of the Teachers' union in the city council: That he has been instrumental in helping to debase the noble and sacred profession of teaching and making of it a trade.

"The fact that Merriam, the student of science of government, indorsed the elective school board, knowing that it would irrevocably involve the school system in petty politics and make every teacher part of a political machine.

Cowed by Miss Haley.

"The fact that he was leader among the aldermen who were dominated and cowed by Margaret Haley, business agent of the Teachers' union: That at her behest he would not confirm school board appointees who refused similarly to be dominated and cowed: That with these appointees stood and fell Charles E. Peterson, an efficient and capable chairman of the finance committee. But he was fearless—he had voted for the Loeb rule on principle. His reputation was assassinated—Charles E. Merriam was chief executioner.

"The fact that he took a prominent part in the spectacular investigation by the council committee on schools: That Margaret Haley was in attendance at the committee sessions, interrogated witnesses and coached the inquisitors. That then and throughout his council career he had in mind first and always his political future and the possible advancement of his political fortunes through the labor vote.

"The fact that the same noisy and perfidious manifestations which characterize Merriam's tactics with reference to the school question also characterize his tactics with reference to other municipal questions."

TO ALL LOYAL AMERICANS!

Will you stand by your country if war comes?

We hope and work for peace, but if war comes, THE COUNTRY will need two things, men and money.

Rich and Poor must be ready to make patriotic sacrifices. But the Poor man will make the greatest sacrifice. He will do the bulk of the fighting; because he forms the bulk of the population. He will offer to his country more than life itself—for, if killed or disabled, he leaves his wife and children helpless, dependent on charity or the state.

But war does not only demand its toll of human life. It requires a LIMITLESS EXPENDITURE OF MONEY. Never in the history of wars has money been so necessary to military success (England alone is spending thirty-five million dollars a day as her share of the war's expense).

What then is the duty of all citizens of means, those who have a COMFORTABLE SURPLUS, and especially all who will remain at home protected by the sacrifice of the nation's young manhood? The least that can be done by the men and women with bank accounts, the men too old to fight, and all other people of means who do not go to the front, is to bear their share of the nation's burdens by the WHOLE LINE; by the free and prompt offering of their wealth to the nation's cause. America needs more than spoken loyalty from its citizens who stay at home. It needs real support.

If we have war, the burden of fighting must be carried by those who are physically strong and fit to fight. The burden of finance must be borne by those who are financially strong and able to give.

Above all the war must be paid for as it proceeds, in dollars as well as in lives. There must be no crushing legacy of bonded debt to be paid in taxes by the men who have done the fighting, and their children. Let us make this a cash war, a pay-as-you-enter war. Let all loyal citizens who have incomes above their immediate necessities volunteer their wealth.

The people of the United States have never failed to respond to their country's need. They never will. In our civil war a million men (a quarter of the whole population of military age) volunteered at Lincoln's call during the first year. But the nation's private fortunes did not volunteer. They declared for patriotism, while they profited on the country's necessity. A congressional committee disclosed seventeen million dollars of graft in contracts for less than fifty millions. The public need not be reminded of the experiences during the Spanish-American war. Let us not forget these bitter lessons of history.

PLEDGE

I hereby demand that the congress of the United States shall immediately enact legislation providing substantially for the following war measures:

1. That, in case of war, all net incomes of $5,000 or over shall be subject to the following annual graduated war contributions:

On all net incomes from $5,000 to $10,000 a contribution of 2½ per cent.

On all incomes over $10,000 a year, a contribution increasing on a sliding scale, beginning at 10 per cent, and rising to a point which will permit of no individual retaining an annual net income in excess of $100,000 during the war.

2. That no war supplies or war service, including transportation, shall be furnished to the government at a net profit of more than 3½ per cent.

3. That no wholesaler or retailer shall sell food or other basic necessities of life during the war at a profit larger than 6 per cent.

4. That intentional failure to supply the government with correct figures as to incomes and profits on such sales and service shall be a felony punishable by imprisonment.

I pledge myself to support and use my influence, insofar as I am able, to further the prompt enactment into law of such measure.

(Cut out this pledge, sign it, and mail to committee.)

Committees will be organized in every section of the country to insure the immediate adoption of this legislation. One hundred thousand volunteers are needed at once to carry on this work. Every governor, mayor, chamber of commerce and civic association should appoint local committees to co-operate in putting the country on a sound financial basis in case of war. Simultaneous with the introduction of the bills in the national congress, endorsement by every state legislature, sitting at this time, should be urged.

All educational, religious, and civic bodies are invited to endorse this plan. Act at once. Send money. We need it to carry on this work. It will be used for nothing else.

(Fill out, sign, and mail now. American Committee on War Finance, 70 Fifth avenue, New York.)

I hereby volunteer my services. I will work to get pledges signed. Please send me a supply of pledge forms.

HOT VOLLEYS END CAMPAIGN FOR ALDERMEN

Hoyne and Ald. Merriam Join Forces in Eleventh Hour Alliance.

The aldermanic campaign practically closed last night with the verbal artillery reverberating through all of the thirty-five wards.

A few Sunday meetings will be held in the river wards and on the west side, and a parting shot will be fired here and there tomorrow, but the forty-two centimeter stuff was about all used up yesterday.

Expects 425,000 Votes.

Chief Clerk Egan of the election board looks for a vote Tuesday of about 425,000, or a little more than 50 per cent of the registered total. A large vote is anticipated in the wards where the Merriam and Hoyne forces have been appealing to the people to smash the city hall crowd.

Elaborate police arrangements were made yesterday by the election commissioners. The Eighteenth and Twenty-first wards, particularly, will be policed on a larger scale than has been attempted heretofore.

The closing hours of the battle witnessed State's Attorney Hoyne and Ald. Charles E. Merriam doing teamwork in the spectacular spots against the party ballot.

Invades Thirty-third.

In addition to issuing a formal statement, urging the Seventh ward voters to disregard party lines and vote for Mr. Merriam, the state's attorney invaded the Thirty-third ward and made a speech for D. I. Jarrett, the Buck-Crowe candidate on the Democratic ticket. At this meeting, too, Mr. Hoyne advised the voters to disregard the party label, declaring that he considered it a Democrat's duty to vote for a Republican if the latter was the better candidate, and for Democrats especially to vote for Merriam in the Seventh ward. He also ripped into the city hall forces, again declaring the present administration to be corrupt, lazy, and inefficient.

The Fetzer people in the Seventh ward countered with the explanation that Mr. Hoyne now is paying back Ald. Merriam for the service Merriam rendered the prosecutor in the election last fall when he took the stump and urged the people to elect Hoyne, at the time picturing the city hall as flying the "black flag of piracy."

May Swing Election.

The Hoyne-Merriam coalition was counted on by many of the leaders to swing the election at the last minute in the wards where the fight is close, and particularly the Seventh and Thirty-third.

In his formal statement addressed to the voters of the Seventh ward Mr. Hoyne said:

"In my opinion all citizens who place the public welfare ahead of partisanship, whether Democrats, Republicans, or independents, should support Merriam for reëlection. I care nothing for the party affiliations of any man who is a candidate for alderman or for any other municipal position. Observation has convinced me that party labels should be disregarded in the selection of all local officials. Certainly no Democrat should hesitate for party reasons to give his support to Merriam at this election.

Bulwark in Council.

"During the last two years he has been the main bulwark of defense in the council against the plundering schemes of a corrupt city administration. Nothing that has happened in Chicago politics for years has given such aid and comfort to the vicious interests in the community as the failure of the people of the Seventh ward at the recent primary to insure Ald. Merriam's return to the city council."

Eighteenth Ward Seethes.

The Eighteenth ward seethed up to the last minute, several clashes taking place along West Madison street among the Saturday night crowds which were about evenly divided between partisans of Grogan and Touhy.

John R. Lewis, the Republican candidate, who has been given scant attention in the campaign, jumped to the center of the stage yesterday with a sizzling statement directed against both Grogan and Touhy.

POLITICAL NOTES

The final meeting for George F. Iliff, Democratic candidate for alderman in the Third ward, will be held tomorrow afternoon in the Indiana theater, Forty-third street and Calumet avenue. It will be a woman's meeting.

City Clerk Joseph Siman will address the "home folks" this afternoon at the headquarters of the Tenth ward Republican headquarters. Representative Thomas Curran sends out the announcement with the postscript: "Come one, come all."

The final Democratic rally in the Thirteenth ward will be held this afternoon at the headquarters, 3230 West Madison street. County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer and Roger C. Sullivan are billed as the headliners.

The Young Men's Independent league of the Thirty-first ward, supporting James A. Long, Democrat, for alderman, will meet this afternoon in Lindquist's hall.

Attorney General Edward J. Brundage is billed to speak this afternoon in St. Josaphat's school hall in the Twenty-fourth ward in behalf of Ald. Herman E. Gnadt. Superior Court Clerk John Kjellander also is on the program.

The Twenty-fifth ward battle is going to a hot finish, with the Republican forces waking up only at the last minute. A committee of 300 leaders in the ward, men and women, last night issued an appeal to the voters to do their duty Tuesday by reëlecting Ald. Capitain.

Ald. Merriam yesterday issued a special bulletin on the Ninth ward, urging the voters to support Ald. Vanderbilt. "He deserves the support of voters of the Ninth ward without regard to national party affiliation," reads the Merriam statement.

Frank F. Roeder, Democratic candidate for alderman in the Twenty-fourth ward, resents the report of the Municipal Voters' league that he was a bartender for Joseph A. Weber. He says that he may have helped out at times, but never was paid for it and never asked any pay. It was a voluntary service.

Bathing beaches and playgrounds for the Twenty-first ward and better sanitary and housing conditions were among measures advocated by Robert H. McCormick, Republican aldermanic candidate at two meetings yesterday. The largest meeting was held at the McCormick headquarters, 1120 North Clark street.

STAY AT HOMES MAY GIVE CITY 'WORST COUNCIL'

Voters Must Turn Out if Aldermanic Body Is Not to Be Weakened.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Chicago's new city council, to be elected next Tuesday, is certain to be weaker than the present one. There is danger that it may be the worst council the city has had in years.

If the danger is to be avoided the "stay at homes" must go to the polls. A light vote spells retirement for honest, able aldermen. It means placing in the city council for two years inexperienced men, some of whom are unfitted for council duties and some who are unfit for them. The result would not alone injure the city as a city. It would hurt every citizen, including the "stay at home," individually.

The aldermanic election is only forty-eight hours away. The last licks have been put in on the campaigns. The only activity continuing is that among the organization workers. The speeches have all been made. It is time the independent minded voter reached his decision.

Fear Last Hour Tricks.

Several wards have almost identical situations. They are Republican wards in which able, honest, experienced Republican aldermen are running for reëlection and are menaced by city hall opposition which might resort to eleventh hour submarining.

Those wards and the candidates—in varying degrees of danger—are the following:

Sixth—A. A. McCormick.
Eighth—John E. Tyden.
Ninth—Hiram Vanderbilt.
Seventeenth—Lewis D. Sitts.
Twenty-third—Thos. O. Wallace.
Twenty-fifth—Henry D. Capitan.
Twenty-sixth—William F. Lipps.
Twenty-eighth—Harry E. Littler.
Thirty-second—Albert J. Fisher.

Other Good Men.

Other good aldermen are up for reëlection under different circumstances. Ald. John R. Anderson in the Thirteenth, Ald. Herman E. Gnadt in the Twenty-fourth, and Ald. John Hrubec in the Twenty-ninth are Republicans in territory now considered Democratic. They also are threatened with city hall opposition, but it is believed the independent vote can elect them if it will turn out. Ald. Otto Kerner is a first class alderman, but he is a Democrat in a strongly Democratic ward and considered sure of reëlection.

In two wards where there is no candidate for reëlection, identical situations also have arisen. Those are the Third and the Thirty-third, and in each of them the battles have been record breakers for an "off year." In each instance the city hall forces won in the Republican primary, but that defeat was only the signal for redoubled vigor by the opposition—vigor placed behind a well qualified Democrat, with a big appeal to the independent vote. Their slogan is: "No Thompson tool for us!"

In the Third this joining of Democratic and anti-Thompson forces promises to elect George F. Iliff over Frederick W. Patterson, who, as W. A. Bither's candidate, defeated two good Republican aldermen for renomination in successive years because they would not follow the orders of the administration. Last year Patterson was beaten by 2,819.

The Lundin-Forsberg-Miller-Hitzman nominee in the Thirty-third is Irwin R. Hazen. Delta I. Jarrett, the Democrat, appears on the ballot through the activity of the opposition Republican camp. An immense independent vote has pledged its support for him. Two years ago Hazen was twice rejected by the ward, once in the Republican primary, and again in the election when he ran as an independent.

Figth in the Seventh.

Only slight resemblance exists between these wards and the Seventh. There the city hall organization was joined by the anti-Merriam forces in nominating William R. Fetzer, an attorney well qualified for the office he seeks. The Democratic candidate, Leo J. Flannagan, was not a man who could be supported by the Merriam following, and during the last few days their resentment over Merriam's defeat has led them to adopt a plan of writing Merriam's name in on the ballot.

It is believed that none of Merriam's experienced advisers expects him to be elected in this way. They urge the plan as a "protest" measure. Men of sound political judgment say the only effect it can have beyond registering "indignation" is the possible splitting of the Republican strength to an extent that will permit Flannagan to slip into office. He is not qualified to represent this ward in the council. Fetzer is.

Undesirables Running.

In two wards undesirables are running and may be elected if the better element is not fully aroused. In each of these cases State's Attorney Hoyne has proved that flagrant ballot frauds aided the nomination of the objectionable nominee.

In the Twenty-first independents have rallied and must continue to rally to Robert H. McCormick. Not only is he exceptionally worthy of election, but the opposing candidate is far below the grade of men sent to the council from this ward. That man is "Barney" Conlon, now a legislator, but still the same "Barney" who tended bar for John F. O'Malley not many years ago. It has been many years since the Twenty-first was disgraced by a bad alderman. The choking off of the fraud machinery is considered the last assurance necessary for McCormick's election.

Should Defeat Grogan.

Another and a similar Barney—Grogan this time—is seeking reëlection in the Eighteenth. Since the days of old John Brennan ended the Eighteenth has insisted upon decent representation in the council. For that reason when Grogan defeated John J. Touhy in the Democratic primary and Ald. Carl T. Murray through a Grogan trick lost the Republican nomination to an unknown of no strength the decent voters of both the Democratic and Republican ranks jumped in behind Touhy as an independent candidate.

Forces for civic good from outside the ward joined the movement and in spite of Grogan's lavish expenditure of money the independent vote can elect Touhy if it comes out on Tuesday.

Socialists Losing.

The chances of success for two Socialist nominees who were considered leading candidates in their wards only a few weeks ago have been fading in exact proportion to the growth of the wave of patriotism sweeping over Chicago with the nearer approach of war. Their ironclad subservience to their party, its opposition to preparedness, the calling of its "emergency" national convention for April 9, and the convening of congress tomorrow to consider war against Germany have contributed to drive votes away from these two men.

In the Twenty-seventh ward circulars printed in German urge the pro-German vote to support John C. Kennedy because of his opposition to war. Kennedy's "bloody revolution" speech at Hodcarriers' hall a few weeks ago has been repeated throughout the ward. His effort last Wednesday to stop the city council from declaring itself in favor of universal military training was a black eye for him.

Trace Food Riots.

All these things have been factors as well against J. Louis Engdahl, Socialist nominee in the Fifteenth. He and Ald. W. E. Rodriguez, who with Kennedy has fought for socialistic issues in the council, married sisters. The charge was circulated during the last two days that food riots in the Fifteenth ward were traceable to Socialist speeches in favor of violent demonstrations against the cost of living. They are said to have been made at meetings in connection with Engdahl's campaign and to have resembled Kennedy's "bloody revolution" speech.

In the Twenty-seventh James H. McFarland, a well qualified candidate, is supported by all the Republicans save a few city hall allies, who have put David H. Grant in the race as an independent. Grant's race has not assumed the proportions that would warrant independent Republican voters in withdrawing their support from McFarland. The Democrat, Edward E. Britton, has the support of all factions of his party.

In the Fifteenth the race is said to be close between Daniel A. Roberts, an assistant corporation counsel, on the Republican end, and Edward J. Kaindl, who is putting up the more aggressive campaign, on the Democratic ticket.

Laundry Driver Waylaid.

Three robbers waylaid Harry Petersen, 1227 Fletcher street, a laundry driver, last night in the rear of 17 Chambers place and robbed him of $45.

The Cadillac Landaulet, $3935.

SUPERB STYLE—DIGNITY—CHARM—DISTINCTION OFFERED ONLY IN THE CADILLAC LANDAULET

TODAY the one type of car of real exclusiveness is the year 'round Landaulet. The world over it is the car of the distinguished.

Its charm, for all who value style and comfort, is undeniable. For bright spring and autumn days its openness is most refreshing.

And when the sun beats down or the wind blows cold it offers complete protection at a moment's notice. The back folds up and the top slides back easily and without delay.

This latest Landaulet of Cadillac design has many exclusive features. With the top closed the rear seat passengers have as free a view as in any limousine. And the top is so secured that no rattle or leak can possibly develop.

Room—unusual room—is provided in the passenger compartment. The extra long wheel-base of the new Cadillac has made this possible. Even the folding seats now are comfortable and the doors are extra wide.

But all that art could do in body building would still not make a perfect car—but for the Cadillac chassis. Cadillac charm of performance is the charm you will never do without—once you have experienced it.

Up hill and down dale—thru mud and snow and sand—the masterful Cadillac is as steady and able as you have hoped a car would some day be.

Cadillac power, Cadillac pick-up, Cadillac velvety smoothness, are not to be had in any other car—any more than Cadillac good-value and Cadillac low up-keep. The Cadillac is a standard of itself—so high it is admitted the Standard of the World.

Once try this type of car in summer and you'll have no other for year 'round use. Its comfort will win you from open types forever.

In fact, today, demand for enclosed cars has swung from fall to spring; while body makers still produce for fall alone. Result: a scarcity of enclosed cars among makes you would consider.

We saw the trend and are prepared. The Cadillac clientele, particularly, leans more and more to the finer enclosed types for year 'round use. The car you want—Landaulet, Town Car or Limousine—is here to see, ready for prompt delivery.

HER PITY CHILLED AT HIS 4TH SLIP, SUING WIFE SAYS

Couple's Life Is Moving Picture of Partings and Reunions.

Mrs. Charles H. Lawrence's marital woes came to the climax shortly after the bleak day in January, 1916, when she tried to adjust the picture of the old home from a stepladder.

Her husband was kind in the weary days that followed when her broken kneecaps were beginning to mend. In her bill for separate maintenance, filed yesterday, she admits he loaded her room in the hospital with flowers and again and again begged her forgiveness for having the picture around the house—and for other things, she says.

It wasn't the picture, Mrs. Lawrence says. It was her discovery, she says, that he and Pearl Gilman—"Pearl of the Movies"—had been seen in the cafés, the theaters, hotels—everywhere—together. She told her husband his friendship for the actress must end. He scoffed at her lack of Platonism, she declares.

Womanlike, She Forgave.

Time at last mended her knees and further softened her husband's heart. In a transport of penitence he promised to be true. And, womanlike, she forgave.

And then, charges unhappy Mrs. Lawrence, came Mrs. Mary Floyd, wife of her husband's business associate. There were rumors, she alleges, that Mr. Lawrence was a frequent visitor at the Alexandria hotel, where Mrs. Floyd and her husband reside, and to her came stories of theater parties and luncheons. Again Mrs. Lawrence became chill. Again her husband ran up a flower bill and pleaded forgiveness.

At last obdurate, Mrs. Lawrence yesterday filed her bill for separate maintenance. Three times they parted, she says, and she was about to forgive him again, when, she alleges, she discovered a fourth transgression.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence were married in 1900, and, according to the bill, their marriage has been a series of separations and reconciliations. In September, 1908, she alleges, she first discovered her husband was untrue to her, so she took her daughter and went to California. A reconciliation followed the next spring.

Mr. Lawrence is a grain and commission merchant, and a member of the board of trade. He refused last night to comment on his wife's suit.

Floyds Surprised at Suit.

"This is really a surprise," said Mrs. Floyd. "My husband and I have known Mr. Lawrence for years. He was often a guest at our home. I do not think Mrs. Lawrence means what she has said. The bill was probably drawn up by her attorney, without questioning her. I have met her and she is a very charming woman."

"Both my wife and I are fond of Mrs. Lawrence," said Mr. Floyd. "I do not think she can be aware Mrs. Floyd's name has been dragged into the suit."

"BANDIT QUEEN" LEADS POLICE AFTER HUSBAND

Mrs. Lillian Williams, 22 years old, 741 North Dearborn street, confessing herself to be the "bandit queen" who with five robbers held up the saloon of Fred Hering at 2200 West Erie street on Wednesday night, set out last night with the police in an endeavor to find other members of the band. She is said to be the wife of Sam Williams, one of the gang now sought. Mrs. Williams' arrest was brought about by the capture of Martin Block, the bandits' chauffeur. He confessed and the police then found Mrs. Williams. Later they took Albert Hudson, a teamster, and William H. Lawson, a cook, 51 West Erie street.

Urges Votes for Public Comfort Station Bonds

Indorsement of the public comfort station bond issue of $150,000, to be submitted to the voters for ratification at the election next Tuesday, was announced yesterday by the Association of Commerce.

Chicago has only two, as compared with twenty-one in New York and seven in Boston. The bond issue is intended to provide funds for six stations.

Missing Youth Elopes with Miss Estelle O'Neil

Ralph Lake and Miss Estelle M. H. O'Neil went to South Bend, Ind., yesterday and surprised their Chicago friends by securing a marriage license.

"My nephew has been missing from home several days," said Frank Lake of 3423 West Sixty-third street, "but I have no information about a marriage ceremony. I have heard much of Miss O'Neil, who is teaching somewhere."

$75,000 JEWELS HAVE LAW MAZE AS SETTING NOW

Legal Technicalities Rise After Seizure of Mrs. Jordan's Gems.

Nice legal questions must be decided before Mrs. Joseph Jordan, white wife of a Negro song composer, will know whether in bringing more than 1,000 precious stones to the United States without payment of duty she was guilty of smuggling.

The jewels—diamonds, rubies, garnets, emeralds, and amethysts, valued at $75,000—are now in government vaults and Mrs. Jordan, at her home at 3406 South Park avenue, is much perturbed. Nearly all the valuables were given to her by her father, R. B. Dobell, who, she says, is an East Indian nitrate and cotton trader, now living in London. Reference books and other data, however, fail to show a R. B. Dobell as a prominent London merchant.

Once British Subject.

Mrs. Jordan declares she brought the jewels here "as a British subject." The law allows this, but the question is: Did she forfeit her rights as a British subject when she married Jordan, an American citizen? If an American she could not bring in the jewels without duty, it is said, though authorities on customs law say that, since she was coming to the United States to remain permanently, and if she did not intend to sell the stones, her act may not be construed as smuggling.

Three stenographers were busy yesterday compiling the testimony of Mrs. Jordan, taken by Special Deputy Collector John R. Ford, who will send it to Washington.

Didn't Intend to Sell.

"I did not intend to sell the jewels," said Mrs. Jordan to Mr. Ford. "My father gave me the largest piece, a necklace, for a Christmas present in 1915. He bought it from Wartski Brothers, Regent street, London, for $25,000.

"I decided to allow the sale of some of the jewels when my husband wanted to use some money in putting up a $75,000 office building at Thirty-sixth and State streets. I refused at first, but finally consented. I have plenty of money in England in the form of bonds, but I can't get it because of the war."

Mrs. Jordan made her statement to Mr. Ford under oath, but refused to sign it. She said she wanted to read it over first and she is expected to visit Mr. Ford's office tomorrow for that purpose.

Girl of 15 Missing; Mother Asks Search

Fifteen year old Elsie Conrad played "hookey" from school last Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. On Thursday she appeared with a "Please excuse Elsie" note, ostensibly written by her mother, who lives at 1862 Bissell street. The teacher doubted the signature and sent the girl home for another note. Elsie didn't go home and upon learning the circumstances the police were asked to look for her. Her mother fears she may have fallen under the influence of "white slavers." When last seen she wore no hat, a blue coat, blue dress, and black shoes. She has brown hair.

Fight Injunction to Stop Juvenile Court Salaries

State's Attorney Hoyne has designated Assistant State's Attorney Hogan to resist through the courts the petition of Edson R. Gilbert and William H. Dunn to enjoin the payment of salaries of officers and employés of the Juvenile court.

Mr. Hogan will prepare a demurrer to the petition for the injunction, and in the meantime the county treasurer and county clerk will refuse to pay the salaries until the court determines the matter.

Curtis Form-A-Tractor

Does the work of the average farm tractor
A powerful machine that quickly converts any auto—large or small—into a serviceable tractor for field or belt work. Nothing to remove—not a fender, wheel, or hub cap. Our patented device securely locks the wheels, a bolt connects the under-frame to front axle, and away you go. Guaranteed not to injure auto in any respect.

Requires only half the engine power
The auto engine speed never exceeds normal operation—equal to average road speed of 20 miles per hour. Less wear on the auto, since the engine merely transmits its speed to the reducing gears on tractor. Develops twelve times the pulling power of the auto engine. A giant exhaust fan prevents motor heating by forcing a current of air through the radiator at the rate of 20 miles an hour.

In the field
Does all the work of the average farm tractor. The Curtis Form-A-Tractor easily pulls 2 to 6 plows, according to power of auto engine. One man with the Curtis Form-A-Tractor attached to the average auto pulling a triple gang plow will do more work in a day than four men, four plows, and eight horses.

At the belt
Shift the gears into neutral, slip a belt on the drive pulley and in thirty seconds you are ready to run an ensilage cutter, separator, feed grinder, hay press, or any other farm machinery which ordinarily requires a 15 to 40 horse power engine.

Specifications
Weighs 1,000 pounds—one-fifth the weight of the average tractor. Built of high quality steel. Nickel steel roller bearings, constructed to take both radial and lateral strains, reduce friction to the minimum. Reducing pinions are of high carbon steel. With ordinary care will last a lifetime. The upkeep is the upkeep of the auto. The local garage man can make adjustments or repairs.

Wonderful proposition for distributors and dealers
Every farmer who owns an auto—regardless of make—is a live prospect. A second hand auto and a Curtis Form-A-Tractor will do the work of the average tractor and cost only half as much. Exclusive county rights are being assigned in order of application. Don't wait to write a letter—wire for full information—or, better yet—see the tractor at our Chicago offices. Offer withdrawn when 500 counties assigned, account of limited factory capacity.

Free subscription—Chicago Tractor News
If you own or rent a farm or want a territory—get on the free mailing list for the Chicago Tractor News. It's chock full of useful tractor information and tells all about the Curtis Form-A-Tractor—the most practical tractor for the farmer with eighty acres or over. Don't wait—wire!

Our Birthday Gift to You

ATLAS Taxicar Service is two years old today. In the short space of two years' time you have seen ATLAS Taxicar Service grow from a mere idea to a splendid commercial enterprise with a capital stock of $1,850,000. Through your patronage you have seen ATLAS more than make good its original promise to supply the finest taxicar service in the world at the lowest possible rates. You have enjoyed the luxury of riding in ATLAS Taxicars with the same feeling of comfort and distinction as if you were riding in a $5,000 motor of your own.

And now, to give you additional evidence of the sincerity of ATLAS intention to keep on making ATLAS good service even better and ATLAS low rates even lower, we announce a new schedule of low rates and a new supply of ATLAS Taxicars.

New Low Rates for Atlas Taxicar Service

New Atlas Rates		City Ordinance Allows
First half mile	40c	First half mile	40c
Each additional half mile	10c	Each additional half mile	20c
Each additional passenger above one	10c	Each additional passenger above one	15c
Each 7½ minute waiting	10c	Each 4 minute waiting	10c

Limousine and Touring Car Hour Rate from Passenger's Starting Point to Dismissal Within the City Limits:

New Atlas Rates	City Ordinance Allows
5 passengers or more....$3.00 per hour	5 passengers or more....$4.50 per hour

The above rates go into effect just as quickly as we can have our meters changed to meet the new conditions.

These new ATLAS low rates are lower not only than the City ordinance requirements for commonplace, unkempt "cabs" but they are without question the lowest rates for which you can secure such luxurious, gratifyingly good Taxicar Service anywhere in the world. To our present large equipment we are about to add 150 brand new ATLAS Taxicars — distinctively designed, highest grade Winton and Chalmers limousines and touring cars. The broader the range of ATLAS Service becomes, the better ATLAS Taxicars must become. We can't afford to lessen the quality simply because conditions demand an increase in the service.

ATLAS Taxicars look about as much like the average "taxi" as a millionaire's private steam yacht looks like a fisherman's makeshift skiff. You can't tell the difference between an ATLAS Taxicar and the luxurious private motors of the wealthy. And ATLAS Service is just as satisfactory in every way as ATLAS Taxicars and ATLAS low rates.

You can't whistle out the window and expect to see an ATLAS loafing at the curbstone. ATLAS Taxicars are not that kind. But you can 'phone Calumet 3500 at any hour out of the twenty-four and a luxurious ATLAS Taxicar—thoroughly and spotlessly clean and perfectly appointed in every way—will leave one of the FOUR conveniently situated ATLAS Service stations and be at your door in a jiffy.

We pay ATLAS chauffeurs liberal, straight salaries because we can't afford to have any but the best men we can hire to drive our cars. We could hire inexperienced, reckless drivers and get them at a big price saving by paying them on a commission basis. But we don't want men who will tear through the streets at breakneck speed, risk our patrons' safety and take chances with our cars, even though we could get them to work for us for a commission.

SAYS SHORTAGE OF FOOD AND CASH PERILS GERMANY

Nation Near Bankruptcy, but Determined to Win, View of Writer.

BY OSCAR KING DAVIS.

[Copyright: 1917: In U. S. and Canada by the New York Times Company.]

[Mr. Davis has just returned from Berlin, where he was staff correspondent of the New York Times.]

The biggest question in the world today is, How long can Germany stand it? Is she starving? Is she going bankrupt? Is she running out of raw materials? Is she exhausting her man power? The question has other variants, but they all mean the same thing. How long can Germany hold out against the pressure of the allied blockade, against the military warfare waged by all the entente powers?

The answer to this question carries with it for most of the world the answer to the question of how long the war is going to continue. For it is only in Germany and the countries allied to her that one finds any substantial confidence that Germany may yet prove to be the victor in the struggle.

Outside of Germany one does not find the same readiness to believe in the possibility of economic or military exhaustion for the entente allies that is constantly expressed with vigor and enthusiasm, if not with conviction, in Berlin and other German centers.

Seeking Facts in Germany.

I set out for Berlin a few months ago in the hope that I would be able to travel about Germany and observe conditions with my own eyes, so that I might acquire information on which to base the answers to these questions. I was told it would be entirely possible and not difficult for me to obtain accurate information as to Germany's economic condition.

A great deal of information was placed at my disposal in Berlin and elsewhere about Germany—up to the time of the rupture of diplomatic relations with the United States. It was comparatively easy to obtain material upon certain phases of Germany's economic condition. But along other lines investigation was more difficult and at times impossible.

The call for statistics did not evoke enthusiastic response, and often the reply was made that the subject inquired about was a "military matter" concerning which no information—or at least no exact information—could be supplied.

Difficult to Obtain Food.

But authentic information did come into my possession which led to definite conclusions, which may be summarized as follows:

1. As to food: A considerable portion of the German people are suffering from two causes; food insufficient in quantity and variety, and difficulty in obtaining the quantity allowed by government regulation.

2. The German government is deliberately underfeeding a section of the people in order to furnish larger supplies to the army and those who are contributing directly to the maintenance of the war.

3. Germany cannot long survive another failure of the potato crop, such as she had last year. If 1917 does no better by her than 1916 did she will go to smash.

In Danger of Bankruptcy.

4. Germany is in serious danger of bankruptcy. She is rapidly approaching the point where the interest on her mounting war debt will consume her annual increment of wealth. On the estimates of her own financiers her margin of safety can last little more than a year. Its exhaustion will bring her face to face with disaster.

5. Reserve stocks of raw materials and manufactured goods either are exhausted or have been confiscated by the government for military use. Outside of the innermost circle no one knows what amounts of raw materials are available. Every indication is that Germany is hard pushed, especially for cotton and hides. One hears much about substitutes, and one meets substitutes on many occasions, but the cloak of military secrecy covers the subject.

6. Germany is still able to maintain her fighting forces at full strength, but she is doing it by depleting the ranks of labor behind the fighting lines. This depletion of labor menaces her power of endurance by threatening her in food production and other ways. She is approaching the limit of her man power, but her margin here is probably somewhat greater than in finance.

No Fat for Children.

The Germans are not starving today, but certain elements of the population are distinctly undernourished. There is scarcity of food, but it is not the scarcity alone that inflicts hardship upon the people.

Chief among the undernourished elements of the population are children between 4 and 10 years of age. In their case the trouble is due principally to scarcity of proper food. There is great shortage of milk, and there is also almost complete lack of fats in the childrens' diet.

The aged and infirm also suffer greatly for want of their accustomed food, some of them even more because of the hardship attendant upon obtaining the supply of food available for them. For it is not merely the scarcity of food but in many cases even more the difficulty of getting what the law and regulations allow that causes suffering for many persons.

Rules Govern Food Sales.

The government having taken supervision of the food distribution, everything is done according to regulation. There is regulation after regulation. They come in a never ending and constantly shifting procession.

But the largest class of those who feel the hardship of government management of their food supply is that made up of the lower strata of the so-called middle class—the less well paid, chiefly women, who are not yet so poor as to be willing to throw themselves wholly upon the government, yet do not have sufficient money to meet the increased cost of living.

Despite this suffering, and conditions closely bordering upon starvation, the German people are still united and determined to see the war through. I believe that their determination is strong enough to carry them through the misery and hardship that remain before them until the new crops bring relief as to food.

I think they will put the food issue to the test of the 1917 harvests. Meantime they are exerting every energy to see to it that this year's crops shall be above normal. If the German leaders have their way, Germany will produce more food in 1917 than she ever produced in the best years of peace.

Last year, in all the stress of the allied attempts to bring her to starvation, Germany increased the number of her cattle and her swine. The German government made the meat ration of the people on the basis of a reserve supply. And the loyal Germans, who had been accustomed to eat one or two pounds of meat a day, received and got along with only one-half a pound a week.

Now they will go through to the next harvest. If that succeeds, they may go much further. If it fails the end will be not far off.

Civilian Weakness Apparent.

But even if the harvest is good this year, Germany will find herself facing collapse next winter because of her financial situation. There is no help for that except in cessation of the war or victory that will bring large indemnities; and even the Germans have pretty much given up talking about indemnities.

The great Gen. von Hindenburg, upon whom Germany relies with almost idolatrous confidence to bring her whole out of the war, recently boasted that Germany would win because, among other things, "France is bleeding white." But it is Germany that is bleeding white.

The telltale blood count is beginning to show the results of the consistent underfeeding of her people. The mounting interest charges are beginning to absorb all the red in her financial blood. The steadily decreasing number of male civilian laborers throughout the empire tells the same story. The refusal of her factory and mill men to take orders for foreign or even domestic shipment points to the same end.

Germany may go on for a year or more. Then she may be forced to make peace by want of food or money, or men, or all together.

SPEED

They Lost No Time Getting Married.

A happy looking couple came to the home of County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer at 2958 West Jackson boulevard last night and asked for a marriage license. A newspaper reporter accompanied them.

"Who are you, and what are your ages?" asked Mr. Sweitzer, with a chuckle.

"I am Rodney Talcott, 21, and live in South Bend, Ind.," replied the young man. "She is Marguerite E. Baldwin of Sparta, Wis. She's 21."

After they had procured the license they went to the home of Judge John R. Newcomer in the same neighborhood.

"We're in a hurry," said the bride. "Can't you make it fast, judge? We didn't want to wait until Monday, and now we want to make the 8:30 train for my home in Wisconsin."

"Why such a hurry?" said Judge Newcomer. But the answer came only in grins.

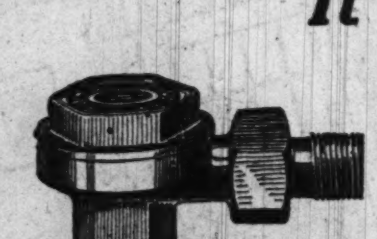
Out in the open man does not take cold

The cause of cold is not COLD
It is HEAT

COLDS are bred in your very home. The results of imperfect heating breed them. But where Dunham Vapor Heating is, there exists none of the unhealthy conditions that foster colds.

Instead, the air in every room may be fresh and warm. An even, genial heat pervades the whole home. Radiators do not—cannot—knock or pound. Temperature is automatically kept at either one of two predetermined levels. And all with minimum attention and unusual coal economy.

A little more costly to buy than old-fashioned, faulty equipment, the Dunham Vapor Heating System is worth more—in both material value and service. A steam fitter can Dunhamize a new or an already-built home. Write for full information immediately. Ask for a free copy of our invaluable book, "The 3 H's."



DUNHAM
Radiator Trap

This device is one of the fundamentals of the DUNHAM VAPOR HEATING SYSTEM. It is the trap known the world over to heating engineers as the device that revolutionized Vacuum steam heating. Leading architects everywhere use it. It makes impossible the presence of water in radiators, it prevents their pounding and knocking, reduces fuel consumption, causes the radiator to heat evenly and quickly, eliminates the hissing air valve and spurting water.

NASH Jeffery MOTORS

See us in our new daylight salesroom, corner Michigan and Twenty-third street. Open today.

This Jeffery Knows No Superior in the Field of Sixes

We repeat this and want you to know that it is true regardless of the price any six is selling for. In fact, most sixes that in any way measure up to Jeffery value sell for from one hundred to three hundred dollars more than the Jeffery. And they are not any better.

Statements are easy to make and in this case they are just as easy to prove. We will do it by putting the Jeffery Six through any test you want to name. And furthermore we will do it along side of any Six you want to pick.

You can start right in this very minute making a few comparisons and in that way see for yourself why the Jeffery is the greatest Six and all things considered the lowest priced Six in the industry. Read over the advertisements of six cylinder cars in this paper.

You will find sixes advertised at prices considerably more than the Jeffery. There's one at a little less than $1800, yet you can't find the difference in price in actual terms of motoring comfort, power or performance. Then another selling between $1600 and $1700, a car that lacks many of the features that have made the Jeffery Six a wonderful car, and there's nothing to take their place. About $1600 buys another Six that can't compare with the Jeffery. You will find this to be the case with every comparison you make.

And yet many of these cars have found it necessary to raise their prices one to two hundred dollars with practically no increase in value. Since the first of the year there has been no increase in Jeffery prices, yet the car is a bigger value. Many additional refinements have been made that add to its quality.

The Nash organization and the big factory at Kenosha are responsible for this. Nowhere is there a better or more complete motor car factory. Over ninety per cent of this car is manufactured in the Nash factory and turned out under the supervision of C. W. Nash, a man who has built more high grade motor cars than any other person in the industry.

BUT JUST HOW LONG THE PRICE OF $1465 will remain, frankly, we do not know. NOW you can take advantage of it and get the greatest motor car value for your money. In fact we have wondered how the Jeffery Six could be sold at such a low price when its actual value is considered.

The Jeffery Six has more alloy steel than any car within four hundred dollars of the price—a material that lasts longer than ordinary steel. The crank shaft of the motor is extremely heavy and inherently balanced, eliminating that vibration so common in most cars. The body is made of first grade white ash and double gauge metal. It stays sound and tight day in and day out. A careful examination will show you that this same high standard of quality is maintained throughout the car.

Let us show you why the Jeffery Six knows no superior in the field of Sixes. Put this car to any test you see fit. Pick out some hard, rough going and see how easily the Jeffery Six goes through it. Where is a hill that you have never seen taken on high?—let this Six show you that it can be done. And then watch its quick getaway in crowded street traffic. Compare its beauty with any car and you will find that the Jeffery Six is right up to the minute in style and finish.

Read What One Jeffery Owner Says

WHEN we bought our six cylinder, seven passenger Jeffery we gave you to understand that it would mean a sale if you could start your car at the bottom of Hubbard's Hill, coming toward Chicago, in high gear, and from a dead stop reach the top without going into first or second speeds at less than ten miles an hour.

This demonstration was made, the purchase effected and the car turned over to us. It has never yet failed to make this performance.—Name on request.

DIAMOND STARS IN BARE FIST BATTLE

CHERRY CIRCLE TEAM CAPTURES C. A. A. U. MEET

Total of 48 Points Wins Title—Maroons Tie I. A. C. for Second.

Table of Points

Chicago A. A.	48	Dubuque coll.	8
Univ. of Chi'go.	30	Chicago T'ners.	3
Illinois A. C.	30	Mystic A. C.	2

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

In one of the greatest indoor track meets held in Chicago, the team of the Chicago Athletic association last night won the Central A. A. U. track and field championships at the Second Regiment armory with forty-eight points. The University of Chicago, which was a contender for the title through most of the program, was tied for second place by the Illinois Athletic club in the last event, each totaling thirty points.

Jo Loomis, star of the C. A. A. team, and Joie Ray of the Illinois A. C. tied for individual honors. Each won three events, but the trophy went to Loomis because he ran on the winning relay team. Loomis won the fifty yard low hurdles, fifty yard dash, and running high jump.

Ray's Feat Exceptional.

Ray performed the exceptional feat of winning three distance races. One record was tied when McKeown of the C. A. A. equaled the Central A. A. U. record in the fifty yard hurdles. He leaped the barriers in :06 4-5.

The pole vault, which closed the meet, resulted in a bitter fight for points. It was won by Ed Knourek of the I. A. C. with a vault of 12 feet 8 inches. Jerry Fisher, captain of the Maroons, who won firsts in every other meet this season, finished second, keeping his team in a tie fo second. Buck and Hue of the C. A. A. got third and fourth places.

I. A. C. Comes from Behind.

The tricolor club team started weak, scoring strongly only in those events in which Ray was entered. Picking up 8 points in one of the closing events, the 1 mile race, in which the hardy distance star scored his third victory, the I. A. C. seriously threatened the Maroons for the first time. THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT

FOOZLED!

Frank Adams, formerly of French Lick Springs, but now at the Beverly Country club, had a new experience on his recent trip south. In company with Harry Turpie he visited the course of the New Orleans Country club. It was an off day so they had to take the only available caddie. Neither of them knew the course and the first hole is a blind one. Interrogating the club toter as to what lay behind the immediate horizon they discovered he was deaf and dumb.

MAROONS START BASEBALL PLAY WITH 12 TO 6 WIN

The University of Chicago baseball team pried the lid off of the local baseball season yesterday, defeating the Illinois Tool Workers team of the Commercial league, 12 to 6, on Stagg field between showers. Pat Page was without several players on account of school vacation and had to play first base himself. Marum and Larkin pitched for the Maroons. The former had slightly the better of the initial workout. Eight passes by the three pitchers of the losers gave the Maroons the game. Capt. Hart drove in six runs with a triple and a single. Score:

JIM DONALDSON AT CHICAGO GOLF

Jim Donaldson, the Aberdeen Scotchman who was professional at the Glen View club for seven years, has signed with the Chicago Golf club, succeeding Dave Foulis, who was there twenty-one years.

Donaldson came to this country seven years ago from England, where he gained an enviable reputation with the North Kent club of London. He came straight to Glen View. He is one of the leading playing professionals of the west and holds the open championship of the Chicago District Golf association.

The veteran professional will enter upon his duties at Wheaton this week. The Chicago Golf club is contemplating a great many changes in the present course. New traps and bunkers are to be installed this season, and many of the holes changed to place the course at the standard it enjoyed in former years. It is expected that Secretary Addison Stilwell will announce details of the plans this week.

Wendell Phillips ran away from Lane Tech in the scrap for the Chicago city high school heavyweight basketball championship, 22 to 11, in the Parker High school basket parlor. Twelve hundred raving fans crowded around the ringside and yelled their lungs out while the south siders were landing the title. The usual clashes of fists after such affairs were missing.

Lane put up a feeble passing game in the first half and Wendell Phillips started out to sew things up in the first few minutes. After all the damage was done the north siders got started, but the Red and Black team was so far ahead that there was never any doubt of the outcome. For the first four minutes the game was scoreless.

Weiss Scores First Basket.

The new champions were first to count when Left Guard Weiss batted the ball through the net. Zepp tossed a short basket and Weiss came back with another dandy goal from the center of the floor just as the quarter gun was fired, with Wendell Phillips leading, 6 to 0.

In the second period the short passing of the south siders bewildered the Lane boys. Wendell Phillips had the ball constantly during the session and swept down the floor in fine passing rushes. Zepp and Stewart sank easy short tosses and Zepp caged the first free throw of the game. The Lane guards dribbled to the center of the floor, but could not pass the ball under the basket. A phenomenal toss by Neville saved the tech team from a shutout as the half closed, 11 to 2.

Lane Changes Style.

After the intermission the north side quintet changed its tactics, using the short pass game instead of the long shots at the ring. Zepp and Stewart scored for Wendell Phillips and Neville and Norris for Lane in the only even period of the game. Both teams failed to profit on free throw tosses and the quarter ended with Phillips holding a 15 to 6 advantage.

Calder and Neville opened the final seven minute stretch with baskets from long range for Lane, but the Phillips passing game got under way again, and Weiss, Stewart, and Zepp scored, adding to the total of the champions before the final gun banged. Lineup:

CRAZY KENNEDY, DETECTIVE

Words AND Pictures

BY RING W. LARDNER

CHAPTER I.

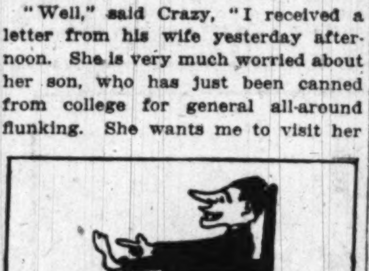
"DID you ever hear me speak of Ira Wolfgang?" said Crazy Kennedy one morning, taking a fresh chew.

"No," I denied.

"He," said Kennedy, "was a resident of Ottumwa, Ia., where I was born. He kept a grocery there. Now he is in the wholesale undertaking business here in town."

"What about him?" I inquired.

"Well," said Crazy, "I received a letter from his wife yesterday afternoon. She is very much worried about her son, who has just been canned from college for general all-around flunking. She wants me to visit her home and observe him face to face, and tell her for what walk in life he is fitted. I'd be grateful if you would accompany me. Perhaps you might help me. You never have yet, but I believe in the law of averages."



The foolishest looking young man I ever saw.

Without another word, pro or con, Kennedy and I donned our spring wraps and started for the Wolfgangs' house on the North Side.

CHAPTER 2.

"Oh, Mr. Kennedy," was Mrs. Wolfgang's greeting as she removed her gum, "I'm so glad to see you. And," glancing at me, "also your hook-nosed friend."

"This is Mr. Morrison," said Crazy, overlooking the palpable insult to me. "He is a reporter."

"Well," said Mrs. Wolfgang, "I should think he had a great nose for news or anything else."

Smiling pleasantly, she led us into a stylish living-room, where was seated the foolishest looking young man I ever saw.

"Stupid," said our hostess, addressing the youth, "this is Mr. Crazy Kennedy, the famous detective, and his tuba-nosed friend, Mr. Morrison, whom he has dragged along. Mr. Kennedy is here to look you over and see what's the matter with you."

The young man maintained a crude silence. Kennedy observed him for some time.

"What is your name, boy?" asked my friend at length.

"Bah," replied the heir to the Wolfgang ménage.

"What would you like to be?" inquired Crazy.

"Bah," repeated the youth.

Kennedy shrugged his left shoulder and glanced meaningly at the so-called lady of the house.

"He should be a goat-tender," he said.

"He has balked at almost every profession," said Stupid's maternal ancestor. "He has no talent for the ministry, for medicine, for journalism, for music, for housekeeping, for athletics; in fact, he has no talent for nothing."

I could see Kennedy's left nostril bounce up and down as it always did when he was hot on the scent. I knew our mystery was drawing near solution.

"Boy," he said to the youth, "have you ever heard this gag? What is it that's black and white and read all over?"

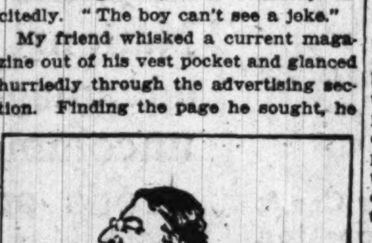
"Bah," said Stupid.

"I see you'll never guess," said Kennedy. "It's a newspaper."

"Bah," said the boy without cracking a smile.

"I thought so," said Kennedy excitedly. "The boy can't see a joke."

My friend whisked a current magazine out of his vest pocket and glanced hurriedly through the advertising section. Finding the page he sought, he tore it out and handed it to young Wolfgang, together with a pen and a piece of Bristol board.



"Copy this sketch," he said.

"Copy this sketch," he said. And in less time than it takes to write it on this machine, whose ribbon is all shot to pieces, the boy had made an almost perfect copy of the picture Crazy had handed him.

"Mrs. Wolfgang," said my friend, "it's as plain as the nose on Morrison's face. Your son is a born comic artist."

"Bah," interrupted the youth.

TY COBB STOPS "BUCK" HERZOG IN 5 MINUTES

Clash in Hotel Room Is Sequel to Mixup in the Tiger-Giant Game.

Dallas, Tex., March 31.—[Special.]—Ty Cobb, Detroit's star, and Buck Herzog of the Giants forgot baseball today and tore into each other with their fists. It was a battle to the finish. It started during the game between the Tigers and Giants this afternoon, and did not finish until tonight, when the two met by appointment in Cobb's room and with bare fists settled the argument, the Georgian winning after five minutes of battling, in which Herzog took a thrashing and finally announced he had enough. Herzog was badly cut about the face, while Cobb was unmarked.

The fight began in the afternoon, when in the third inning Cobb, in sprinting to second, spiked Herzog on the left leg, cutting a deep gash. Immediately the two players mixed it, Herzog landing a punch on Cobb's head. Cobb quickly jumped on top of Buck, but Fletcher of the Giants and other players interfered and with the aid of the police managed to pry the combatants apart.

Renew Argument at Dinner.

This impromptu battle only served to make the first hotter, and in the dining room of the hotel at dinner the New York player served notice on Cobb that he would be at Cobb's room at 8 o'clock ready to fight it out. Cobb's answer to this challenge was:

"Come along, all spraddled out."

Arrayed in old clothes, Buck, with his seconds, was on hand at the appointed hour. The furniture was moved out and the men stripped to the waist and went to it. They fought five minutes before Herzog announced that he had enough and shook hands with his conqueror. Ty scored a couple of knockdowns, each time letting his man regain his feet.

So far as the trouble between these men is concerned the big fight will restore harmony. Cobb says he will not play any more games in the series. He made this announcement this afternoon following the fight on the field.

"Bring On McGraw," Cries Ty.

"If I get back in the game I will have to fight a lot more of them," he said, "and I don't propose to be shown up as a rowdy. If they will bring on McGraw now I will be satisfied."

The scrap this evening was one Cobb could not have avoided without being charged with cowardice, for Herzog threw down the gauntlet and would not have been satisfied without the encounter. It is possible the bad blood thus far manifested between the two teams will not be so much in evidence now that there has been a good fight.

Cobb was ejected from the game after the fight and believes he was made the goat in being expelled, while Herzog, who struck the first blow, was allowed to continue in the game. This ruling by Umpire Brennan made it appear to the fans that the Georgian had been guilty of causing the row.

Quarrel Two Days on Field.

The fight on the battlefield was the culmination of wrangling in which Ty and Herzog have been engaged for the last two days. Yesterday Herzog began to ride Ty because the latter did not appear in time for batting practice. Last evening Cobb warned him he did not propose to be ridden like a busher and told the Giant second sacker that in order to avoid trouble it would be well to "stay off" him.

The bad feeling between the two clubs was much in evidence during the game after the Cobb-Herzog scrap. Once Fletcher, while scoring on a hit, deliberately ran into Bobby Jones and upset him. Jones was not in the line, and as Fletcher had all the time in the world to score, there was no excuse for his action. Exchange of acrimonious personalities between the two benches continued until the last man was out.

Manager Jennings and Manager McGraw held a consultation tonight and agreed to call their clubs together separately tomorrow and put the ban on rough tactics that have prevailed.

PANNED BY BOSS, CUBS SPEED UP IN 19-1 SHOW

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 31.—[Special.]—Playing as if trying to see just what they could do in a game of ball, the Cubs gave the Oklahoma City team of the Western association a terrible mauling, the final count being 19 to 1, with no one hurt. They were able to make such a count only because Mitchell ordered the fellows to hustle all the way, and they hustled all the way with the possible exception of the final inning, when every one was tired and hungry.

Four different pitchers for Oklahoma tried to stop the stampede and all were failures. One of them, Mr. Smokey Lone Bear, a redskin of these parts, got all he could stand in one inning. Smokey's smoke disappeared in a hurry and he acted as if anxious to get back to the reservation, where no one has to hustle.

Young Hurler Knocks Umps.

A youth who looked like a high school sophomore pitched the last three innings and was terribly mangled, but he declared the umpire was rotten for not giving him strikes when he whizzed 'em by the batters' necks.

Shuffling Phil Douglas and Mike Prendergast did the flinging for the Cubs, and both performed nicely. There wasn't anything that looked like a hit made off Phil in five innings, but the scorers were compelled to allow a couple because once Rowdy Elliott lost a high pop fly which fell in front of the plate for a two sacker and once Larry Doyle attempted to stumble back and take in another pop fly, but his lame leg dragged and the ball got away for a single.

Small Crowd at Game.

Only about 400 persons appeared today, most of the fans here having exhausted themselves yesterday looking at the Red Sox and Dodgers at $1 a plate. Another combat will be put on tomorrow, and if the weather is good better financial results are expected. Score:

SCORER OMITS SOME SOX RUNS IN 14-8 BATFEST

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Fort Worth, Tex., March 31.—[Special.]—By accumulating a long lead in the first two innings today the Rowland regulars managed to trounce the Fort Worth Panthers, who went crazy in the middle chapters and batted Claude Williams off the hill. Score, 14 to 8 (approximate).

It was a good old fashioned swatfest, which roused a small crowd of Texans to concert pitch and sent them home predicting a series of pennants for Jakey Atz. The Rowlands piled up a total of eighteen hits and were not far ahead of the Panthers, who accumulated fourteen.

Twelve Hits Off Williams.

Twelve of the local bingles were made off Williams, who was hit viciously in the first, fifth, and sixth innings. Tex Russell worked out his crooked wing in the last three spasms and held the Panthers to two singles, which produced no tallies.

The White Sox scored so fast off a lad named Simms, who started to pitch agin' 'em, that the gink who runs the scoreboard couldn't keep count and missed some of our runs, but that only served to sharpen the rooters' hope of a victory at the finish.

Risberg was considerably in the game in various ways. He ripped off two hot singles and a double, besides making a sacrifice hit and stealing a bag. Two of his hits were made in perfectly executed hit and run plays. In the field Risberg made a bobble that did not count, besides grabbing several flies that might have. Felsh pulled a pair of good catches.

Eldred Sick; Gets Only 2 Hits.

Eldred confessed to a slight charley-horse after the manager caught him limping on the quiet. He was taken out after making two hits and drawing a pass in three times up. Leibold took his place and rung up two more hits, making four for right field today.

Coach Gleason stopped off to confer with Manager Rowland and give him the latest dope on the players of the second squad. The Kid proclaimed that everybody was in grand physical condition and that the four pitchers in his camp had been getting ready for the big show in fast shape during the last week. Gleason left in the evening to join the Goofs at Paris.

Tough Railroad Ride.

The Regulars were full of grumps after a tough night's ride from Houston with only a few winks of sleep per person. That may explain some of their listless playing. Their two sleepers were attached to the Katy flier and made the load so heavy the engine began missing on one or two cylinders and trying to pull the drawbars out of the sleepers. Besides, the railroad people sold some of the lowers in the White Sox cars, not realizing that a baseball "nine" could be composed of twenty-five people.

Fort Worth boosters tried to make amends by entertaining Manager Rowland and the White Sox at a "ham and" rooters' feast at a local hotel tonight.

CARDINALS BEAT BROWNS IN FIRST OF SERIES, 8-2

St. Louis, Mo., March 31.—St. Louis Nationals won the opening game of the city series from the Browns today, 8 to 2. The Cardinals, who up to the fifth inning had made only one hit off Groom, pounded out a triple, a double, and two singles in this inning, and, aided by an error, made five runs.

The Cards added two more tallies in the seventh on four hits and an error. The first run, made in the fourth, was the result of a base on balls, a stolen base, and Hornsby's single. The game was called in the eighth because of darkness. Score:

Baseball Season Nears; Cub Seats Put on Sale

With the opening of the season less than two weeks off, plans for the Cub inaugural with Pittsburgh April 11 are being rushed. President Weeghman and Home Secretary Walter Craighead already have arranged for the advance sale of box seats for the opener. The ducats will be placed at Spalding's tomorrow, so that anxious bugs may secure their pet seats without delay. Workmen will be busy at the north side this week brushing up the park and repairing whatever damage the winter months brought to the scenery.

'Beautiful Snow' at Denver Gives Young Cubs Day Off

Denver, Colo., March 31.—Pinochle, pool, poker, and perfectos provided amusement today for Jimmy Sheckard's Cub Rookies. They sat in the hotel lobby shivering as they watched the "beautiful snow" mess up everything, including their game with the local Western league nine.

A light snow, beginning early in the morning, continued steadily all day, covering the Denver field with a drift several inches deep. Disappointed fans hoped the field would be in condition to play the second Cub-Bear contest scheduled for tomorrow.

CHICAGO LEAGUE TAKES ON MANY 'TRIBUNE' STARS

Contestants in THE TRIBUNE's amateur baseball tournament of last year will be found on practically every one of the Chicago league teams. President Sheahan announced that players who had won their way into finals in any such event were welcome at all the parks and would be given special attention if they made themselves known.

Among the better known TRIBUNE tourney athletes who will be out for practice today are Infielder McKittrick, Catcher Schulz, Pitcher Simmons, and Shortstop Steger, Gunthers; First Baseman Joe Weiss, Garden City; Pitcher Holliston, Rogers Park; Infielder McInerney, Magnets. Infielder John Niesen, Gunthers, also played in THE TRIBUNE preliminaries last summer.

All Teams Practice Today.

Twelve squads, numbering some 250 of Chicago's leading independent players, will work out at the six league parks today. Among the athletes will be Jack Ness and Rudy Rehor, who spurned berths in the American association; Fred Herbert, who found the offer from Beloit more attractive than a bid from the Toronto Internationals; Eddie Stack, Phil Stremmel, George Stellars, and others who have seen service in the big leagues.

Garden City, South Chicago, Normals, Logan Square, Joliet, and Beloit are among the most successful park teams operating in the vicinity of Chicago. The first named played to over 49,000 paid admissions in 1916, according to its income tax schedule, and several of the others approached this mark. An even better showing is anticipated this season, with such attractions as the Chicago league travelers, headed by the Romeos, 1916 Sweitzer cub winners.

Other Strong Teams Entered.

The Magnets, Rogers Parks, and Gunthers have a reputation throughout the central west, while the Ragens and the Mohawks, backed by their enormous following, will put fine teams in the field.

The league season opens April 29 and closes Sept. 23.

Chicago Friends to See Tinker at A. A. Inaugural

Chicago friends of Joe Tinker are preparing to give him a royal sendoff when he starts his career as an American association magnate and manager at Columbus, O., on April 17. A delegation of Chicagoans will leave here at 9:30 o'clock Monday night, April 16, on a special train. After the ball game Tuesday Tinker will provide a special entertainment for the visitors, then the Chicago fans will jump back that night. The fare, including entertainment and features, will be $20. A. R. Keator, of room 601 Hartford building, is in charge of arrangements.

Kansas City, Mo., March 31.—Boston Americans hammered Marquard's offerings for five runs in the eighth inning, after being held to two hits for five sessions by Cheney, and defeated the Brooklyn Nationals, 7 to 1. AMATEURS MAKE SCHEDULES FOR BASEBALL YEAR

Church and Trade Leagues Enlist Many Teams in Flag Chases.

Amateur baseball leagues are getting ready for the summer season. Over half the big circuits already have completed plans for the start the first week in May. The Saturday leagues will begin May 4, and a majority of the Sunday circuits the next day.

Many church parishes are fostering Sunday morning leagues, with the clubs drawn entirely from the one church. The scheme was given a trial last year by St. Augustine's church, a six club league running a successful schedule at Sherman park under the leadership of President Nick Kaufman. The league's aim to care for the players not entered in the National Catholic and Chicago Catholic leagues, both of which will be in the field stronger than ever.

Sunday Ball an Issue.

Columbian Circle players are holding up their schedule temporarily while they settle the question as to whether the league will follow the old custom of playing on Sunday or stage Saturday contests. Opposition from the supreme lodge is forcing the question to an issue.

The Lutheran league, one of the strongest of the Sunday circuits, completed its organization Wednesday night at the Briggs house. The league will have eighteen teams in action this year.

Steffen Heads Craftsmen.

The Craftsmen will complete plans this week for its thirty-six teams. Walter Steffen is president. The opening is May 4.

Among other amateur leagues ready to start play are four under the colors of the Chicago Telephone company, the Chicago Manufacturers, Mercantile, and National Electric Light association.

Knights of Columbus will have another big circuit, twenty-three teams having signed for the races in five divisions, with a possibility of passing last year's record of thirty-two teams.

BY EVAN STONE.

Culver Military academy trotted off with the honors of the eighth annual Northwestern indoor scholastic meet last night in the Patten gymnasium, with a grand total of 27½ points. The nearest competitors were Oak Park, Crane, and La Grange, tied with 12½ points each. Besides winning the meet the cadets carried away a half a bushel of cups for copping two relays—the academy relay and the medley affairs.

To make the night a better success from a Culver standpoint, the young soldiers broke the record in both relays. Culver showed a well balanced team and scored in ten of the sixteen events. The cadets took three firsts and two seconds.

Addems Sets Jump Record.

Addems, an elongated athlete from Manteno, broke the only regular event when he leaped the bar in the high jump at 5 feet 10½ inches, bettering the old mark by one and one-half inches.

Gibbs of Crane Tech carried off individual honors and cup with first in the high and low hurdles and a fourth in the broad jump for a total of 11 points. Dowding of Bowen was a close second with 10 points, taking firsts in the broad jump and the sixty yard dash.

Although few records were broken the events were marked by close competition in nearly every case. Twenty-one schools broke into the scoring column.

Mile Thriller to McGinnis.

The mile run featured a thrilling race between McGinnis of West Aurora and Cushing of Culver, both of whom outstripped the field. During the early lap McGinnis had gained a six yard lead over Cushing and he kept the distance to the tape, although the Culver boy raced him for two laps on even terms.

In the quarter mile Murray of Culver came from behind in the last half lap and breasted the tape an easy winner in :55 1-5.

Gibbs put Crane Technical on the scoring map by annexing both the low and high hurdles in easy fashion. Kelley of New Trier won the sprint by a spurt at the tape in :06 3-5.

J. C. M'Greevy, Sox Rooter, Passes Away in Oklahoma

John C. McGreevy, a member of the Woodland Bards and Dugan club, famous White Sox rooter, died yesterday. McGreevy, a close friend of President Comiskey for years, once was owner of the Duluth baseball team. News of his sudden death reached Sox headquarters in a wire from Oklahoma, but the message did not state at what city he died. McGreevy was in the south on business and was to have joined the Sox at their Mineral Wells training camp, but business interfered. He made the trip to Mineral Wells with Comiskey's team a year ago.

NEW TRIER DEFEATS EVANSTON ACADEMY IN SWIM BY A POINT

Table of Points

New Trier	32	Lane Tech	5
Evanston Acad.	31	Harrison	4
Evanston High	9	Medill High	2
Hyde Park	6	West Aurora	2
Shortridge High	5

Coach Hyatt's New Trier High school swimmers captured the Purple interscholastic meet with 32 points. Evanston academy finished only one point behind the winners.

The meet was undecided until the last event, the 100 yard swim, in which the Purple preps had two entries and needed seven points to tie New Trier, which had no one in the event. Rogers easily took first for the preps, but Johnson finished third, making a total of six points for the academy.

New Trier Well Balanced.

New Trier won because of a well balanced team rather than the individual efforts of stars. The north shore boys scored in every event with the exception of the 100 yard swim.

Combs and Rogers of Evanston academy won individual honors, the latter piling up twelve points by swimming in the relay and taking firsts in the 40 and 100 yard swims, while Combs garnered eight points, besides breaking the record in the 220 yard swim.

Cardo of New Trier established a new record in the 100 yard breast stroke by traveling the distance in 1:17 1-5, against the old mark of 1:18, held by Vacine of Evanston High. Schaefer, New Trier's champion plunger, essayed to break the record of :24 4-5 in the plunge, but failed by one-fifth of a second.

Travers Only Scratch Man on Metropolitan List

New York, March 31.—Jerome D. Travers, veteran golf star, today was again placed at scratch in the 1917 handicap list of the Metropolitan Golf association. Inasmuch as Travers did not take part in a set competition all last season, it is felt there will be some criticism for the place awarded him. Oswald Kirby, who won both the Metropolitan and the New Jersey titles last year, is placed at one stroke. Maxwell Marston and John G. Anderson are dropped a stroke each in the new lists, and Gardiner White is advanced a stroke from four.

Racine Hockeyites to Play at Riverview Rink Today

Racine and Chicago will stage a roller hockey bout at the Riverview skating rink this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Racine came to Chicago with the best team of the year. The Williams brothers, Whiting, Eglington, Anderson, Hamilton, and Ed Schwarts will appear in the Chicago lineup.

Pier Net Courts Closed.

Tennis nets on the indoor cement courts at the municipal pier have been removed and the wire backstops taken down, and as a result Chicago Tennis association officials who launched the game as a winter sport on Friday announced the closing of the season and requested the announcement be printed to avoid disappointing players who have been accustomed to play on the pier each week end.

Decisions of "The Tribune" fight representatives last night were:

At Pittsburgh—Kid Wolfe beat Eddie Wimler [6].

At Philadelphia—Johnny Mealy beat Frankie McManus [6].

ROSS SHATTERS WATER RECORDS IN TWO CONTESTS

Detroit, Mich., March 31.—[Special.]—Norman Ross of the Olympic Athletic club, San Francisco, won the National A. A. U. senior championship 500 yard swim in the Detroit Athletic club's tank tonight in world's record time.

Ross was caught at 6:05 1-5, more than six seconds better than the former mark, held by Ludy Langer of the University of California. The coast aquatic star also set a new record for 440 yards, when he was timed in 5:16 1-5, clipping the previous record by three seconds.

Some wonderful swimming was displayed by Ross in the 500 yard tussle, and he was forced to assert his best until the last two laps, when he had obtained a fair lead over Tedford Cann of the New York A. C. and W. L. Wallen of the Hamilton club, Chicago.

The National A. A. U. junior championship 100 yard breast stroke, another important contest, on the program of thirteen events, was won by L. B. White of the Hamilton club, Chicago. He made it in 1:16 4-5. The invitational fifty yard swim for women was won by Miss Dorfner of Philadelphia in :31 04.

WESTERN NET CLUBS BILL RECORD NUMBER OF BIG TOURNAMENTS

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

The Western Lawn Tennis association has booked by far the most pretentious schedule of tournaments ever drawn for the seven states over which it holds sway. The tourneys cover the four summer months and include many events not before listed. One big tournament—the western clay court championship—is likely to be added. This championship will be an innovation, as the annual western title meets have been played on turf at the Onwentsia club for years.

The Lake Forest club again was awarded the western championships and sectional doubles, beginning July 30. Five meets go to Chicago and suburban clubs. The Chicago city meet will be played off at Chicago Tennis club on June 11-15. The new South Side club, now in course of construction, will hold the Illinois championship, starting July 2. An invitation meet was sanctioned at Edgewater Beach Aug. 20.

Western officials were not prepared to foretell the result of war on their schedule, but said tennis players and officials would take any steps necessary to aid the country. The list of tournaments follows:

WHITE OWL measures 5¼ inches—a half-inch longer—and contains one-eighth more tobacco than OWL.

Both cigars share the million dollar reserve supply of slow-curing leaf which insures their mellowness, and their richness of blend.

OWL is square-end or "Londres"; WHITE OWL has the taper-end Invincible shape.

OWL costs 5 cents; WHITE OWL costs 6 cents.

In presenting WHITE OWL as a "big brother" to OWL Cigar, the makers pledge themselves to maintain OWL character of blend and uniformity of product throughout, both in OWL Cigar 5c; and WHITE OWL 6c.

BOXING FORCES CENTER BEHIND SINGLE MEASURE

BY RAY PEARSON.

Now is the time for all good boxing men of the state of Illinois to come to the aid of their party. The reason? There's the best chance in many years to secure the passage of a bill legalizing ten round bouts, in fact, it can be said that prospects are brighter than they have ever been before. There isn't an opposing force in sight and the road looks clear. That puts it up to the legislators and everything depends on what happens in the senate and the house. According to the best information, the measure is looked upon favorably by the majority of lawmakers.

There's one reason for the favorable impression gained. That is the effort to secure the passage of a bill at this time will not be burdened with overplay. The last effort to put through a bill was two years ago, when the Santry bill introduced by Edward Santry of Chicago failed of passage in the house by a matter of only four votes.

Unite on One Bill.

The same old system of overplay went into effect recently when talk of reviving the glove sport was started. No less than four bills and perhaps some more that we don't know about were handed to the lawmakers at the state capital. All wanted boxing, but they weren't all alike by any means. One was introduced by Representative Jacob Epstein, another by Representative Tim Murphy, and another was ready for the formality of introduction when the wise folks finally awakened to the fact that they were going about the business of securing boxing by barking up the wrong tree.

The real foolishness of jamming a lot of bills into the legislature was realized in time, so a conference of sponsors of three bills, sporting editors, and fistic writers of Chicago newspapers was held in Chicago to unite on one bill to be presented. This bill will be made up of the important features of the three bills, the Epstein, the Murphy, and a bill drawn up by Leonard Hicks, which had not been introduced at Springfield.

No Salary for Commission.

There are several features to the new committee bill which differ from the laws in other states where boxing is legal. For one thing, the commissioners, of whom there will be three, will not draw salary. The secretary will be the only salaried official excepting the necessary clerks, inspectors, etc. It is the opinion that with men in position to serve as commissioners without salary the sport can be kept clean and not allowed to fall to low grade, as it has in New York state. The bouts will be ten rounds with decisions by the referees. The referees will pay a $25 annual license fee, and the boxers must register and pay a fee of $5 annually as a license.

PROPOSED CHANGES IN FISH AND GAME LAWS.

It is unfortunate that proposed changes in the fish and game laws of this state receive little, if any, publicity. Usually, the laws are passed or changed before the average sportsman has a chance to voice an opinion which is a fine little sermon on the "boobness" of not being organized.

Now there are some rather radical changes under consideration and we give an outline of them here so that sportsmen may write their representatives in the legislature if they are for or "agin" any of the proposed measures. Kicketh now or wolfeth not afterwards!

First in importance are two bills providing for a ten year and a three year closed season on quail anl one of them will probably be passed.

* *

Also consider the Bardill and Shurtleff bills. The Bardill bill provides:

Increasing deputy wardens from 76 to 102, for the appointment of special deputies, and for a bond of $2,500 for each.

Change in open seasons: Squirrel, Aug. 1 to Dec. 15; snipe and yellow legs, Sept. 16 to Dec. 31; doves, Aug. 1 to Sept. 1; rabbits, Oct. 1 to Feb. 1; ducks and geese, Sept. 16 to Dec. 31 and Feb. 15 to March 31; fur bearers, Nov. 20 to Feb. 1.

Change days bag limits: Geese and brant, 5; doves, 25; squirrels, 10; also slight changes in the possession limits.

Change law so that rabbits may be shipped out of state. Appropriate $20,000 for fish rescue work.

Prohibit shooting rabbits from automobiles and with the aid of lights.

Put the common bat on the protected list.

Prohibit destruction of muskrat houses.

* *

Unlimited number of wardens and deputies; also give department right to appoint special deputies on recommendation of protective associations, etc.

Changes in open seasons: Ducks, geese, snipe, Sept. 15 to Jan. 1; rails, Aug. 1 to Dec. 16; squirrels, Aug. 1 to Jan. 1; rabbits, Oct. 1 to Jan. 16; fur bearers, Nov. 15 to March 1.

No shipment of rabbits outside of state.

Make trappers take out hunting license.

Hunters under 16 years must be accompanied by an adult.

Purchase of submerged lands for breeding grounds for fish.

Prohibit taking black bass on state fish preserves under ten inches in length; pike or pickerel, eighteen inches; pike perch or walleye, thirteen inches.

No bass to be taken on any state fish preserve between March 1 and May 29.

* *

The Bardill bill is fathered by the Illinois Sportsmen's league, a downstate organization that has done good work for the cause, and outside of their demands for a spring shooting season on waterfowl, we are for 'em. The Shurtleff bill is being backed by Chicagoans. Both bills contain some very good constructive measures, and it is possible that the committee will finally make a compromise. If you have something to say, however, now is the time to say it.

ANGLERS AHOY!

There is no closed season on fish in Illinois and Indiana. The ice is out of the lakes and, while your chances of making a big catch are not as good now as they will be later, if you "can't stand the strain no longer," let us tell you where to go. Tell us which direction you want to go, about how many miles, and whether by "too-too" train or auto, and we'll give you the dope. The Wisconsin trout season opens April 15, and we can help you on that problem, too. Please don't forget a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

SKAT CONGRESS TO BRING 2,000 VISITORS HERE

BY OSCAR E. SCHWEMER.

[Secretary North American Skat League.]

When on June 16 the Coliseum opens for the twentieth congress of the North American Skat league, Miss Chicago as hostess, will entertain guests from every part of the union.

The citizens will wonder what tempts a skat player to travel miles and miles to engage in a game of cards. It is estimated that the attendance will exceed the 3,000 mark and that 2,000 of the participants will be visitors, coming all the way from Maine, Texas, and Canada, to engage in this fascinating game.

It is a known fact that skat is a household game in Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, and Missouri, besides being extensively played in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, and Nebraska, with a sprinkling of colonies of skat players in every state.

International Congress Off.

Not so many years ago, it was proposed by a number of prominent skat players to hold an international skat congress in Europe, Altenberg being mentioned as the most appropriate place to hold the centennial. This idea was abandoned as the clouds of war began to loom on the eastern horizon and America will have the honor of celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the famous discovery of Mr. A. Hempil at Chicago.

The call for the twentieth congress has been issued by President L. J. Niehoff and will be mailed to the skat players within a short time. The call provides for the election of officers and directors for the ensuing year, the selection of a place to hold the next convention and congress, and to transact such other business as may be legally brought before the delegates. The convention will be called to order at the Coliseum, Saturday, June 16, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Chicago Tourney April 8.

The next Chicago Skat league tournament will be held at the Hotel Morrison, Sunday, April 8, at 2 p. m. This will be the sixth tournament this season and President Kohl looks forward to a record breaking attendance. The liberality of this organization is well known to the Chicago skat fraternity and on the eve of a national tournament should receive every possible encouragement.

The national officers and committees will be in attendance at this tournament and would be pleased to meet with the skat players and receive suggestions for the welfare of the twentieth congress.

SHOOTING CLUB INVITES GUESTS

The Chicago Sharpshooters' association has extended an invitation to the general public to make use of its grounds at Palos Park to train in sharpshooting and military instruction. The club has a forty acre plot in Palos Park and a 300 foot gun range. Guns and ammunition will be supplied free to those wishing to accept the club's invitation. Judge George Kersten of the Criminal court is taking an active part in arrangements being made to train citizens to handle guns proficiently. The jurist is president of the club.

West secured six tricks only.

West played the spade suit badly. He should have used the crisscross finesse—that is, led the jack of spades at trick two, and, when north failed to cover, placed the queen with south and finished the ten on the return. This would have given west the first nine tricks and game.

The play of the eight of spades by north was designed to encourage a finesse in dummy, and by no means was it intended for a down and out signal, which is a stupid play at no-trump.

The play of the diamond by north at tricks three and four compelled south to switch to hearts and gave north and south the odd trick. North really should have led hearts at trick four.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Washington, Ill.—[To the Editor.]—I wish information as to the value of the joker in a no trump hand at 500.

Hoyle says that the joker is a suit by itself, but it is often played as heading a certain suit with the announcement that it is a spade, club, or other card.

A no trump hand was played here in which the bidder led the ace of spades and his partner threw on a small club. Bidder led with small spade and partner took with joker. I remonstrated, but the rest were against me. I claimed that throwing off if he wished to consider the joker a spade constituted a reneg. Who was correct? W. A. M.

Ans.—The use of the joker in 500 appears to be generally misunderstood. When there is a declared trump the joker is merely the highest trump. At no trump the joker is the only trump, but may not be used when the player holding it has a card of the suit led. The holder may lead the joker and call for any suit and the other players are obliged to play that suit, if possible.

K. C. Champs Play Today.

Tonti council five, Knights of Columbus, winner in the north division, will play Aquinas Council, winner in the southern division, at Normal Arts High school, Sixty-eighth street and Normal avenue, this afternoon in the first game of the series for the city championship. De Soto, runnerup in the north division, will play Perez, runnerup in the southern division, as a curtain raiser.

TWO PAIRS TIE FOR TOP PLACE IN TEAM SHOOT

Dr. William Senn was high amateur of the day with 97 breaks in 100 trys. J. R. Graham was best professional with 98. Leading scores:

Team race, 50 targets per man—R. C. Millen [48] and Dr. J. L. Hooper [45], 93; J. M. Barr [45] and Dr. William Seim [48], 93; R. R. Palmer [44] and L. W. Parks [46], 90; E. E. Hall [49] and O. Maxwell Quality has been and will be rigidly maintained in spite of the big and constant increases in the cost of materials.

That's the Maxwell policy, fixed and immutable as the Rock of Gibraltar.

For years the Maxwell Company has been proving it in the Maxwell car, which has come to be recognized as the "World's Greatest Motor Car Value," —as the car of power—of ease of control—of stability—of endurance—of economy.

200,000 satisfied Maxwell owners attest to the success of that policy.

More than three thousand Maxwell dealers owe their business stability to the fulfillment of that policy.

The First Consideration is—Maxwell Owners' Protection

No matter what other motor car manufacturers may do in the face of the greatly increased cost of raw materials,

—the Maxwell Company is going to maintain the high Maxwell standard of quality and only make a slight increase in the cost of the car.

While we are sorry that there is any increase, it can't be helped—because the first consideration is Maxwell quality, —the quality which has given the Maxwell the two world's non-stop records of 22,000 miles, the 1916 record, and 23,500 miles, the 1917 record, at amazingly high mileage per gallon of gasoline.

This Small Increase is Your Big Insurance Policy

If the Maxwell Company didn't make the increase, slight as it is, it would have to skimp here and there in materials, construction and refinements, —and that the Maxwell Company will never do.

No manufacturer can make a car today for the same cost as he could a year ago.

The fact that the price of the Maxwell on May first will be raised is your assurance that the Maxwell Company is still putting the same quality into the car,

—your guarantee of still getting the "World's Greatest Motor Car Value."

In Fact, Better Value Than Ever Before

As a matter of fact, the Maxwell is now an even better "buy" than ever.

Not because the model or design is changed in whole or in part,

—but because the Maxwell you buy today is the super-refinement of the original highly successful model of four years ago, —the super-product which time and experience in manufacturing this powerful car have demonstrated to be right,

—the same proud Maxwell car which, in recent competitive tests held by the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale and Prof. Gallup of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute, proved itself the most economical of all the automobiles tested.

The Car That Everyman Can Own

Maxwell economy of upkeep has made it everyman's car.

Thousands upon thousands of Maxwell owners have told us that their running costs are as little as six to eight dollars per month—an amount which the average man spends on casual luxuries.

The Maxwell gives an amazing mileage per gallon of gasoline. Instance, the world's non-stop record run of 22,000 miles, when a Maxwell stock car averaged 22 miles per gallon of gasoline.

Own a World's Non-Stop Champion Car

There is no reason why you shouldn't.

It's first price is small—far less, when you take into consideration its complete equipment and luxurious refinements, than any other car made.

Then its cost of upkeep is so little as to make the cost of a family's ordinary luxuries extravagant by comparison.

With the power in its motor to make up hill and down dale like a level road;

—with the ease of control that makes driving sheer troubleless pleasure;

—and with the stability and endurance that makes the Maxwell, not a one season, but a many-season car:

May 1st, the new price—$665—goes into effect.

But you do not have to pay the increase in price if you buy your Maxwell now.

DISMOND'S LOSS BLOW TO MAROON TRACK CHANCES

Negro Runner Receives a Diploma and Enters Medical College.

BY MAROON.

Binga Dismond is through. The greatest quarter miler that the west has produced is about to give up the college cinder path—now that his records seem safe for a few years—and confine his attention to the study of medicine.

The Negro runner, who has been the backbone of the University of Chicago track team for three years, closed his collegiate career in the Big Nine meet last week by setting a new record in the quarter and picking up the last lap of the relay for a Maroon victory. He was awarded his diploma at the convocation exercises for the winter quarter.

Graduates Ahead of Class.

Dismond plans to take up the study of medicine at Rush this week, following in the footsteps of his father, who is a physician in Virginia. Dismond did not go to college primarily for athletics, but spent his summer vacation in study that he might graduate ahead of his class and enter Rush this spring. He was eligible for spring competition in the conference had he desired to remain at Chicago. He competed in the Second regiment games last night and may appear once or twice this spring.

The flying Maroon set a new indoor record of :50 4-5 in the conference meet. His outdoor record, made in the western intercollegiate last June at Evanston, was a world's record until Ted Meredith tied Dismond's mark in the eastern games. The two stars stepped the 440 in :47 2-5. Twice they have met over the quarter mile distance on indoor tracks and on both occasions the Chicago runner was winner.

Tenney Back on Track.

With the indoor track championship stowed away Midway fans are doping out the chances of Stagg's men in the outdoor meet. Dismond's loss will be a blow, but the Maroons have Feuerstien, Curtiss, and Greene, three fair 440 men. Glenn Tenney, who has done the mile in 4:18 indoors, is recovering from the attack of measles which kept him out of the Big Nine meet and will be ready for the spring meets.

Pat Page is not at all excited over Maroon baseball prospects. He had lost nearly all of last year's team and the sophomore material is below standard. Pat thinks that he can shape up a pretty fair nine if he can uncover a couple of pitchers. He has had every man on the squad take a turn pitching to the batters in the gymnasium, but failed to discover a pitching arm in the bunch.

Few Baseball Veterans.

The field of veterans is reduced to Capt. Hart, catcher; Rudolph, second baseman; Cahn, center fielder, and Larkin, third string pitcher, who may be used in the outfield.

Page hopes to make a pitcher out of Eddie Marum, who played a few games in the outfield last spring. Larkin will get a trial and Mulligan and Main, sophomores, are the final hopes. Hart will work behind the bat with Wiedemann on first. If Curtiss can give up enough time from track he will take a shot at first base and Wiedemann will move over to third. Giles looks the best of the shortstops and Long, freshman captain, will probably play third unless Wiedemann is pushed to the far corner. Cahn, Larkin, and McGaughy look like the best trio of outfielders at present.

St. James Junior Tossers Take Concordia Title

St. James Juniors won the basketball championship of the Concordia Junior league last night by defeating the Bethlehem Juniors, 26 to 7, in the losers' gymnasium. PURPLE TANK SQUAD AWAITS WORD FROM YALE FOR BIG MEET

BY EVAN STONE.

Purple students are anxiously awaiting the final word regarding the proposed Yale-Northwestern swimming meet tentatively scheduled to take place the latter part of this week.

A controversy has arisen between Yale and Coach Robinson relating to the events to be contested. Northwestern proposed the A. A. U. events, but Yale asked that the breast and back stroke be curtailed. This Northwestern refused to do, but Coach Robinson offered a compromise by eliminating one of the events, the breast stroke. An answer is expected from Yale tomorrow.

If the proposed dual meet fails the Purple will have a chance to test its strength against the east in the intercollegiate relays which will be staged at the Chicago Athletic association tank next Friday. The loss of Simonsen has weakened the Purple relay team, but the rooters believe that it still is strong enough to win the event. Coach Robinson is planning to enter two relay teams.

First Ball Game Tuesday.

Outdoor practice will begin in earnest tomorrow in baseball, track, and football. Coach McGill has given his men several bits of work between cold snaps in the outdoor air, but the practice has been light. With the initial game of the season scheduled Tuesday with the Fort Dearborn bank team, Wee Willie will give his athletes a thorough airing tomorrow, so as to acclimate them to the lake breezes.

Wednesday the Shaw Taxi team will be taken on, and Saturday Armour institute will be the opposition. Coach McGill has been pleased with promise shown by the players in practice and is anxious to see how well they will stand up under competition.

Resume Track Practice.

Coach Omer, after giving his men a week's rest following the close of the indoor season with the dual meet with Chicago, will start training the men in outdoor work tomorrow. He plans to give especial attention to the preparation of two relay teams to compete in the Drake relay carnival April 21. The Purple won the four-fifth mile relay race from Chicago in the dual meet and placed a close second to the Maroons in the mile relay in the conference championship.

Omer expects to develop two teams, one for the mile, and another for the one-half mile relay. Brightmire, Williams, Barker, and Smart are already picked to make up the half mile event. Smart and Williams most likely will be two of the men in the mile relay, while the other two runners will be picked from tryouts between Hammond, Hamilton, Ferries, Gillies, and, perhaps, Barker.

Evanston Gun Club Shoot.

A fifty target distance handicap and a twenty-five target Shagren handicap race from sixteen yards will be staged today at the Evanston Gun club. A silver cup will be given for the first event and merchandise for the twenty-five target contest.

TURF RACES OFF AS STANDS BURN

Hot Springs, Ark., March 31.—The grand stand and surrounding buildings at the Essex park race track here were destroyed early today by fire. Races were declared off for the day.

The management this afternoon accepted the offer of the Oaklawn course for the remainder of the meeting. Racing will be resumed Monday. No horses were lost in the fire.

HOPPE DEFEATED TWICE AT I. A. C. IN CUE MATCHES

Loses in Night Game to Young Schaefer, Who Makes Great Finish.

BY JOE DAVIS.

In a finish which recalled some of those made by his illustrious father, young Jake Schaefer last night defeated Champion Willie Hoppe, 250 to 237, in the balk-line match at the Illinois Athletic club. When Hoppe in the eighth inning missed a one cushion shot in trying to nip the second ball he needed only 13 points, and as Jake had not been going too well it did not look as if he had a chance. He soon got the balls going well, and although he was in trouble several times, he solved every problem and ran out the game.

Young Jake was given a great round of applause by the big crowd which packed the seats around the tank and the galleries. Hoppe got away poorly, but showed his best form in the seventh inning, when he ran 140. He got a long liner on the rail and missed. Schaefer averaged 31 2-8 and Hoppe 29 5-8.

Second Defeat for Hoppe.

Incidentally, it was Hoppe's second defeat in one day, as "Chick" Wright won the afternoon game, 250 to 70. It was the first time his touring companions have been able to defeat the champion twice in one day. Charley Peterson of St. Louis gave a great exhibition of fancy shots. Scores of the night game:

HOPPE—2 2 0 1 8 68 140 16—237. Average, 29 5-8.

Champion Gets Tough Leave.

Getting away to a poor start, Hoppe lost the afternoon match to "Chick" Wright, the California champion. Hoppe had a tough leave for his opener and missed, and then Wright ran 87, missing a cross table shot. Hoppe scored 1 and then on a bank shot went between the two object balls when it did not seem possible.

Wright made 86 in the seventh inning and then missed a spread draw. Hoppe never really got going and Wright went out in the ninth inning, averaging 27 7-9 as against 8 6-8 for Hoppe. Score:

HOPPE—0 1 1 14 5 28 0 21—70.

Jake Schaefer defeated Hoppe, 25 to 18, in a three cushion match.

LEADERS' LAST TRIPS MAY DECIDE WINNER IN CUSHION LEAGUE

BY JACK PROCTOR.

August Kieckhefer of Rockford and Pierre Maupome of Cleveland are again tied for first place in the Interstate league, and as each has to play Cullen of Buffalo this week they probably will remain deadlocked. By defeating Bob Cannefax, Hugh Heal went into a tie for fourth place with Clarence Jackson.

With four weeks more of play remaining it looks as if the ultimate disposition of the Brunswick championship medal and the $1,500 which goes with it rests on the outcome of the road trips by the three leaders. Maupome has won eleven straight games at home. He will be the first out, and has to play Heal, Maley, Hascall, Kieckhefer, and Moore. He also has a postponed game with Reiselt at Pittsburgh.

Kieckhefer, who starts a week later, will play Ellis, Capron, Cannefax, Cooler, and Jackson, a hard quintet. Ellis travels on April 23, playing Hascall, Moore, Maupome, Heal, Maley, and Kieckhefer.

Morin Tops Chicago League.

Bert Tredick's defeat by Walter Lauben of Mussey's Madison street room relegated the Conklin player to second place in the Chicago Billiard league, leaving Charley Morin of Mussey's Monroe street room at the top. Frank White played the fastest game of the week, going out in 59 innings against Charley Ward at Leffingwell's.

Women's Sports Given Boost by First College Conference

BY GLADYS E. PALMER.

[Holder of women's record for baseball throw.]

Organized women's athletics has become a reality as a result of the first athletic conference of American college women recently ended at Madison, Wis. Fifty-six delegates from twenty universities and colleges assembled at the University of Wisconsin for the purpose of furthering athletic interests and activities for women in American colleges.

"Attention! Right-dress! Forward—march! To the tune of such commands will the children of the next generation arise, dress, and depart for school," toasted Miss Elsie Eaves of the University of Colorado at the closing banquet of the conference, at which fifteen hundred members of women's collegiate athletic associations were represented by delegates from the following schools:

Universities of Chicago, Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota, Nebraska, Missouri, Colorado, Indiana; De Pauw, Northwestern, Ohio State, Washington State, Washington, St. Louis universities, and Ames, Grinnell, Milwaukee-Downer, Rockford, Sweet Briar, Beloit, and Lawrence colleges.

Intercollegiate Athletics Taboo.

Intercollegiate athletics was one of the most significant of the subjects discussed by the delegates. There has been for several years an increasing doubt as to the advisability of such contests, and the delegates passed a resolution discouraging them. This in itself is a great step toward bringing to the top the very essence of athletics, "the play spirit, fair play and good sportsmanship." Interclass games are intended to provide the necessary stimulus for keen interest and enthusiasm.

Dr. C. W. Hetherington, professor of physical education at the University of Wisconsin, who addressed the conference on "Organization of Physical Education for Women," said:

There are four purposes of women's athletic organization. The first is mere pleasure, which in itself is purpose enough. There is no other form of recreation more pleasurable than athletics.

Sportsmanship an Object.

A second purpose is the training in sportsmanship which it affords. Civic effort of any kind is a social fight. Women are entering the game and they must know how to play it. Thirdly, a woman gains in vitality and nervous power, which she needs now more than in any other period of the world's history.

And in the fourth place, women get in athletics an idealization of training. Here they learn not to eat pickles and ice cream in combination. In short, they learn to apply their training to everyday life, and that means rational living.

Interest on the Increase.

The conference, being the first of its kind ever held, was a particularly busy one, for all the problems that have been accumulating for the last ten years were discussed. The interest of women in athletics is approaching the acme of perfection.

The ideals expressed by the organization at the University of Chicago are typical of those of most college associations. Their constitution is prefaced by the following statement:

Our association stands for honesty, loyalty, and clean sportsmanship. To that end we give our teams our heartiest support, cheering them on to honest endeavor for good playing and for victory. But above victory, no matter how eagerly longed for it may be, we place fair play. In our contests we have no place for anything else, for we believe "the game's the thing, never mind who wins."

Organization Work Divided.

Wisconsin was elected corresponding secretary for the conference and chairman of the publicity committee, with Colorado and Ohio State as assistants. Minnesota was appointed chairman on by-laws, with Sweet Briar and Grinnell as co-workers.

The 1918 national conference will be held in Ida Noyes hall at the University of Chicago. National conferences will be held annually, with sectional conferences more frequently.

All women's athletic associations in the country will be given the opportunity to join forces with the colleges of the west and middle west, which are pioneers of the movement.

STATE PIN TOURNEY TO DRAW 500 FIVES; $13,000 FOR PRIZES

Chicago still has several big tournaments ahead of it before the official end of the season. The biggest one is the Illinois Bowling association meet, which will close its entries a week from Wednesday night with Secretary Jake Mueller, at 29 West Randolph street. The meet will pay out about $13,000 in cash prizes this year, over 500 teams being assured. The entry fee is $2 a man in each event, with 50 cents added for the all events.

Railroad men from a dozen of the central states territory will roll in the second annual National Railway bowling tournament, billed for April 14 and 15 at the Randolph alleys. The total entry reached eighty-seven five man teams already, although the list will not close until Friday at midnight. Chicago heads the list with thirty teams.

Entries from Other Cities.

Other entries by cities show Toledo and Milwaukee with 8 each; St. Louis, 6; Detroit, 5; St. Paul, 4; Minneapolis, 4; Aurora, 3; Indianapolis, 4; Duluth, 3; Rockford, 2; Louisville, 2; Cleveland, 2; Kansas City, 2; East St. Louis, 2; Madison, Racine, and Grand Rapids, 1 each. Toledo, St. Paul, and St. Louis are bidding for the next meet.

Entries to Kenosha's big interstate bowling meet will close tomorrow night with Secretary Matt Shiel, Postoffice box 301, and advance information shows that close to 200 clubs will roll in the big meet this year. The tournament will be rolled entirely on upstairs alleys this year, avoiding the complaints at the basement alleys of former tournaments. The entry fee is $2 a man in each event with nearly $5,000 in prizes expected.

Two Handed Tourney.

Mrs. Gertrude Dornblaser will hold a women's two handed tournament throughout the month of April, starting today, the event being the first of its kind for the feminine players. An entry fee of 75 cents each player will be charged, while partners can be changed as often as desired.

Our "Kirschbaum Clothes" for Spring Are Now in Readiness, and We Invite Your Inspection, Confident That From Them Will Be Chosen Many of

The Clothes Chicago's Well Dressed Men Will Wear on Easter Sunday

Copyright 1917, A. B. Kirschbaum Co.

The excellence of these "Kirschbaum Clothes" is ingrained. Their production involves a process of sifting and gleaning, going straight back to the origin in raw wool.

The fabrics are woven of selected stock, and never once does the nimble shuttle shoot a strand of cotton across the warp of the cloth—nothing but pure wool, a-tinge with life and color. The tailoring is done in the modern, sun-flooded clothing shops of "Kirschbaum," at "The Sign of the Cherry Tree."

—where from the time the designer's chalk first touches the cloth until the silken label is attached, a wealth of clothes-making artistry is lavished upon each single and individual garment.

These are times in which to be sure of the origin of your clothes—to know the institution which produces them and the institution which sells them. A garment made in the "Kirschbaum" way and sold in The Fair way means safety—surety—certainty—whether you pay as little as $15, as high as $40, or somewhere in between.

We Feature "Kirschbaum" Spring Suits & Overcoats at $20 & $25

IN making your spring selection, be sure to see these handsome garments. See the dignified "Fifth Avenue" models for the more conservative business men—see the striking American model designed for younger men—see the "Regent" and the "Wall Street," both smart models for men and young men. The suits are shown in the newest Spring patterns and colorings, the overcoats in the smartest fabrics and shades. There's a wide range from which to choose. The values are unusual. The styles and tailoring are all that we could exact, though the cost were far more than these moderate prices—

U.S. BLUEJACKETS REAL RULERS OF SAN DOMINGO

And Forcing Friendship on the Small Republic Is Costly to Us.

This is the first of three articles by Mr. Hinman on the American occupation and administration of Dominican affairs.

BY GEORGE HINMAN JR.

SANTO DOMINGO, D. R., Feb. 1.—They were policemen, stoutly maintained the native government official supposedly friendly to the American forces of occupation.

They were bandits, opined the young American lieutenant whose detachment of marines had taken a few more or less successful pot shots at them.

They may have been both. Gentlemen of their type in Latin America are ostensibly policemen when allied with the "ins"—avowedly bandits when associated with the "outs."

How U. S. Took Contro.

All of which is not fiction, but fact, fact concerning the Dominican republic, once abused by political bandits and now ruled by a military government of the naval forces of the United States. Like other peoples, the Dominicans have suffered at the hands of politicians. The "highest" were wont to participate—and there was no closed season for revolutions.

When in the spring of 1916 President Jimenes of the Dominican republic and Gen. Arias, his secretary of war, disagreed on the personnel of the national army, there was some discharging of firearms—and the United States landed marines and sailors.

Under Old Conditions.

For many years the republic was ruled by one Ulises Heureaux, a rather tyrannical person, whose career was ended in 1899 by a bullet from a revolver fired by Ramon Caceres. It was said Heureaux was on his way at the time to bring about the death of Caceres' father.

Heureaux's successor found an empty national treasury surrounded by clamoring creditors. Between 1899 and 1905 six presidents strove to cope with the situation. Then, under the guidance of Theodore Roosevelt, the United States took a hand in the proceedings. Creditors' claims were scaled down from a nominal value in excess of $30,000,000 to an actual worth of about $17,000,000. American bankers made the republic a loan of $20,000,000 on 5 per cent bonds.

Give U. S. Guarantee.

A treaty was signed between the two countries giving the United States control of the Dominican customs receivership to guarantee the interest on and the amortization of this loan. The treaty provided also (keep this in mind) that until these bonds had been paid the Dominican republic should not increase its public debt without the consent of the United States.

Señor Caceres was president when this treaty was signed and continued in office until 1911, when he was assassinated. A certain Victoria became president after some disorder. He disagreed with his congress and vacated. There was more disorder. The United States, then presided over by William Howard Taft, stepped in and Archbishop Nouel was made provisional president. Under him, with the aid of the United States, the republic negotiated a new loan of $1,500,000 to defray indebtedness arising from disorders following the assassination of Caceres.

More Trouble Follows.

But still things did not move smoothly, and the archbishop decided to visit Porto Rico. There was more disorder, and in April, 1913, José Bordas Valdes was inaugurated as president. A year passed. Bordas and his congress disagreed on the length of his term. There was more unpleasantness; and Uncle Sam, this time under Woodrow Wilson, again dabbled in the mess. Warships were sent to various Dominican ports. The American commanders bore orders to "appeal to the patriotism" of the rival leaders and to use "anything short of force" to bring about an agreement.

There was also a commission of inquiry. It was found that James Mark Sullivan, appointed minister to the republic by the new American administration, was rather involved in some peculiar transactions. He was cast forth and his predecessor, W. W. Russell, was returned to office.

Agree on Wilson Plan.

Finally, in August, 1914, an agreement was reached which became known as the Wilson plan. It provided for a provisional president, backed by the United States, and an election under American supervision. Dr. Ramon Baez, a physician, was made provisional president, and Juan Icidro Jimenes was victorious at the election.

When new disorders broke out in Haiti American marines and sailors took possession of the country, setting up a new native government. On Sept. 16, 1915, Haiti's new government signed the treaty which left the country only the mask of sovereignty.

Under date of Sept. 17, 1915, the state department wrote to Mr. Russell deploring at great length conditions in the Dominican Republic. The communication concluded with some propositions which may be summarized as follows:

Either the Dominican Republic could sign a new treaty giving the United States new rights similar to those granted by Haiti, or the United States would interpret the Roosevelt treaty as giving it substantially those rights.

Note Not Well Received.

On Nov. 1 Mr. Russell embodied these instructions with the second alternative in a note to the Dominican foreign office. The note was not well received. While it was still under discussion President Jimenes and Secretary Arias had their little falling out.

Hostilities began. Americans fled the capital, which was held by Arias and the so-called army. The police force also fled the city, to join the president's irregulars on the hills beyond. There was some promiscuous shooting. Early on the morning of May 5, with the permission of Arias, a small detachment of American marines and sailors landed at the wharf in Santo Domingo to protect foreign legations and consulates.

During the following days additional marines and sailors were landed at the same point while the rival Dominican forces shot and argued. Jimenes resigned. If he had acceded to the American demands, American marines undoubtedly would have driven the revolutionists from the city and restored him to power.

With Jimenes out of the way, Rear Admiral William B. Caperton, commanding the American naval forces, gave Arias twenty-four hours to surrender or forty-eight hours to leave the capital. Arias left; and on May 15 250 American marines and sailors occupied Santo Domingo.

Meanwhile the American government decided to suppress Arias, who had fled northward and established headquarters at Santiago. A detachment of marines landed at Monte Cristi, on the north coast. They learned that a force of natives was a few miles outside town gathering men for an attack. The marines anticipated the assault by sneaking forth and annihilating the Dominicans.

Despite the presence and activity of the American forces, the Dominicans continued to carry on the semblance of government. Francisco Henriquez y Carvajal was chosen president. His administration did not take kindly to the American proposals. The United States reciprocated by taking over the collection of the internal revenue in addition to the customs receivership, and then withholding the collections from the Henriquez administration.

What Friendship Cost Us.

Let us see in conclusion what it has cost to prove to the Dominicians that we are "their friends and champions upon terms of equality and honor." A shot fired in Mexico rattles the windows in the capitol and occupies much valuable space in the newspapers. A marine killed in the Dominican Republic passes almost unnoticed. Here are the marine casualties during the first ten months of the occupation:

	Officers.	Men.	Total.
Killed	3	6	9
Wounded	5	38	43
Total	8	44	52

Estimates as to the number of Dominicans killed by the American military forces vary widely. Undoubtedly, as in Haiti, some have not been reported because of the elaborate explanations involved. The most authoritative estimates place the number of Dominican dead at about 200. Other estimates put it as high as 500.

Baldwin Sentences Two for Violating Injunction

Judge Jesse A. Baldwin yesterday sentenced Sam Hendelman and Sam Schuster, striking garment workers, to six months and five months in the county jail and fines of $100 each for assaulting garment workers in violation of the injunction secured by the garment manufacturers. They took an appeal and furnished bonds of $2,000 each.

Fractures Skull by Fall.

Frank Ryan, a painter, 218 North Clark street, fell in front of 65 West South Water street yesterday and fractured his skull. He was taken to the county hospital, where he is said to be in a critical condition.

WILSON TO FREE PAROLED MEN FACING PRISON

Washington, D. C., March 31.—Attorney General Gregory announced tonight that President Wilson will exercise executive clemency in a large number of federal prosecutions where suspension of sentences has been nullified by the Supreme court's recent opinion holding such suspensions illegal.

Clemency will be exercised without applications being made in those cases where pleas of guilty were entered or verdicts of guilty returned prior to June 15, 1916, but no sentences pronounced, and in those cases where the sentence imposed was less than the period between the date of imposition and June 15, 1917.

The number who will receive pardons or commutations under the ruling probably will run into the thousands.

—do you discount all your bills?

Do you realize that Manufacturers and Wholesalers frequently make 14% to 90% discounting their purchase bills—with our money?

If you don't, couldn't you improve your credit, increase your volume and make more money, by doing so?

Do not those who have big bargains to offer go first to the cash buyer. Isn't a reputation as a cash buyer worth money in other ways, too? And isn't it true that, unless we investigate, we don't always know what we miss?

Manufacturers and Wholesalers sold us $35,001,972.59 accounts in 1916 alone, on our "non-notification to the customer" plan, releasing their capital thus tied up and enabling them to put the ready cash to work at a profit far exceeding our small fixed charge.

The total cost now is only 1-30 of 1% for each day (1% a month, figured to the exact day) on the net face of accounts from date of our purchase until paid, provided you sell us $100,000 of accounts within a year—otherwise there is an additional charge of $5 per $1,000. No commission, no interest.

It will involve no obligation on your part to write for details, or have our nearest representative call and explain our Non-notification System.

U.S. PAYS PRICE AND NOW OWNS DANISH INDIES

Envoy Handed $25,000,000, Cables Carry Word, and Flag Goes Up.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 31.—[Special.]—The Danish West Indies, henceforth to be known as the Virgin islands, were formally transferred to the United States on payment of a treasury warrant for $25,000,000 to Minister Brun of Denmark.

The treasury warrant, representing $25,000,000 in gold, was carried to the state department by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, who had an active part in the big financial and political transaction. Mr. McAdoo smilingly explained to the Danish minister that he brought the money in the form of a United States treasury warrant because the actual gold coin would weigh approximately forty-eight tons.

Immediately after the $25,000,000 warrant had been formally turned over to the Danish envoy Capt. Pollock of the United States ship Hancock at St. Thomas was notified by cable and radio of that fact and advised to receive the islands in the name of the United States.

At the same time a dispatch was flashed to Acting Gov. Konow at St. Thomas, informing him that the purchase price had been received by Minister Brun and that "all conditions for the definite transfer of the islands have therefore been fulfilled."

These two dispatches left Washington via a special telegraph wire from the navy department. They were flashed to New York, where a transfer was made to the Porto Rican cable.

Arrived in Porto Rico, the messages were wirelessed to the Hancock at St. Thomas and rushed ashore. Only twenty minutes was required to send the messages through.

The formal transfer of the islands occurred after the receipt of the message at St. Thomas. The ceremonies were simple. Acting Gov. Honow made a brief speech, in which he formally turned over the islands, hauling down the Danish flag, in the name of the king.

Capt. Pollock, the senior naval officer, made a brief speech of acceptance, after which the stars and stripes were run up. A salute was fired and the $25,000,000 real estate deal between two sovereign governments was closed.

Business Men Want Road Costs Paid by Motor Tax

Members of the good roads committee of the Illinois Manufacturers' association have given unanimous indorsement to the Danville platform of the Illinois Highway Improvement association and the suggested amendment providing for the payment of the entire interest and principal of the proposed $60,000,000 bond issue from the collection of increased motor vehicle state license fees. The committee also approves an appropriation by the legislature to secure Illinois' share of the amount allotted under the federal aid road act.

HIGH PRICES OF STATE SUPPLIES UP TO ASSEMBLY

Springfield, Ill., March 31.—[Special.]—High cost of living and the prohibitive prices that must be paid for the most ordinary variety of supplies may force a session of the Illinois legislature next winter. The proposition, brought to the front by the Legislative Voters' league in its latest bulletin issued today, is that the present general assembly make the required appropriations for the upkeep of the charitable, penal, and reformatory institutions for one year only, instead of for the two year period, as is customary.

By next January, it is urged, the prices of commodities may have reached a level that approaches normal and a saving that would run into millions of dollars could be effected.

Legislative leaders have abandoned any hope of keeping the maximum of appropriations within the figure that was appropriated by the 1915 legislature—$46,000,000. Fifty millions is now the least total that can be considered.

OFFERS LAND IN WISCONSIN FREE TO NEEDY PEOPLE

Write to Former Mayor of Ottawa and He'll Set Aside a Plot.

James F. Farrill, former mayor of Ottawa, Ill., made a special trip to the city yesterday to call on THE TRIBUNE.

"I have 580 acres in Juneau county, Wis.," said Mr. Farrill. It's fine land for vegetables—potatoes especially. Grains can be raised in abundance.

"I will give the use of it in small parcels to worthy, thrifty, and needy people, who want to provide for their families. There are no strings to the offer.

"Anybody who wants any of the land can write to me and we will arrange to set a plot aside for them."

The idea was inspired by Mrs. Farrill.

Opening Awaits End of Frost.

The City Garden bureau is waiting for the frost to get out of the ground before officially opening the campaign by running the first TRIBUNE tractor over the first plot of ground, directed and operated by Farmer William Hale Thompson.

Yesterday was devoted by the bureau staff to instructing the lecturers for the educational campaign, which will be launched on Tuesday. The instruction is in charge of H. S. Moberly.

Ask Other Cities' Aid.

Invitations were sent out for leaders in the successful garden movements in Minneapolis, Buffalo, Cleveland, Washington, D. C., and Pittsburgh, to come to Chicago and assist in the educational work.

Letters were sent to all the foreign language newspapers of Chicago, asking them to tell their readers of the opportunities afforded by the garden movement.

DELEGATES JILT CIVIC PROBLEMS FOR MOTOR RIDE

An automobile trip through the city, with visits to various city institutions and parks, apparently was more attractive yesterday to delegates to the convention of the League of Illinois Municipalities than listening to speeches on "Chicago's problems." Having heard only one of a half dozen speakers scheduled for the session at the Hotel Sherman, the members of the league climbed into sixty automobiles and were driven away.

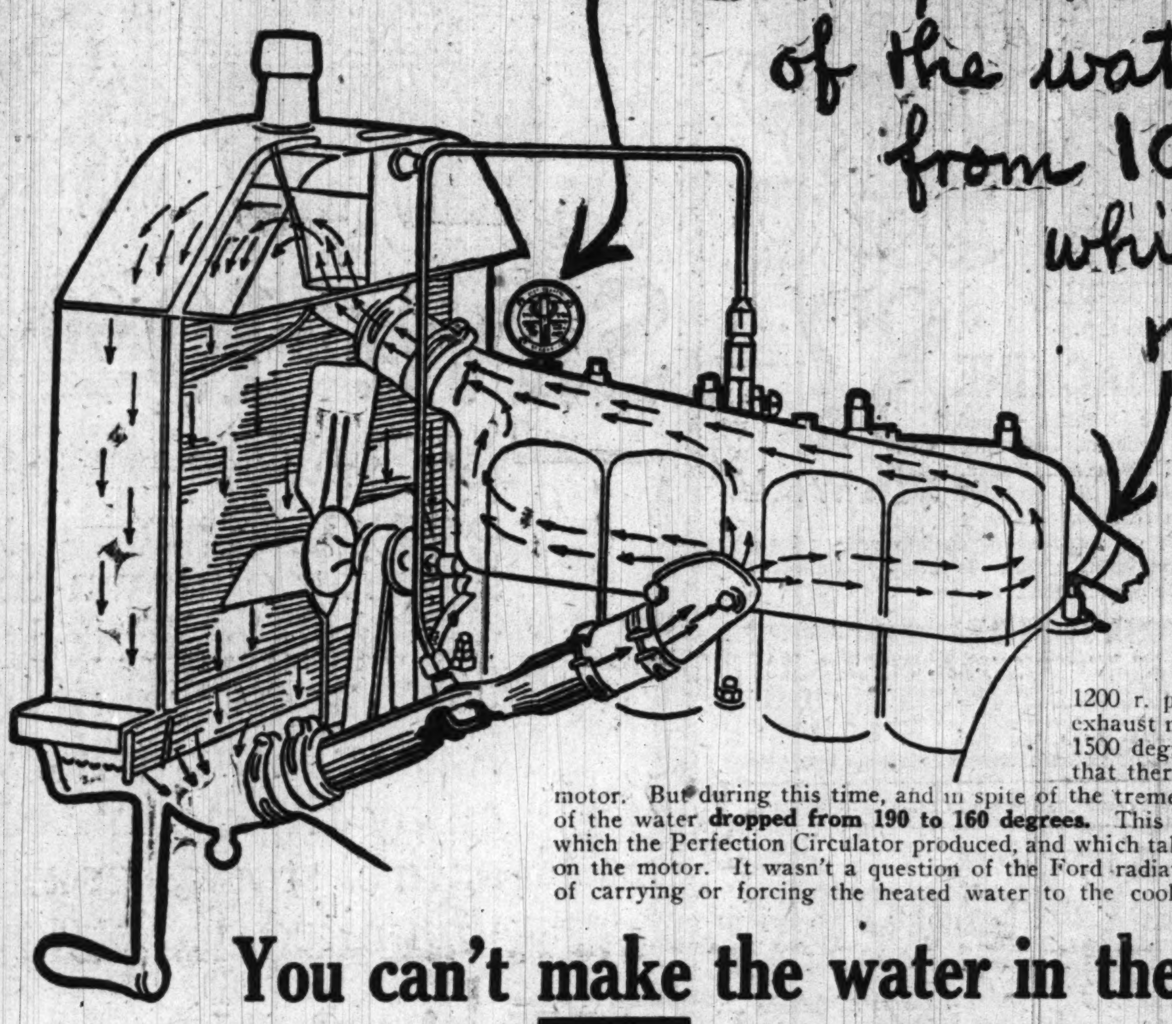
In 12 seconds the temperature of the water dropped from 190 to 160 while the exhaust manifold got red hot



A Ford car, equipped with a Perfection Water Circulator and a thermometer, was tested in a closed garage. The thermometer showed a temperature of the water in the water jackets of 190 degrees. The spark was then FULLY RETARDED and the motor run at 1200 r. p. m. for 30 MINUTES. At this point the exhaust manifold got RED HOT, which means around 1500 degrees, and no better evidence could there be that there was excessive heat being generated in the motor. But during this time, and in spite of the tremendous heat being generated, the temperature of the water dropped from 190 to 160 degrees. This was because of the increased flow of water which the Perfection Circulator produced, and which takes place just as soon as a heavy "load" is put on the motor. It wasn't a question of the Ford radiator not being large enough, but only a matter of carrying or forcing the heated water to the cooling surface fast enough.

You can't make the water in the motor boil

By keeping your motor from overheating, you can save at least 20% of your fuel and oil expense—cut down carbon in your motor—get smoother running—more power and better service.

Money back in 30 days
If not Satisfied
Sent prepaid anywhere in U. S.

Put the Perfection Water Circulator on your Ford or on any motor car with the Thermo-syphon cooling system, and you can't make the water boil.

Perfection Water Circulator

You can put your car through the hardest kind of work—mud, sand, steep hills, continued running on low gear—and still the water in the radiator will not boil. Mak-a-Tractor and Mak-a-Truck owners have solved all their heating troubles by equipping with this system. Larger radiators are not necessary. We guarantee this, and refund your money in thirty days if you are not satisfied.

Absolutely prevents overheating

The Thermo-syphon cooling system would be the perfect cooling system, if it could be properly regulated, and you could get a flow of water in proportion to the heat generated in the motor.

That is just what you DO get with Perfection Water Circulator. The more fuel you are using, producing more heat in the motor, the faster will be the flow of cooling water.

Perfect in Operation

If you depend on the fan or the wind on your radiator, your cooling efficiency must lower when driving through mud, sand, over bad roads or up steep hills. Under these driving conditions the car is moving slowly.

The Perfection Water Cooler allows the water in the cooling system to get hot around the cylinders before circulation of the water commences, thus developing full thermal efficiency more quickly than any other type of cooling system. But it then also prevents your motor from getting over-heated. Just the moment the water in your motor gets above 195°, you commence to lose power, because the gas drawn into the cylinder expands so quickly when coming in contact with the heated cylinder that the piston doesn't take a full weight power charge. The cylinder is full, of course, but because of the gas being so rarefied, the power has been largely decreased.

Speed of the motor has nothing to do with your cooling requirements. The more fuel you consume, the more heat in your motor, and this is when you want increased cooling. When you run your car slowly, your fan works slower and you get less cooling, but this is when you get more heat, and when you should get more cooling.

When your motor is idling, it simply thermo-syphons, and this thermo-syphoning is never interfered with. But just the moment your motor takes on a "load" and generates excessive heat, a small portion of the exhaust gas is delivered through this connection, into the water system, and causes rapid circulation, thus keeping uniform temperature.

Installed in Fifteen Minutes

It takes only fifteen minutes to install the Perfection Water Circulator. Simply replace the ordinary connection from the radiator to the motor with a similar connection in which is located the Perfection Nozzle; tap the exhaust manifold and connect this to the replaced connecting tube. There are no moving parts—nothing to get out of order or wear out—the Perfection Water Circulator will last as long as the car itself.

A 3-Time Guarantee

We absolutely guarantee that, when properly installed, you cannot MAKE your Ford car boil under running conditions. Even with fan removed it won't overheat.

We further absolutely guarantee a saving of gasoline. No test has ever shown less than 9%, and from that up to 45%.

30 Days' Free Trial

Begin to get perfect motor operation today. Order the Perfection Water Circulator for your car. Our guarantee protects you. If you do not find that it gives you the most efficient cooling you have ever had, send it back; and we will refund every penny of the purchase price.

CAMPBELL ENDS POSTAL REGIME; HIGHLY PRAISED

Most Efficient in U. S., Says Burleson of Retiring Aid.

Daniel A. Campbell's régime as postmaster of Chicago will close at 10 o'clock this morning when he will turn over the keys to his office to William B. Carlisle, his successor.

Mr. Campbell, a Republican who has served as postmaster since April 15, 1907, when he followed Fred A. Busse, leaves the office with the following compliment paid to him by Postmaster General Burleson, a Democrat: "The most efficient postmaster in the United States."

Postmaster General Burleson made the remark in a conference recently with Mr. Carlisle, and the latter brought it to Chicago and Mr. Campbell.

Big Increase in Clerks.

When Mr. Campbell took office there were 2,837 postal clerks and 1,736 carriers. Now there are 4,228 clerks and 2,101 carriers. The pay roll has increased more than $2,000,000 for the clerks alone. In the same time the receipts have jumped from $13,000,000 to $24,000,000.

Under the retiring postmaster the parcel post service and the postal savings bank were inaugurated and these features were installed in Chicago by Mr. Campbell without additional officers and without pay roll increases except those demanded by the normal increase of mail. Mr. Campbell superintended the installation of the Chicago dead letter branch last January. In March it handled 340,000 "dead" pieces of mail.

During Mr. Campbell's incumbency the postal money order business has increased from $174,650,508.12 to $305,185,797.88 annually.

Figures Show Efficiency.

Postmaster General Burleson's compliment to Mr. Campbell's efficiency was based on the following set of figures, based on the percentage cost of clerk and carrier hire to recipts:

Brooklyn	59.99 per cent
Boston	45.40 per cent
Philadelphia	38.25 per cent
Pittsburgh	32.92 per cent
St. Louis	35.84 per cent
New York	32.00 per cent
Chicago	28.09 per cent

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell will leave Thursday for a vacation in Austin, Tex., where they will visit Mr. and Mrs. H. G. James. Mr. James is the son of Edmund James, president of the University of Illinois. Mrs. James is Mr. Campbell's niece.

Municipal Art League Supports Dunes Pageant

CIVIL SERVICE FOR POSTMASTERS OF THREE CLASSES

Washington, D. C., March 31.—[Special.]—President Wilson today signed an order placing all postmasters of the first, second, and third class under the civil service rules.

The order provides that hereafter when a vacancy occurs in the position of postmaster of any of the classes mentioned, the postmaster general is to notify the civil service commission. That body will then hold an open competitive examination to test the fitness of applicants for the office.

As a result of this test, the postmaster general must submit to the president the name of the highest qualified eligible for appointment to fill the existing vacancy.

"Incumbent postmasters of the classes referred to who are giving good service," Postmaster General Burleson said, "and who continue to administer the affairs of their office with ability, will not be disturbed in such offices by any recommendation made by the head of the department."

BENNETT PLANS TO BREAK STRIKE OF TEAMSTERS

Commissioner of Public Works Frank I. Bennett yesterday took active steps to "break" the strike of the garbage and ash team drivers. Mr. Bennett notified the team owners that unless the drivers are back at work Wednesday morning they will lose their jobs. He began making arrangements to hire outside teamsters in case the city drivers do not report for work on Wednesday. The commissioner called in the ward superintendents and asked their coöperation in breaking the strike. The walkout, which has been characterised as a "strike of the precinct captains" because of the political features of the city's teaming, occurred last Tuesday. The drivers have demanded $7, instead of $6 a day. Commissioner Bennett estimates that the city will have saved $80,000 by Wednesday as a result of the teamsters' strike.

YUBAN
The Arbuckle Guest Coffee

The favorite coffee of the most critical cities in the world

IMAGINE personally trying all the coffees of the world.

Testing the coffees from one country after another until you found the one coffee which combined the fragrance, the body, and the flavor you prefer above all others.

This is just what the world's Greatest Coffee Merchants have already done for you.

Years ago, for their personal use, and to send to friends at Christmas, members of the Arbuckle firm selected Yuban from all the coffees of the world.

Wherever Yuban was sent as a gift coffee, every one found its fragrance so remarkable, its flavor so exquisite that the moment they tasted it they commented on it. Yuban acquired a private reputation so great that persistent demands to be allowed to buy it developed.

Instances of this kind became so frequent, this demand became so great, that it was no longer confined to private distribution, but was offered the public.

The public quickly acknowledged it to be just the coffee they had been seeking for years.

Before it had been on the New York market five months it was outselling any other high grade coffee. Chicago was just as enthusiastic. Almost at once Yuban became the favorite coffee in Chicago.

Today in each of the cities more Yuban is sold than all other high grade coffees.

Have you tasted it? Is your family drinking it? If you have intended to try Yuban, but have neglected to do so, get a package from your grocer today.

When it was first announced that Yuban was to be offered to the public, many women felt that the coffee they were then using was satisfactory, as they expressed it, and did not try Yuban. Thousands of others, however, did try it. The experience of these—that they had never known coffee could have such flavor—spread from friend to friend, and home to home.

These women now know for themselves why for years it has been the guest coffee of the Greatest Coffee Merchants—why it so quickly became the favorite coffee of the most critical cities of the world. They have found that it produces the choicest, most delicious cup of coffee which can be secured, regardless of cost.

This announcement is addressed especially to you who may not have given Yuban an opportunity to prove how delicious it is.

Do not put it off any longer. Order a package today.

Form-a-Truck

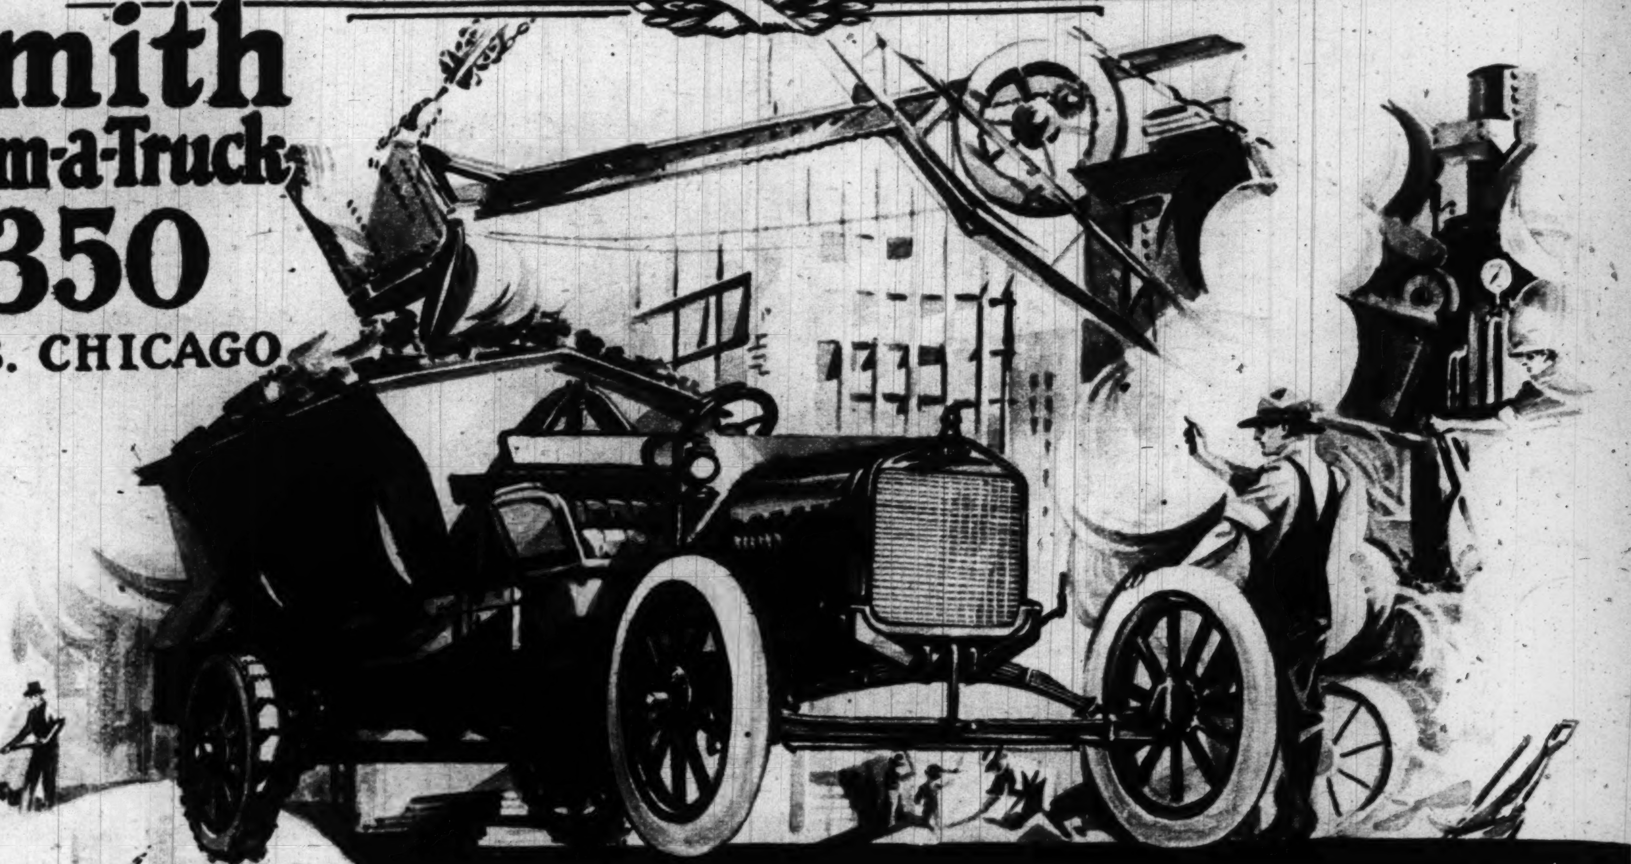
F.O.B. CHICAGO



More Than 17,500 Smith Form-a-Trucks in Use in Nearly 600 Lines of Business

Universally used in every line of business, everywhere, Smith Form-a-Truck is the final answer to economical, efficient hauling and delivery. More are in use than all other makes of attachments combined; more have been sold in a given time than any other make of motor truck.

Everywhere service results are superior to those obtained by any other form of hauling or delivery.

2,077 Shipped in February

Demand for Smith Form-a-Truck is staggering—2,077 were shipped in February—going to every part of the country—into every line of work from heavy duty service for contractors to rapid delivery of small parcels for merchants and express companies—fleet equipment for national organizations—individual units displacing from two to three horse-drawn teams for grocers, hardware dealers, retail merchants, furniture dealers and hundreds of others depending upon low cost delivery to add to their profits in doing business.

5,000 on Order for March

Orders for immediate shipment in March totaled over 5,000—final proof of the fact that Smith Form-a-Truck is displacing every other form of hauling or delivery where cost of operation, efficiency of service are important considerations.

Materials are already on hand for over 30,000 Smith Form-a-Trucks, and ample provisions made to double or treble this tremendous quantity on sixty days' notice.

Smith Form-a-Truck is a selling sensation wherever there are hauling and delivery problems to be solved. The real answer to low cost in the hauling and delivery department, with an average already established by the 17,500 attachments now in use showing a ton mile operating cost of 8 cents.

One Every Four Minutes

In our huge factory one Smith Form-a-Truck is being built every four minutes. Construction of the second factory to double present output is being rushed to completion. Machinery is bought; materials are on hand; everything is ready to bring production up to one every two minutes, or to find more remarkable figures than these, if demand makes it necessary.

And every Smith Form-a-Truck is thoroughly tested before it is shipped to you, even at this remarkable rate of production.

Any One of Six Power Plants

Smith Form-a-Truck combines with any Ford, Dodge Bros., Buick, Maxwell, Chevrolet or Overland power plant to make a fully guaranteed one-ton truck. Select the power plant you want. The attachment can be made in a few hours and the truck put to work for you. There is no delay—nothing to hold up the immediate changing of your present expensive hauling and delivery into fast, money earning Smith Form-a-Truck delivery.

A Real Motor Truck Construction

Smith Form-a-Truck is not a converted pleasure car. It merely utilizes a proved power plant to do motor truck work. There is no power plant built that is more efficient for motor truck service than those you can use with the Smith Form-a-Truck attachment. The Smith Form-a-Truck itself carries 90% of the load, and proved service figures show 12 to 18 miles per gallon of gasoline, 6,000 to 8,000 miles per set of tires, and practically no expense for repairs.

Immediate Deliveries—All Orders

With the material situation so well in hand that we can double and treble our original production figures of 30,000 if necessary, with factory facilities, machinery and workmen all organized for the utmost efficiency, we are guaranteeing immediate deliveries on all orders, large or small. No demand is too great for us to meet. Convert your hauling and delivery department into a money earning feature of your business now. Order your equipment of Smith Form-a-Trucks

The CIRCUS IS COMING

JERRY, a lion cub, and his trainer. Jerry is a sleepy head and very, very heavy.

TOODLES, a tiger cub, has been separated from his mamma long enough to get his picture taken, and he doesn't like it a bit. He's a big cry baby.

SULTANA is a proud and haughty leopardess, who was once a queen of her race in the far off jungles. She was captured and taken away from her kingdom to be put in a cell with iron bars, but she is as proud and as haughty as ever.

BIG BABE likes little boys and girls very much because they feed him popcorn and peanuts. The big rooster and the old elephant are great friends.

OOOH! WHAT AN AWFUL LOOKING THING! That's what nearly everybody says about "Miss Saidee," the hippopotamus, but she's really very nice so long as she is in her cage.

Why our age limit is 43

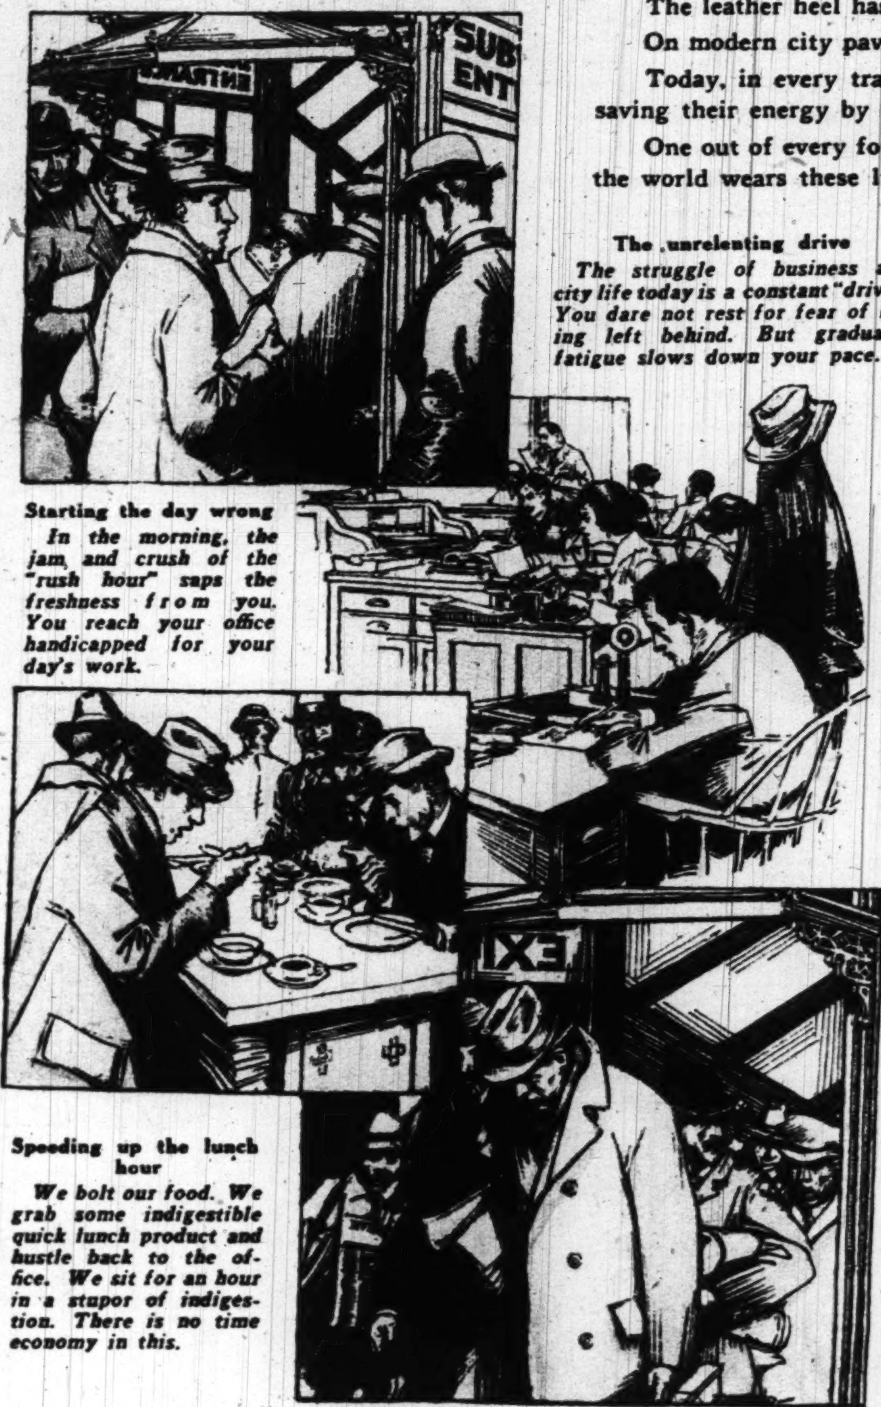
E. E. Rittenhouse analyzes the average American

THE average American is a physical sham and he doesn't know it. He is trying to crowd two lifetimes into one. He seriously overstrains his heart, arteries, kidneys, nerves, and digestion. He is easily winded, weak, flabby-muscled, and stiff-jointed. He lacks agility and endurance.

Furthermore, he will probably die at forty-three years of age.

These startling facts were told by E. E. Rittenhouse, former President of the Life Extension Institute, at the last convention of life insurance presidents.



Starting the day wrong

In the morning, the jam, and crush of the "rush hour" saps the freshness from you. You reach your office handicapped for your day's work.

The unrelenting drive

The struggle of business and city life today is a constant "drive." You dare not rest for fear of being left behind. But gradually fatigue slows down your pace.

Speeding up the lunch hour

We bolt our food. We grab some indigestible quick lunch product and hustle back to the office. We sit for an hour in a stupor of indigestion. There is no time economy in this.

Victims of the city

Watch the crowds swarm from the subway and elevated in the evening rush hours. They are the victims of the wear and tear, the jolts and jars, the "speeding up" of city life.

On downward path

"Time-saving and labor-saving devices," he said, "have radically changed the living habits of a vast number of people. Physical exertion has greatly declined. The mortality rate from wear and tear of life is abnormally gaining.

"An abnormal increase has occurred in the death rate from diseases due directly to life strain, the direct results of the heavy burden of service put upon the vital organs of the body. To check this vital waste is an imperative duty."

Look to your nerves

To fortify yourself against the ever-increasing drain on your energy and vitality, you must look to your nerves.

The successful men today are those who keep themselves fit for the grind of business.

It's not genius so much as endurance that wins success today. The successful man has tremendous nerve force. He has energy plus: energy inexhaustible. He does not have brain fag when he wants to concentrate.

Just the least bit more drive and most of us would reach the goal we are striving for. It's the little energy leaks that drain our strength. Stop one small energy waste, and we can make the sale, win the promotion, swing the big deal.

A needless waste of energy

There is one form of energy waste which we can all stop. We can stop pounding away our energy on hard pavements with hard leather heels; 8,000 times a day our leather-shod feet hit city streets or floors; 8,000 little shocks, each jars a mite of energy from our system. Modern city streets and stone-paved office buildings constitute one of the great causes of lost energy.

Leather heel doomed

The leather heel has outlived its usefulness.

On modern city pavements it is as obsolete as sandals.

Today, in every trade and profession, intelligent workers are saving their energy by wearing O'Sullivan's Heels.

One out of every four people in the most nerve-racking city in the world wears these little shock absorbers.

Remember, if you stop one energy leak, it will go far toward giving you the added force and drive you need. By wearing O'Sullivan's Heels you can stop 8,000 energy leaks every day.

The best heels for city wear

The heels best suited to modern city streets and floors are O'Sullivan's Heels.

On city streets they are guaranteed to outlast any other heel on the market.

Because of our special process these heels combine the greatest durability with the greatest resiliency. They are made of perfect heel material.

Buy your new shoes O'Sullivanized. Good dealers sell the latest style shoes with O'Sullivan Heels already attached Have them put on all your shoes at once.

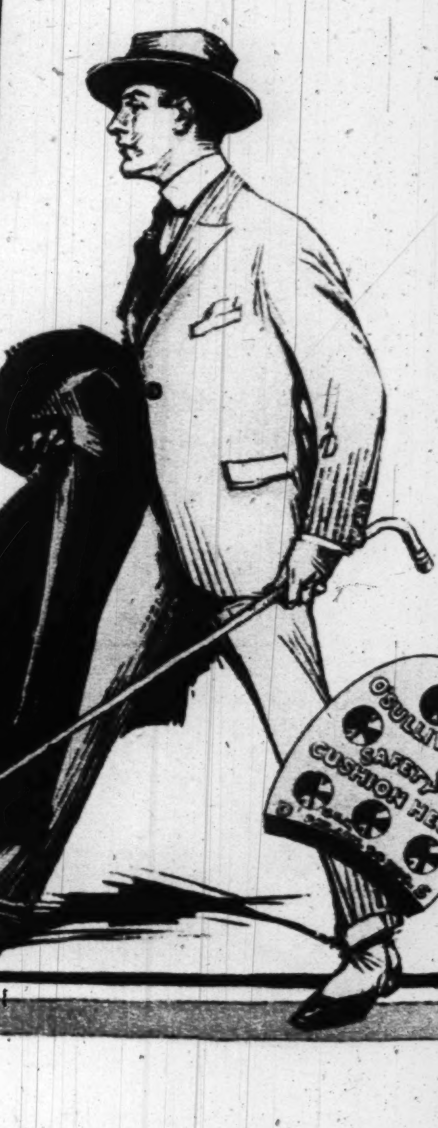
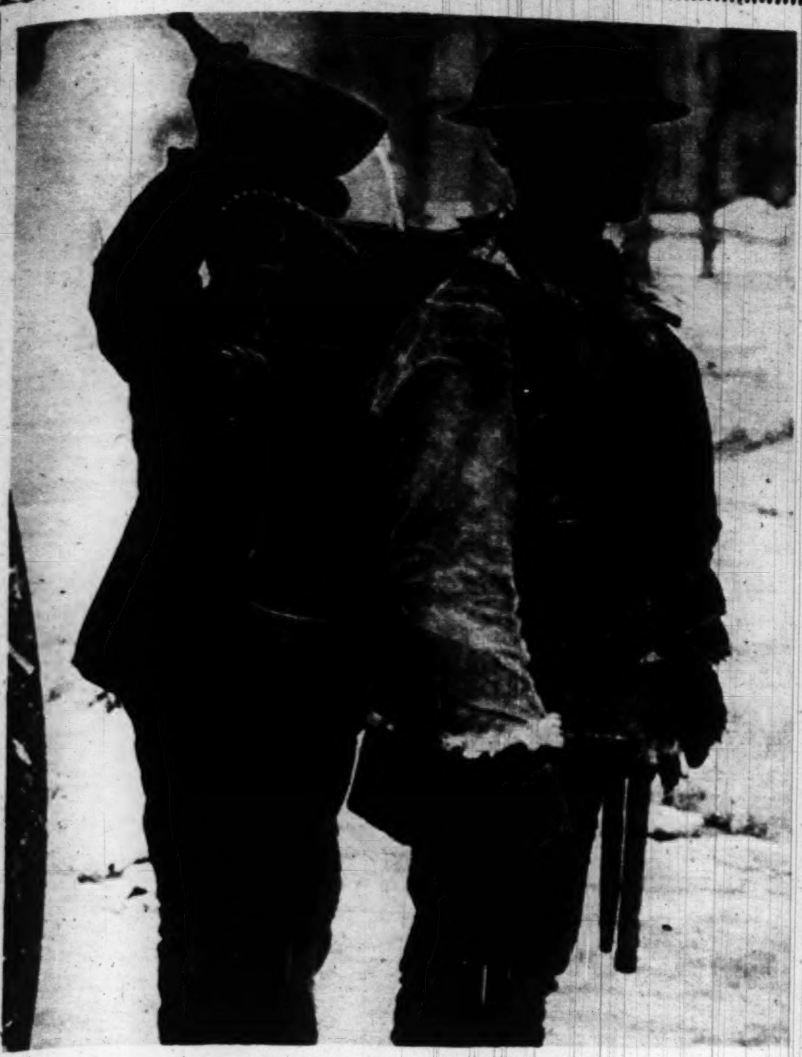
Insist on O'Sullivan's.

Avoid the disappointment of substitutes.





THE HOT SOUP MAN—His is a dangerous task, though it looks easy enough. Armed with only a knife and hand grenades and handicapped with a soup container holding enough nourishment for a trench full of soldiers, he must run the gantlet of shell and rifle fire to advance trenches that cannot be reached by the soup wagons and camp kitchens. These food carriers are sent out singly to lessen the amount of food lost if a shell finds its mark.

THE STEEL SHARK—A torpedo, which has missed its mark, photographed from the stern of the vessel meant to be its victim. This torpedo is unusually high in the water. As a rule it runs at a depth of about eight feet below the surface, and is visible only by a thin trail of white water.

Rub Pond's Cold Cream on one hand. Rub Pond's Vanishing Cream on the other. See how each one does for your skin what the other cannot do. Learn how each one, in its own way, benefits the skin.

How to Relieve Chapped Skin in One Application

How to keep it soft, clear and smooth all through the windy, rainy season

(Photo by Ira Hill)

Martha Hedman now delighting Chicago in "The Boomerang" says: "I am never without Pond's Vanishing Cream. It gives the skin a wonderfully soft, refreshed feeling. I am glad to recommend it to everyone."

Every normal skin requires two creams to keep it always soft, smooth and clear. A cold or oil cream for massage and for cleansing the skin. The skin also needs a non-oily, greaseless cream to put on in the daytime to cure chapping, and to apply before going out—to protect the skin, to keep it from becoming rough.

Pond's Cold Cream is an oil cream. It is scientifically prepared from ingredients chosen for their cleansing, lubricating qualities. It is wonderfully dewy and smooth—has just the quality for proper massaging and for removing dust and grime without the chapping of the skin which too much soap and water will cause. It is entirely free from the disagreeable stickiness common in cold cream.

Pond's Vanishing Cream contains no oil and is not intended for cleansing or for massage. Its base is a wonderful skin-softening ingredient which has a special affinity for the skin—an ingredient recognized by dermatologists the world over as being of the utmost value to the skin.

Its immediate action on rough, dry or chapped skin is so decided that every woman comments on it the first time she tests it. One application will relieve chapped skin.

Try both creams—see how different each is

No matter what creams you are using now, send for the free samples of these two creams. Rub the cold cream on one hand, the vanishing cream on the other. See how different each cream is. Learn just when each should be used—how each cream, in its own way, benefits your skin.

For years women struggled with cold cream for daytime use as well as night use. At that time these creams were the only kinds a woman could get. The oil in these creams always worked out on the skin; gave the face a disagreeable, glossy look, which powder could not remedy.

It was to meet the need for a cream without oil—a greaseless cream for daytime use—that the formula now known as Pond's Vanishing Cream was worked out by Pond's Extract Company.

The moment it is applied you can see it vanish, the skin takes it up so quickly!

Vanishing Cream affords a perfect protection. Its skin-softening ingredients will keep the face free from chapping and roughness in even the most blusterous weather. It contributes to the skin just the properties necessary to keep it fresh and pliant.

It protects your skin so completely, so successfully, that its regular use will eliminate practically all of the ordinary complexion troubles. It will not promote the growth of hair on face or hands.

More used than any other face cream

Pond's Vanishing Cream, with its exquisite fragrance of Jacqueminot roses, is exactly what women have always needed. They so appreciate what it does for their complexions that today more Pond's Vanishing Cream is used than any other kind of face cream in America. Women with oily skins, who have been unable to use grease creams, say Pond's Vanishing Cream is a godsend!

Famous women who use it

Phyllis Nielson-Terry, Jane Cowl, Constance Collier, Elsie Ferguson, Pauline Frederick, Julia Sanderson, Mrs. Fiske, Martha Hedman, Julie Opp, Elsie Janis, Pavlowa, Justine Johnstone, Frances Starr, Norma Talmadge and countless others.

Begin today to use creams intelligently!

In order that every woman may learn by actual test just what a grease or cold cream should do—just what Vanishing Cream should do—we offer you free samples of Pond's Cold Cream and Pond's Vanishing Cream.

Fill out the coupon now and get both your free samples. See what even one application will do for your skin.

Give us also the names of friends who would like to receive free samples. Or send 4c for enough of either cream to last two weeks! Or 8c if you want a two weeks' supply of both. Send today. Pond's Extract Company, 146 Hudson Street, New York.

Frances Starr, captivating New York theatregoers in "The Little Lady in Blue," says: "I am using Pond's Vanishing Cream and want to recommend it to everyone. It is delightful."

VERDUN, after months of bombardment by the Germans. In the foreground is the River Meuse. In the background may be seen the damaged roof and towers of the Verdun cathedral, and on the farther bank the mass of debris to which the houses have been reduced. The reason the town is not still more battered up is because, of course, most of the fire was directed at the girdle of forts which surround and protect the city.

"PETER PAN" COMES INTO WEALTH—Mrs. Alexander Victor Drummond, who was Pauline Chase, the actress known for her musical comedy roles and her impersonation of Barrie's boy hero, has just become a rich woman through her husband's inheritance of his moiety of the huge fortune of his father, the late George James Drummond, the London banker. Only one other brother shares in the large inheritance, which includes interest in the Drummond & Co. bank at Charing Cross and a valuable section of London real estate known as the Adelphi, just off the Strand. Mr. Drummond is a kinsman of Capt. Maldwin Drummond, who married the widow of Marshall Field Jr. of Chicago and is related to the Scottish house of Drummond, of which the fifteenth Earl of Perth, Viscount of Strathallan and hereditary Thane of Lennox, is the head. SLAIN SISTER OF SIR JOHN FRENCH—Mrs. Harley, sister of the commander in chief of the British home forces, was killed by a shrapnel shell near Monastir, Serbia, while she was in charge of an ambulance. Although nearly 50 years old, she had served continuously since the beginning of the war as a hospital nurse, first in England, then in France, then at Saloniki, and last at Monastir. At Saloniki, Gen. Sarrail decorated her with the military cross for conspicuous bravery. (Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

TO CONTROL SEX—George Orishay Shinji, a Japanese biologist at the University of California, after three years of work under the supervision of the entomology department of the university, declares he has discovered a process whereby males or females may be reproduced at will in the reproduction of aphis or plant lice, and that his method may eventually be extended to human life. The process involves the introduction of certain chemicals into the parents.

One home in seven

Three million sick-beds, according to a recent report of the Roosevelt Conservation Commission, are constantly filled in the United States.

This means that one home in seven always has a sick-bed.

One-half of these three million sick-beds, the report adds, could be kept empty by modern hygiene.

This means that modern cleanliness can guard the health of your family.

Keep your home free from disease

Protect your family with Sylpho-Nathol, the sure disinfectant for waste-pipes, garbage-can and scrubbing.

Take no chances in choosing your disinfectant. U. S. Government Bulletin No. 82 points out that many widely sold disinfectants have no more germ-killing value than water.

Use Sylpho-Nathol. It is a germ-killer three and a half times stronger than the U. S. Public Health Service standard. It is entirely safe. New England women have used it for thirty years.

The leading hospitals of New York and New England use Sylpho-Nathol. Let your home profit by their choice.

Easy ways to guard health

Germ-killing solutions of Sylpho-Nathol keep your home really clean and healthful. In the course of your regular housework, with no extra trouble, you can remove every menace of disease with this powerful disinfectant. Use it in the waste-pipes, in the bath-room, kitchen and cellar. Keep the garbage can clean, odorless and free from germs. In your mopping and scrubbing always put a tablespoonful of this powerful disinfectant in the pail.

On The Road To Rugged Health and Strength

When the pivotal point of illness is past and convalescence begins, great care must be exercised in order to avoid the ever-threatening danger of a relapse. The weak, emaciated body needs an abundance of healthful, strength-giving food, but it must be of such a nature that it will not overtax the digestive system. The blood needs enriching, the nerves must be strengthened, the muscles must be built up to normal.

A Bracing, Reconstructive Tonic-Food Is Needed Now

The convalescent needs more than ordinary food to rebuild the wasted tissues into sturdy strength and vigor. Pabst Extract—made of choicest hops and barley malt, fortified with calcium hypophosphite and iron pyrophosphate—furnishes an ideal nourishment in predigested form and also acts as a bracing, reconstructive tonic. It is wonderfully effective—stimulates a desire for solid wholesome food, and furnishes power to the system to draw quicker, better and greater energy from what is eaten. At the same time the gentle, soothing effects of the hops restores the nerves to their normal state, peaceful and refreshing sleep is induced, the muscles are strengthened and new life is given to the impoverished blood.

Pabst Extract, the "Best" Tonic Fulfills Every Requirement

Don't be misled into resorting to drugs and stimulants, which often injure the delicate lining of the stomach, destroy the digestive glands and leave the patient in a worse condition than before. Pabst Extract—The "Best" Tonic—contains no harmful ingredients or habit-forming drugs, nor does it tax the weakened digestive organs. It is welcomed and assimilated easily by the weakest stomach. Pabst Extract is a tissue-building food as well as a tonic and is recommended by leading physicians throughout the United States.

Try a Dozen Bottles. Order from Your Druggist Today

And insist upon its being Pabst Extract the "Best" Tonic. Take a wineglassful before each meal and just before retiring. Its good effects will be noted at once, but naturally it will require more than one bottle to repair the ravages of several weeks' illness. Pabst Extract is also recommended for dyspepsia, nervousness, anaemia, motherhood and old age. Order a case from your druggist now.

Let us mail you a copy of our free booklet explaining all the uses and benefits of Pabst Extract. Write for it today.

"I used Lux for washing my wool blankets and they are softer and nicer than they ever were before. I certainly shall use it for all my woolens hereafter." Mrs. C. Carrier, Detroit, Mich.

Won't shrink woolens

WASH woolens without shrinking! Impossible, you say!

You have had so many blankets and garments shrink and grow stiff and harsh that you cannot believe that anything can keep them from being spoiled in laundering.

Woolens shrink because the wool fiber is made of little overlapping scales that are very sensitive to alkali and to rubbing. The scales grow hard, and crack—they twist and become entangled—the material shrinks and mats.

For woolens a soap is needed that contains no free alkali, and that does not have to be rubbed directly on the wool fibers.

Why soap for fine laundering should be in flakes

The thin Lux flakes contain more real cleansing value than is possible in any other form of soap. So that the dirt is loosened, and drops out into the thick suds, without any rubbing. You just dip your things up and down through the lather, again and again, and the dirt is gone.

The flakes melt the instant they touch hot water, so there is not a bit of solid soap to stick to the fabric through all the rinsings—to turn it yellow or to weaken it.

"I recommend Lux to anyone who is particular. I have had great success washing my silk waists with it as they do not turn yellow when Lux is used."
Mrs. I. Swanson,
4 Ballou Ave., Dorchester, Mass.

You can wash woolens so that they will come from their tubbing like new, if you will use Lux and hot water. "Hot water for woolens!" you exclaim. Yes, you can use hot water—the hotter the better with Lux, for Lux has no free alkali. Its thick, rich lather cleans without any rubbing. The hotter the water the more quickly the dirt will loosen and fall out into the Lux suds—the less temptation you will have to give the garment the few little rubs that you are accustomed to think necessary to remove dirt, and that will at once start the material shrinking and pulling itself out of shape. Rinse the woolens in three waters of the same temperature as that in which you washed them. Dry in the sunshine.

You will be amazed that blankets can be washed so easily, and come out so fleecy and white. You can wash all the family woolens—from heavy sweaters to the baby's soft little shirts—as soon as they become the least bit dingy. They will all come from their washing as soft and woolly as the day you bought them.

Must silks turn yellow?

Your silks so invariably do turn yellow that you have come to think they must. It is the combined action of the free alkali, hot water and rubbing that makes silk turn yellow and lose its finish. Lux has no free alkali. It bubbles into a creamy lather even in water that is just lukewarm. The thick lather is so cleansing that absolutely no rubbing is necessary. Your most delicate chiffon blouse may be washed with Lux over and over again, and still look as white and fresh as when you got it.

Lux is unequaled for—

"Have used Lux for a year and find it excellent. I wash all the baby's woolen garments with it."
Mrs. F. W. Elliot,
91 Franklin St., Peabody, Mass.

Everything delicate

Everything delicate is perfectly cleaned with Lux. All the little baby dresses that have so much beautiful handwork on them—every fine thread-like fabric, laces, fine drawnwork—embroideries—all can be used as often as you please, because you now have a soap product that will clean them, and yet leave them exquisite.

Use Lux for anything that can be washed in pure water.

You do not need to use Lux several times to learn how wonderful it is. One ten cent package of Lux will prove to you how lovely it leaves your things. You cannot imagine what results it will give, until you feel your soft clean woolens—not shrunk a bit—until you hold up the baby's sheerest little slip, as fresh and perfect in texture as when it first came to him—or your favorite Georgette blouse—as white and lovely as ever.

Get it from your grocer or at a department store

Your dealer has been instructed to return your money if you are not satisfied. But it never happens—every woman who tries Lux is soon telling other women that she has at last found the ideal soap product for all fine laundering.

Order a package today, from your grocer, or from a department store. Lever Bros Co., Cambridge, Mass.

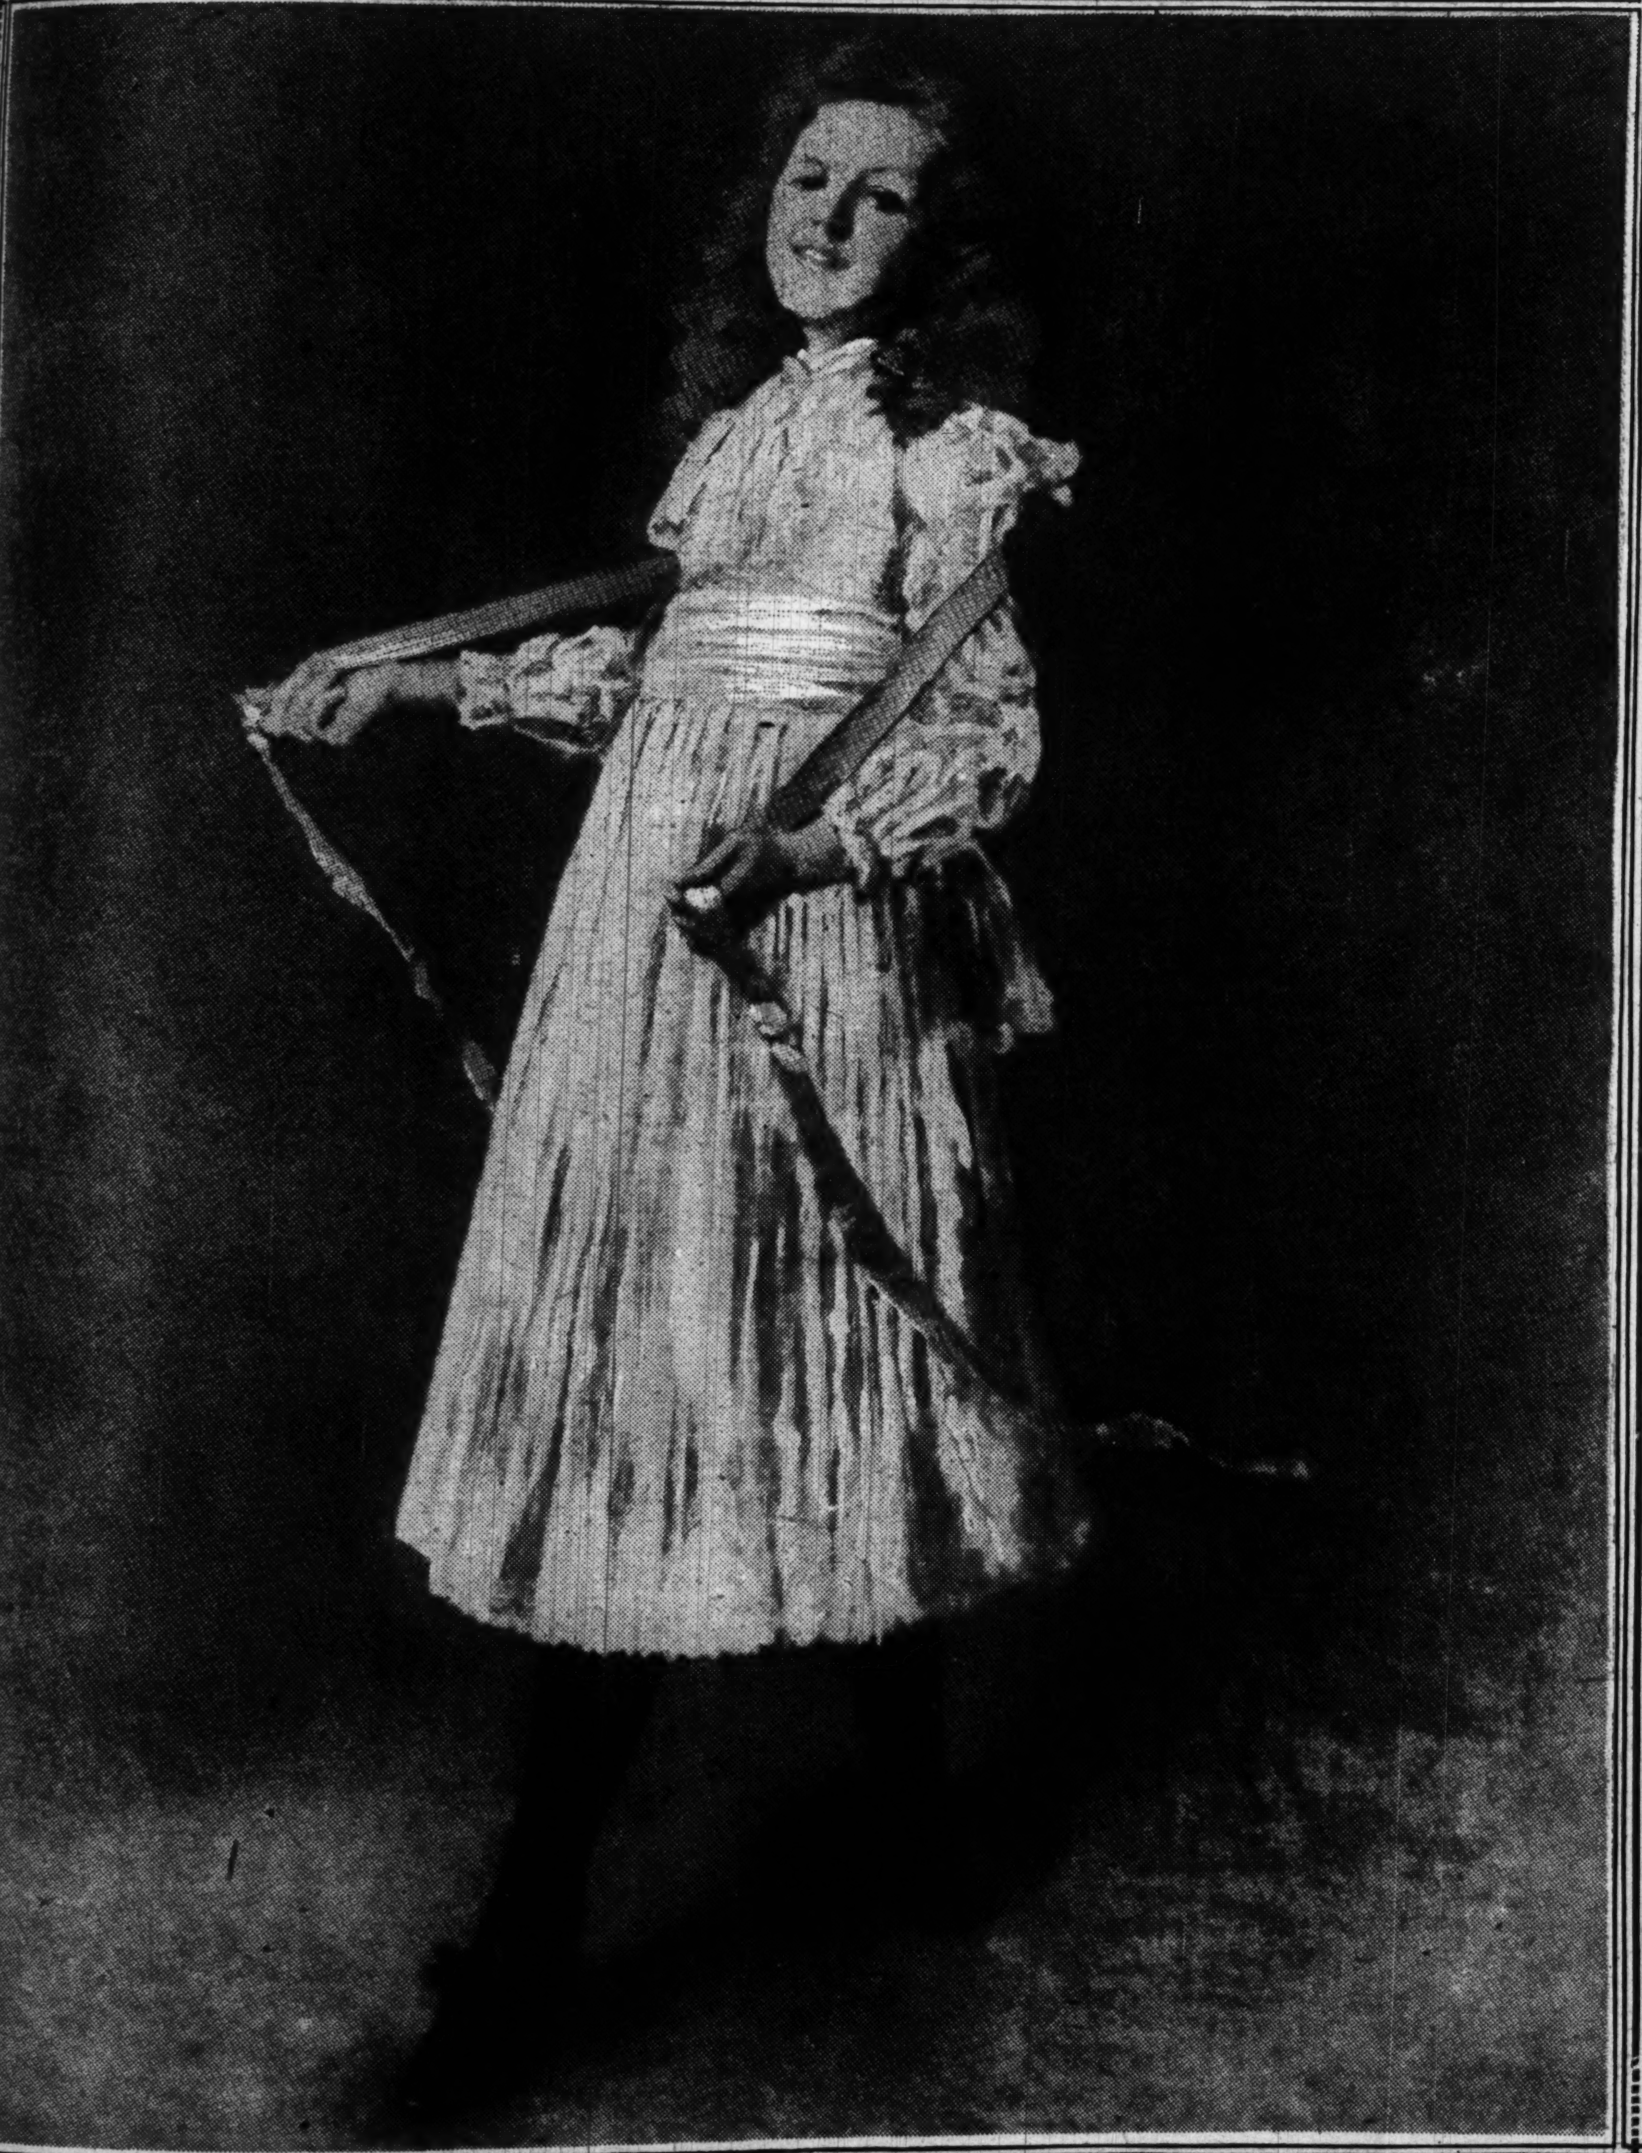
ALICE ◆ ◆ ◆ Painted by William M. Chase



BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

"Alice," by William Merritt Chase. Art Institute of Chicago (1849-1916). On canvas, 68¼ inches by 49⅝ inches.

AGAINST a rich background of something deeper than any red could possibly be, and yet warm, alive, effective, Chase places his figure portrait of Alice. A young girl in white, she is, with soft brown eyes and gold brown hair, and, stopping short for an instant in some frolic or other, she looks at one frankly in an unclouded sweetness of spirit.

If Chase was not a great artist, as history measures artists, he was at least more than an ordinarily delightful one. If he limited his endeavor to the tangible things of earth, finding sufficient to interest in the externals of nature without penetrating her infinite subtleties, he found much of beauty and worth in common objects and unexpected places. No matter what his mood or what his choice of object, he took keen delight in the external aspect of things and also in the game of consummate craftsmanship, which he played with a skilled, sure hand.

It was early in life that Chase chanced on a portrait painter who took a great interest in him and who did much toward developing quickly and easily the abounding talent of the artist. He was scarcely 20 when he went to New York and studied at the Academy of Design there for two years. Soon afterward he journeyed Europeward, where he settled in Munich, placing himself under the guidance of Wagner and Piloty.

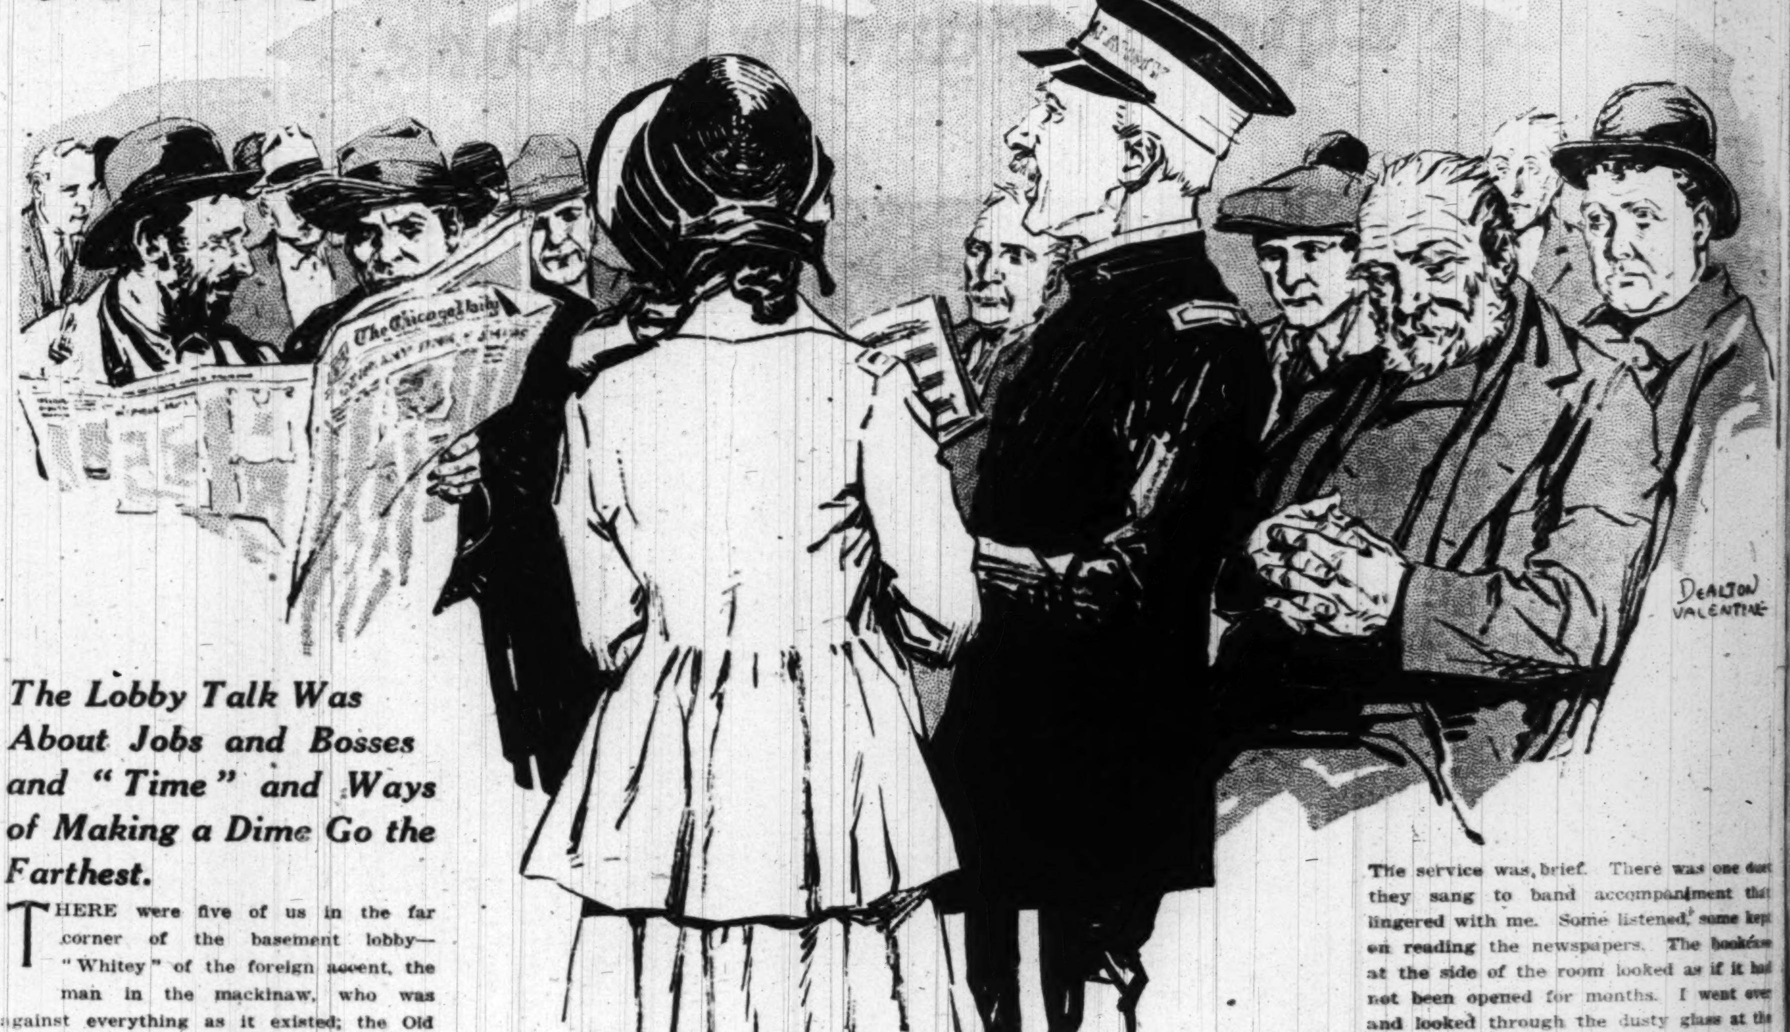
Chase painted with many mediums. His subjects are hardly less varied than the way he expresses them. Oil, water color, and pastel are the principal mediums he employed through a long lifetime of steady, insistent endeavor.

In the last years of his life he gave up his travels in Europe and spent much time on the eastern coast, and his results were rather astounding. He brought back some studies of still life which compare excellently with those of Vollon, whom he admired intensely. The Art institute owns one of these studies of still life called "North River Shad," which was presented to the museum three years ago by the Friends of American Art.

This painting of "Alice," one of his best works, was given to the institute in 1893 by Ernest A. Hamill of Chicago. A copy of this painting, 9x12, in color, is on sale at the Art institute for 25 cents. It also may be had in a large size in color for $1, and in museum photographs, 8x10, for $1.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

STOPPING AT "THE PALACE" by ONEY FRED SWEET



The Lobby Talk Was About Jobs and Bosses and "Time" and Ways of Making a Dime Go the Farthest.

THERE were five of us in the far corner of the basement lobby—"Whitey" of the foreign accent, the man in the mackinaw, who was against everything as it existed; the Old Man, who had long since given up and was resigned; the Kid, who was so young that life still gayly beckoned, and myself.

In the underground room there must have been 300 others, half of them reading newspapers minutely, especially the war news and the want ads, half of them arguing in a language in which the words "Wilson" and "United States" and "Germany" were all that I could understand. You had to be granted a ticket in order to be admitted to the basement room. In the lobby above it was just as crowded. It had been that way all winter.

Perhaps the Salvation Army did not have just the atmosphere of the Blackstone or the La Salle, but there was an artificial palm in the front window, even if it was located between a second hand store and a saloon that advertised the quantity of its beers with a huge swinging wooden sign topped with painted foam. The Salvation Army did not depend on service for its appeal; it offered beds for the night as cheap as 15 cents.

"How does this place happen to do such a big business?" I asked during a lull in our conversation. "How do they all know about it?"

"It is advertised by its loving friends," sighed the man in the mackinaw, tilting back in his chair. "You're out on a railroad construction job, say, or up in the woods or out cutting ice, and some guy'll ask 'where ya going to stop when you get back to Chi?' 'At the Palace,' some one'll answer and give the place a boost."

"If I make good on that job I got today I won't be sticking around here much longer," informed the Kid, trying to start a scuffle by tapping every one around him on the chin and jumping back like a boxer. "You birds want to drop in on me once in a while when you got the price. Look me over—dishwasher and counterman—nine a week and board." He cupped a grimy hand to the side of his mouth. "A T-bone, well!" he yelled with a smile. "How was that?"

"Mostly dishwasher," droned the man in the mackinaw. "You won't do much hollering back to the kitchen. About all the noise you'll make will be clattering dishes with your nose right down over the tub."

"I'll betcha a dime—that is, if I had a dime I'd betcha," laughed the Kid, delivering a tap to emphasize his assurance and dancing away, his spirits overflowing. The Kid's coat was three sizes too big for him and his trousers wrinkled over his shapeless shoes.

"You won't feel so gay when you get my age," prophesied the man in the mackinaw, filling his pipe. "How many different jobs have you tried out this winter? How many times have you come back here all but broke? What do you know how to do? I came near shipping out myself today, but what do you suppose they insisted on? Hungarians! I told one of those recruiting officers down on Canal street that I'd been warring all my life—warring for an existence. Look at most of this bunch in here. Some of 'em have got steady jobs, and are sticking here because it's cheap, but most of 'em are working at or looking for odd, unskilled jobs. What is it going to get 'em? They make a stake and have to spend it looking for the next place. What's there to it?"

The Old Man started to cough. It was a racking cough. He had spent a good many winters in lodging houses.

"I'm waiting for spring," he announced when the cough had subsided. "It's been pretty tough for me this winter to get out much. I've got along, but I've got down to breakfast only—coffee and rolls across the street." To check another attack of coughing he brought a trembling hand up to his mouth, where teeth had decayed and gone ahead of him, allowing his straggly white mustache to mingle with straggly white beard.

The youth with the foreign accent reached into an upper pocket of his college boy cut vest and brought forth a package of cigaret papers and proceeded to "roll his own." "Whitey" was sparing no pains, so far as appearances were concerned, to keep from being swept to a lower strata. His suit was a "brand new second hand" and had cost him $4, his soft cloth collar was no longer white, but his necktie was faultlessly arranged, and his long peaked cap lent him a certain distinction that it might have handed along from its original wearer. Whitey had washed the suit in the hotel laundry on the day of his arrival, waiting in the bath tub for it to dry.

"I came almost shipping today, too," Whitey reminisced, "clear to New Orleans, but they wanted $3 from me. Then I answered an ad, but they'd taken a man just an hour before. Along late in the afternoon I came almost claiming I was a steamfitter's helper when I came across an opening. Next time a chance comes like that I'm going to put up a bluff."

"Why didn't you ship with that gang, anyhow, and tell 'em you lost your ticket," suggested the man in the mackinaw. "They couldn't any more than put you off. Couldn't you use your head that much?" He arose and walked over to the bubbling fountain. "Come on, boys," he invited, bending over to help himself, "come and have a drink on me."

Oney Fred Sweet

Whitey left his chair to comply. The man in the mackinaw watched him, his head tilted to one side.

"Better ditch that tough walk," he advised sarcastically, "or the bulls out on Madison street 'll pick you up as a suspicious character. Funny thing, times were never better, they say, and yet think of the bunch in here looking for a job—a job! Well, I've had plenty of jobs, but I've been looking for a real job for a good many years. What I mean is a real job—one where you can save something and have a home and live. Eh, dad? You know—a house with a rain barrel beside it and a vegetable garden out back and a phonograph in the parlor and some one waiting with a light in the window. Maybe you did have one once, dad, for all I know. Gee, what a grandfather you would have been!"

The Old Man made no comment, but the Kid got out of his chair, stretched himself, and said: "Hallelujah, I'm a bum."

A thin, pale faced guest approached us with a vest on his arm. He explained how little worn the vest was and of what good material it had been made in the beginning. No telling who had first worn that vest. Its present owner only asked 20 cents for it, but he was having a hard time making a sale. All about the room similar attempts at clothing sales were going on. Overcoats were going as low as 90 cents. Some one came to our group and wanted to dispose of a watch that had been a gift.

"I don't need it," waved away the man in the mackinaw. "All the places where I work blow whistles."

Down the stairway came Adjt. Ryan, his wife, and several others in uniform. Twice a week they visited the "social hall." The service was brief. There was one duet they sang to band accompaniment that lingered with me. Some listened, some kept on reading the newspapers. The bookcase at the side of the room looked as if it had not been opened for months. I went over and looked through the dusty glass at the titles. They were novels that had to do with periods that were gone and they remained untouched, but the newspapers—the latest extras if possible—were being devoured. The bunch cared little for life as it had been; it was worried about solving life as it is.

When I got back to the far corner I discovered that the religious service just held had not influenced the conversation. It was still about jobs, and bosses, and "time," and ways and means of making a dime go the farthest.

Social Superintendent Christensen, in uniform, came sauntering through the room looking the men over.

"You're new here," he remarked, coming to where I sat. "Are you sure you are trying hard enough to get a job? If not, we'll soon sift you out. This is no 'hobo flop.' Get a fixed purpose in life, it'll help you. Don't be afraid to assume responsibility. If you've got a home somewhere, go back to it. I won't ask any more questions, because this is not a charitable institution, but we'll soon know how hard you're trying to get a job. Times are good compared to other years, but there will always, always be an army of unskilled men looking for work. Don't get discouraged; don't think nobody cares. The belief that nobody cares is the heaviest weight than any human being ever had to bear."

When the superintendent had gone, Whitey looked up from the paper he had folded tightly and bent over in order to give the item before him more concentrated attention. It was an article about the high cost of food.

"Why shouldn't it be high?" sniffed the man in the mackinaw; "they've shipped everything we could raise over to Europe."

The Old Man arose on rheumatic legs and shuffled toward the stairway and his 15 cent bed—his one of the 600 in lockers so bolted at the door and screened at the top that "thieves might not enter nor moths corrupt." Well, they didn't call them "moths," but anyhow the hotel uses 700 pounds of brimstone every month to keep the insects away.

The whole of the 600 had gone to bed and the lights had been turned out and Madison street below with its second hand stores and pawnshops and soup saloons had drifted into midnight's lesser noises. Somehow, there in the darkness, the duet that had been sung to band accompaniment earlier in the evening seemed to drift up through the floors in sort of an echo. How the tender alto part lingered! That chord—that pathetic chord with the cornets!

Some day 'twill all be over, the toil and cares of life;
Some day the world be vanquished with all its mortal strife.
Some day the journey ended, we'll lay our burdens down;
Some day in realms supernal, receive at last our crown.

The Importance of Quail

by BERTON BRALEY

Which Goes to Prove You Can't Always Gauge a Man's Courage by His Size and Manner.

"SEE here, waiter," Conniff complained, "you take this quail back to the chef and tell him that I don't intend to stand for his using fat instead of butter in the sauce."

He pushed the plate away from him with a sniff and turned to Miss Harold, with whom he was dining.

"It's amazing," he said, "what the people in a supposedly good restaurant like this will attempt to get away with if you don't watch them. The food and service here are supposed to be the best in the city, but to save 5 or 10 cents on an order, sometimes, they'll almost ruin a sauce or a gravy."

Miss Harold's smile was a trifle constrained as she nodded, absently. She played with her fork, her eyes on the cloth. All about them in the Café D'Artagan there were soft shaded lights, the hum and chatter of voices, and the enveloping sound of music from the hidden orchestra. Conniff, in wonderfully tailored evening clothes, his smooth shaven face quite guiltless of any lines save a slight frown of irritation, seemed to the girl to typify the suave, soft, sophisticated life that the D'Artagan served—a life in which the chief matters of concern seemed to be the set of a coat, the perfection of a waistcoat, or the exact epicurean preparation of a chop—or a quail.

To this manner of existence Miss Harold had been bred, but of late it had been rasping her nerves. And though she liked Conniff, liked his clear eyes and his clean health, enjoyed his quiet, repressed wit, and his very real culture, she was impatient with him tonight. It was an impatience that had been growing for days.

Conniff came to town with irreproachable letters of introduction that opened all of society's doors to him. After he met Madeline Harold he proceeded to monopolize her so far as possible, and everybody looked upon the match as highly desirable and logical.

Conniff proposed to Madeline, and she had asked for just a week to make up her mind. She had come to this dinner with him to ask for another week—because she was still undecided. There wasn't anybody else and she did find his companionship, on the whole, delightful, but——

The quail came back, and after Conniff had examined it critically he remarked, "That's much better, waiter, much better." He smiled in satisfaction.

And then Madeline made up her mind. She stopped toying with her fork, abruptly.

"Francis," she said, "I don't want to be brutal, but I can't marry you. And I'll tell you why. It's because I couldn't love a man or live with a man who frets more over the sauce on a quail than over the looting of a nation, and is more concerned with the fit of a pair of trousers than over how to shoot a rifle. The man I marry has to be something besides an epicure on food, a connoisseur on clothes, and a browser among perfectly cultured topics of conversation. Since I've known you I've never seen you exercised about anything worth while. I've never seen you act as though you were really interested in actual existence, in war or politics or the fundamental things of life. You sit on the side lines—an amused spectator—and look on the game in blasé fashion. You aren't even a cheer leader, for you might get your collar mussed if you were. I'm tremendously fond of you because you truly are nice, but your whole life and point of view is trivial and—I want a regular man for my husband.

"I know I'm perfectly rude and cruel to talk this way, and I'm going to do something even more brutal now. I just couldn't touch that quail after all the fuss you made about it, and—and so I wish you'd escort me to the cloakroom. I'm going home."

Conniff opened his mouth to protest and then closed it again. He was silent as he rose and walked to the cloakroom with Madeline. It was only as he handed her into her taxi at the door that he spoke.

"I'm sorry, Madeline," he said, "that I'm not the man you want. I—I do love you. But perhaps you are right. Only, if you should change your mind, a letter to the club will reach me—anywhere." He bowed low over her hand and lifted his hat as the taxi drew away.

He stood there hatless for several minutes after the car disappeared, and when the starter said, "Taxi, sir," he shook his head, turned, and went back into the restaurant.

"I think, sir," said the waiter, "that the quail is still hot. But I'll take it back to the cook again, if you wish."

Conniff lifted the cover and looked at the beautifully browned birds.

He tasted one of them, critically. His face lighted.

"Excellent," he said, "excellent! After all, a quail is a quail."

He finished them both.

"Gee, Sis, I've had the most gorgeous time tonight I ever had in my life," cried Madeline's 19 year old brother as he surged into the library where she sat writing a letter. It was about 11 o'clock and she had been working over that letter for three hours. Which may have explained why her eyes were somewhat blurred.

"Did you?" asked Madeline, looking up to give the boy a smile. "Where were you?" She sealed and stamped the missive before her

"Harry Connolly took me to the Adventurers' club dinner—he's a member. You know what that club is, don't you? Well, it's a bunch of men who've beat it around the world doing things, fighting niggers in Africa, or chasing orchids in South America, or building railroads in China, or mining in Alaska—all sorts of bully stunts full of danger and romance. Harry never did very much except bum his way around this country and work in mines and things; he says they wouldn't let him in now because his life wasn't adventurous enough, but he happened to be one of the charter members.

"Harry and I sat next to a funny, precise little man with a waxed mustache and a queer voice that would break whenever he was excited at all. He was the fussiest person you ever saw. He made the waiter take back his chop and have it cooked all over again, he called the head waiter because the salad wasn't right, and he grumbled about the drinks, and kicked about the oysters. Said it was a shame for a decent restaurant to serve food in such a way when they had the best in the world to choose from.

"I wondered how the deuce an old woman like that ever got into the club, for all his conversation was about the best places to buy clothes, and how he had a valet up in his apartment that could teach these restaurant chefs their business. O, yes, and he told me about his collection of china and how there weren't more than two or three others in the world that would compare with it. And, gosh, of all the sissified 'lah de dah' accents I'd ever heard his was the worst."

"Probably he was just a guest, as you were," suggested Madeline.

"Say, listen," continued the boy, "I was getting more and more disgusted with having to sit by an old fuss budget like him all evening instead of some regular person, when the man at the head of the table got up and rapped on his glass and called for order.

"He said something about how this was one of the biggest occasions the Adventurers' club had ever had, and how it was his privilege this evening to introduce one of their most distinguished members, a man who had joined by mail when he was in the heart of Patagonia, and who had come to the dinner tonight after being back just a week from Van Diemen's Land, and who was going into Thibet or some place like that next week.

"Well, you know what happened. The fussy old little man beside me got up—he was the distinguished guest. And all those men jumped to their feet and cheered and cheered for him. He just bowed and smiled and sat down again without saying much of anything, and the chairman got to his feet once more and said that as long as the guest wouldn't talk about himself he'd talk about him. It seems the fussy person was an ethnologist, one of the best known in the world. He'd been everywhere there was to go, pretty near, and some of the adventures he'd been through would raise your hair. He'd been lost in deserts and jungles and shipwrecked and—and everything. He'd starved and thirsted and fought savages and bluffed his way out of danger—he'd mixed with South Sea island pirates and African slavers and Yaqui Indians—gosh, there wasn't much of any kind of tight place he hadn't been in. And there he sat beside me, picking at his food, sort of blushing while the chairman talked, and growling to the waiter, the minute the chairman finished, because his claret was too cold.

"I couldn't understand how anybody like him could be all they said he was, and I told Harry Connolly as much.

"One of the other men heard me and he leaned over and said: 'Son, I'll tell you something. When you've been in the wilderness and eaten python steak, or in the north and eaten dog—and liked it; when you've stood starvation as part of the game and chewed on leather, and swallowed wormy hardtack sometimes without complaint because it was all you had and you were darn grateful to get it—when you've got through that and you come back to civilization and the rich fleshpots, you want the fleshpots to be right. Don't forget that the rough stuff you eat and the rough living you go through out in the wilds are as good as you can get at the time. So when you return to the places where there's everything delicate and rich and fine to be obtained, you're likely to want 'em that way and to fuss about them if they aren't. Also and furthermore and besides, just recall that Bob Evans was proud of his knitting and that the soldiers in the hospitals in Europe are doing some darn good crochet work. Adventure isn't in a forty-five inch chest necessarily, it's in the heart inside that chest. Or in a heart inside a thirty-three inch one, maybe.'

"Believe me, Sis, I didn't do any more whispering about the fussy little man. I just kept quiet and listened to what was going on and watched how the other men deferred to him, and when they started singing, 'For he's a jolly good fellow,' I was there with my barber shop to help 'em out. Gosh, it was quite some evening, take it from Robert."

"It must have been," agreed his sister.

"I'm going to turn in now," said Bob, "but I guess maybe I'll lie awake thinking of that little waxed mustached chap holding six beach pirates in the Solomons at bay with a gun that wasn't loaded."

He turned to go and then suddenly: "Gee," he added, just as he reached the library threshold, "I forgot to tell you that your friend Conniff is a member down there. He wasn't there tonight, but I heard one of the other men say something about his sailing tomorrow on the Celtic to go back to the Red Cross work. Did you hear about it?"

Miss Harold gripped the edge of her chair suddenly.

"No," she said. "Funny he didn't tell me. Good night, brother."

As Conniff leaned over the rail and watched the pier and the crowd upon it dwindle while the ship swung down the river he was a prey to many thoughts, chief of which was that he wished there had been somebody besides Jimmy Peters and Arnold Hastings to wave him good-by."

"I suppose I might have told her," he said to himself. "I suppose I'm all kinds of a fool not to have told her before last night. And maybe I was twice as much of an ass not to have told her after that explosion at the restaurant. But—I couldn't pose as a hero, or pull the Othello stuff. I don't want anybody to marry me because I've played around with travel and danger here and there. It wouldn't do. A man wants a woman to love what he is, not the places he's been or the job's he's had. Still," he sighed aloud, "I guess I'm a fool."

"But a very dear fool," whispered a voice close beside him.

He turned his head swiftly—and rubbed his eyes. He couldn't believe them, but when an arm tucked itself under his he had to. "You," he breathed, stupified with amazement and joy.

"Me," smiled Madeline, "just only me. Aren't I enough?"

"But—but—where, how, when——"

"I've been in my cabin. I came in a taxi ahead of time, and went below at once. I—I was afraid you might send me back if I appeared before."

"You—you're going on the ship!"

"It looks that way, doesn't it?"

He stared, round eyed, at her. His heart was beating like a trip hammer; he wanted to shout, but he only said, "I don't understand."

"Must I make it very plain?" said Madeline. "Then I will. I have changed my mind. I was impossible last night. I do love you, and since a letter to your club wouldn't reach you for weeks and weeks and—and you might be killed in the meantime—I bought a ticket and came on the ship. Mother and father are frantic, but I don't care. They tell me the captain of a ship can m-marry people. O—" she said, "you make me do the whole thing."

"But, Madeline," protested Conniff, "I'm going back to the Red Cross. I was only on leave over here after—after being wounded slightly. You can't be with me over there, and besides—O, it's impossible."

Madeline frowned.

"Frank Conniff," she said, "you asked me to marry you even when you knew you were going back. What did you intend to do with me if accepted?"

"I—I thought you'd wait, perhaps, until after the war, or——"

"Until you were killed by a stray shell or something like that," demanded Madeline. "Well, that isn't the kind of engagement I want, thank you. And now that I'm coming along I want to share my husband's real life, not his leaves of absence. I guess I can join the Red Cross, too—unless you've decided you don't want me at all. If—if you don't, tell me r-right now, and I'll take the tug back."

"Want you!" exclaimed Conniff, his eyes lighting with a glow that was unmistakable. He glanced swiftly about. This part of the deck was deserted. "Sweetheart, sweetheart," he cried, and gathered her to him.

"You might have told me before that you were an adventurer and a hero and everything," complained Madeline, a little breathlessly, as a deck steward came past, "it wasn't fair to me to pretend to be just an idler."

"But I didn't want to play to the gallery that way, my dear," he protested. "Besides, I'm not a hero and I am an idler. It's being an idler that has given me the time to mix in things all around this 'bloomin' world.'"

"So you wanted to be loved for yourself," said Madeline, as she drew forth a crumpled letter from her waist. "Well, young man, I wrote this before I knew you were anybody but just you. It was the fifth letter I wrote—the others I tore up, this one I sealed and stamped and intended to mail. Do—do you want to read it?"

And Conniff ripped the envelope from the missive and read:

"My dear, my dear, forgive me. I was cruel tonight. I do love you, whether you're finicky and fussy or not. And I'll marry you if you still want me. Because I don't know what I should do without you. P. S.—And I'm sorry I spoiled your dinner, it seems a pity to think that those two quails should be wasted."

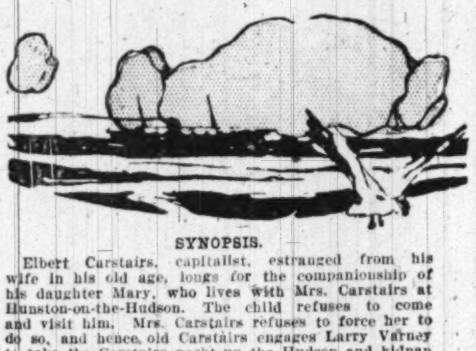
Conniff laughed and kissed her, unmindful of the deck steward, who passed again.

"After all," he said, "a quail is only a quail."

"I can't marry you," she said.

CAPTIVATING MARY

by HENRY SYDNOR H



SYNOPSIS.

Elbert Carstairs, capitalist, estranged from his wife in his old age, longs for the companionship of his daughter Mary, who lives with Mrs. Carstairs at Hunston-on-the-Hudson. The child refuses to come and visit him. Mrs. Carstairs refuses to force her to do so, and hence old Carstairs engages Larry Varney to take the Carstairs yacht up the Hudson and kidnap Mary, who Varney believes is but 12. Varney gets the help of Peter Maginnis in the venture. Three days after the start is made. On the way up the river the name of the yacht, Cypriani, is erased to throw reporters off the track. Arriving at Hunston, the two ally themselves with Hare, a campaigner for reform against the dictatorship of Boss Ryan. Ryan so completely dominates the town that the reform people are denied the use of public halls. Varney is accused by Coligny Smith, owner of the Gazette, which is under Ryan's thumb, of being Ferris Stanhope, author of pink tea literature, and is advised to leave town unless he wants trouble. The same evening Varney, fleeing from a heavy rainstorm, takes shelter in a cottage—and finds a strange young woman there. She proves to be Mary Carstairs. Further, she accuses him of being Stanhope. Varney learns through a magazine article the reason why he is accused of being Stanhope. It seems from the article that Stanhope is about to return to Hunston, from which he had fled months before after escapades with several girls. Maginnis has also found adventure plotting to "steal" Boss Ryan's big political meeting and turn it to one for Hare and reform. Varney and Maginnis become aware of a mysterious stranger who followed them when they just came to town, and who is continually on their trail. They suspect him of being a secret spy of Boss Ryan. Varney is accused again of being Stanhope, and advised to leave town. Maginnis, true to his promise, steals Boss Ryan's meeting after first kidnapping Ryan. Varney gets Mary Carstairs' promise that she will dine on the Cypriani the following Thursday. Still believing him Stanhope, Mary snubs Varney at the meeting, threatening to break her engagement for Thursday on the yacht. The day after, Wednesday, the Gazette comes out with a scurrilous article about Stanhope—and his picture. Of course this settles Varney forever in the townspeople's mind as Stanhope. Further, it is Boss Ryan's blow to discredit the reform move. Still further, it raises a barrier between Varney and Mary—and the luncheon.

NINTH INSTALLMENT.

Tommy.

HE went off to his bath, dressed hurriedly, dawdled a moment at the breakfast table, where he found Peter discussing a cereal not without a certain solemn pleasure, and went above grappling with the thought that all this would mean a postponement of his call at the Carstairs house, and maybe something more serious still. The morning was sunny and crisp, he walked to the bow briskly by way of a constitutional, turned and started down again. As he did this his eye fell upon a strange figure which had at first escaped him. Toward the stern of the Cypriani, near the wheel, a little runt of a boy hung over the rail and made the air noxious with the relicts of a low born cigar. He was an aged, cynical boy, with a phlegmatic mien and a face of the complexion and general appearance of a hickory nut.

A little surprised by the sudden apparition, Varney came down the deck and dropped into a chair near him.

"Well, my lad! I'm happy to see you and your cigar again. But to what do we owe the pleasure of this call from you two old friends?"

The boy turned his back to the rail and faced him impassively. In the brilliant sunshine he looked singularly worn and wise.

"I brung dem wires," he said courageously plying the cigar. "Any answer?"

"I'll see, after a while," said Varney, hastily lighting a pipe as counter irritant. "So you're the telegraph boy, are you?"

"Nawser. Odjobbin' I do. Anythink as comes handy. They don't deliver no wires down here. I handles 'em sometimes for wut dere is in it."

"O! Well, I won't fail to see that there is something in it for you this time. And do you make much money odd jobbing?"

"I git along awright. Summertimes I do. Wintertimes there ain't no odjobbin' much."

"How old are you, my boy?"

"Twelve year old."

"Twelve! I thought you were 16 at least."

A faint look of gratification crossed the boy's face, but he only said stoically: "Twelve year's my age."

"What do you do in the winter time when there isn't much odd jobbing? How do you get along then?"

"I git along awright. Sometimes I git help Off a lady here, a frien' o' mine."

"What lady? What's her name?"

"Name o' Miss Mary. Miss Carstair, some calls her. I git money and clo's off her. I'd a' had some bum winters hadn't ben for her."

There was a pause, and then Varney said: "What's your name, my boy?"

Again the boy hesitated. "Tommy," he said presently.

"Tommy what?"

"Tommy—Orrick."

Varney started. Of all the sordid Hunston of the natives that was the one name which meant anything to him. It was rather a curious coincidence.

"Then I suppose old Sam Orrick," he said kindly, "is your father's father."

"Nawser," he answered slowly. And he added presently. "He wuz me mudder's father."

After that the silence lengthened. Varney looked off down the river. Tommy Orrick, whose father was named something else, clapped his hand suddenly to his lip, because his cigar just then scorched it unbearably.

"What is your father's name, Tommy?" asked Varney in a low voice.

His back toward Varney, his fragment of a cigar poised, reluctantly ready to drop, the boy shook his head. "I don't rightly know," he said in his husky little voice.

But Varney knew that name, and he said it now slowly over to himself in a dull and futile anger.

From the shore a boat put out hurriedly and the faithful steward came flying over the water with meritorious speed. With him he was bringing the papers that might settle the Cypriani's mission, but Varney for the moment hardly gave him a thought. His own affairs were blotted from his mind just then by the tragedy of the little waif before him, luckless victim of another's sin, small flotsam which barely weathered the winters when odd jobbing was scarce, and only one lady cared.

"Where do you live, Tommy?"

"Kerrigan's loft mostly—w'en Kerrigan ain't dere."

"This morning," said Varney rapidly, "I'm just as busy as a bee. But this afternoon, or tomorrow morning anyway, I want to come down to Kerrigan's and call on you."

"Wut about?" the boy demanded with an instant suspiciousness which was rather pathetic.

"About you, Tommy. I have got a little plan in my head and there isn't any time to talk about it now. What would you say to having a home with some nice people I know in another city—in New York?"

A sudden dumbness seized Tommy. His head slowly lowered and he did not answer. Around the deckhouse from the port side hurried McTosh, his arm embracing a bundle of papers, his brow beady with the honest toil of speed wrung out of country paths.

"Ah, steward! You made good time. Ask Mr. Maginnis if he won't come on deck when he is at leisure. Thomas, you're for the shore, aren't you? Forward, there!"

He got up and stood by the side of grave little Tommy Orrick, who was staring silently down at the white deck.

"Down in New York, Tommy, I know a nice woman who has a home and no boys at all to put in it. A long time ago she used to be the nurse of a boy I knew, but he grew up; and now her husband's dead and she's all alone. And here in Hunston is a boy with no home to put himself in. That's you, Tommy, and I—but here's your boat. I'll come to see you tomorrow at Kerrigan's—sure, and we'll talk it all over. Good-bye. And remember that you and I are just the best friends going."

He held out his hand, to shake, but Tommy, in an excess of stage fright at the unwonted ceremonial, nimbly turned his back; and the next instant he slipped over the rail like an acrobat and dropped into the waiting dinghy. Safely there, he glanced tentatively upward; but seeing that the tall man above was still standing at the rail and was smiling down upon him, looked tactfully away again. And Varney heard him say to the oarsman in a snappy, impatient voice; "Pull for all you know, dere! I got bizness dat won't keep."

Varney sat down with the bundle of papers. Within the minute Peter appeared, replete but characteristically alert.

"Read it yet?"

"No, but I've found it. It wasn't hard."

He handed Peter the paper, his thumb crooked to indicate the place, which was superfluous; for near the middle of the front page, top of column, and in the strong type of captions, the words leaped out to Peter's eye as though hand illumined in many colors:

"FERRIS STANHOPE OR LAURENCE VARNEY

"Mystery Surrounding Young Man on Yacht Near Hunston.

"He Says He's Varney—Natives Say He's Stanhope and Trouble Feared—
Yacht Is Elbert Carstairs', with Her Name Painted Out—Mr.
Varney's Movements Unknown to Friends Here."

Peter read the story aloud in a guarded undertone. In general, it closely followed the story in the Gazette; so closely indeed as to show at a glance that both productions came from one brain and pen. But towards the end the story took a different turn. It said:

"The above is a sample of the gossip which is agitating this usually quiet little town. Late tonight there are two distinct factions. One holds that the young 'stranger' is Ferris Stanhope, reconnoitering under an alias. The other contends that he is really Laurence Varney, or somebody else, up here on some secret mission. Unless the stranger leaves town before, the facts will doubtless be brought out tomorrow. The gossips promise that a sensation of no mean order is forthcoming."

"A certain air of mystery surrounds Laurence Varney's recent movements. At his bachelor apartments in the Arvonia it was learned last night that Mr. Varney was out of the city, but the man servant there had no idea of his master's whereabouts. From other sources, however, it was learned that Mr. Varney left New York several days ago on the Cypriani, a handsome steam yacht belonging to Elbert Carstairs of No. 00 Fifth avenue. An attempt was made to reach Mr. Carstairs at his home, but the hour was late, and he could not be interviewed. A telegram sent to Ferris Stanhope's last known address, Camp Skagway in the Adirondacks, was unanswered up to the hour of going to press."

Peter let the paper drop upon his knees and whistled rather shamefacedly. Here was a pretty kettle of fish indeed, and it was all of his brewing. If he had kept his fingers out of the affairs of Hunston, as both his enemy and his friend had warned him to do, the unscrupulous editor would have had no interest in attacking him over his captain's shoulders, and this damaging story would never have been concocted and spread broadcast as a feast for gossips. He had been brought to Hunston to help Varney—and here was the front page result.

If a similar thought flashed across Varney's mind in this disturbing moment he instantly forgot it for others more practical. He sat curled up in a folding deck chair, swiftly weighing what this new issue might mean, and a moment of rather heavy silence ensued.

The cat was all but out of the bag: this fatal hint at "some secret mission" made that plain. A little carelessness, some more shrewd probing into his affairs, and the jig would be up, indeed. This was the one way that their enemies in Hunston could interfere with him—insisting on knowing why he had come there; and Coligny Smith had had the bull luck, as Peter put it, to stumble on it.

Thus it fell out that he, Varney, who had needed to seek the dark and unobtrusive ways, found himself thrust suddenly into the full glare of the calcium. He who was guarding an errand which nobody should know about was now to be asked by everybody who read newspapers just what that errand was.

It was so absurd that all at once he laughed aloud. However, it was becoming quite serious, and he saw that, too.

"Damn him!" broke out Peter compactly, and he added presently: "Think of his throwing a bomb in the air like that, and smoking out poor old Carstairs!"

Varney looked up, knocked out his pipe against his heel, and restored it thoughtfully to his pocket. "Yes. Did you notice the difference between those two stories? He doesn't want Hunston even to suspect that I may be myself. His game here is to know I'm Stanhope, whom the whole town is sore on. In New York he tries both stories, not knowing which will hurt the most. However, theories will keep. The facts are plain. They've started out to run us down—that's all. The point is now to decide what we are going to do about it."

He stood up, tall and cool, his jaw shut tightly, his brow puckered into a long frown, thinking rapidly.

"As I see it," he said slowly, "it works about like this. Probably the Gazette is the local news bureau for this town. At any rate, it is evident that somebody on it is the correspondent of the Daily. The Gazette, we know, wants to run you out of town in order to have a free hand in slaughtering Hare. Last night they supposed that my looking like Stanhope was the best card they had. This morning they will guess that there may be a still better one lying around somewhere. The Daily tells them that I'm Varney, and, what is much more interesting, that I'm using Elbert Carstairs' yacht. Mrs. Elbert Carstairs lives in Hunston. Putting two and two together and adding the painted out name and a dash of seeming furtiveness on my part, you have all the materials for a nice, yellow mystery. I haven't the slightest doubt that when that telegraph editor in New York gets down to his office about 1 o'clock today the very first thing he does after hanging his coat on the nail is to wire his correspondent to begin operating on me."

Peter nailed the alternative. "If he doesn't the Gazette will attend to the job anyway."

"Yes, the press is on our trail in any case. The fact that this is the Carstairs yacht will mean more to the Gazette than it could to the Daily. It will be a kind of connecting link for them. Of course, they'll jump at it like wildfire. If they can make

"Pray heaven," said Peter, referring to ary Carstairs, "that she won't see the aily this morning!"

"Yes. Her father's name would naturally art her to thinking, which would make ings awkward."

"Larry, the Gazette is going to print his me tomorrow morning as sure as Smith a lying sneak."

"We've still got today, haven't we? By ve, it's nearly 11 already. A reporter may down on us at almost any minute. We n't stand being cross examined. No search-ht of journalism playing about on the ypriani just now, thank you. My own ea is——"

"To grab him, to batter the face off m——"

"No, to elude him. Not to be here. In ort, to run away."

"What? You can't mean that you are ing to let that dog drive you back to New ork?"

"Well, hardly. But I do mean to make m think he has! I mean to run down the ver a few miles and anchor where they n't find us, simply to get out of the way. hen we'll run back tomorrow in time for e luncheon. What do you think of that?"

Peter, his forehead rumpled like a cordu-y road, stared at him fixedly and thought over. "I think it's the best thing in sight," said judicially. "An exceedingly neat tle idea."

"If we're being watched it may persuade them that we've gone. Anyway, it will give us time to decide what next," said Varney. And he hurried off to confer with the sailing master. Presently the engine room bell rang out a signal. Orders were given and repeated above and below. Men began moving about swiftly. The noise of coal scraped hurriedly out of the bunkers smote the air. The Cypriani's hold throbbed with sudden life.

Varney, running hastily through the two newspaper stories again to make sure that they had missed nothing that might be important to them, was presently joined by Peter, who was looking at his watch every third minute and swearing softly every time he looked. Something had been discovered amiss with the machinery, it seemed. The captain was sure he would have the plaguey thing all right in another half hour, but you never could tell. For his part he'd swear that a yacht was worse than an old style motor car; you could absolutely count on her being out of order at any moment when you positively had to have her.

To be delayed until somebody appeared to challenge their going was to lose half the battle. Varney went off to the sailing master and spoke with him again, concisely. The sailing master, a sensitive man to criticism, once more apologized, very technically, and redoubled his energies. He went below himself to superintend the repairs and to prod the laggards to their utmost endeavors. In less than three-quarters of an hour by Peter's watch he was up again, in a shower of falling perspiration, to announce that all was ready.

However, valuable moments had been lost. It was now nearly half past 12, or, in Peter's indignant summary, "just an hour and a half too late."

Varney glanced toward the bridge.

"All ready there?" he called.

"All ready, sir," said the sailing master, and sprang for the indicator.

"Hold on," said Peter suddenly. "We're getting visitors. There's some one signaling us from the shore."

Varney's heart bounded. He turned with an exclamation; but in the next breath he ordered: "Let her go, Ferguson."

Upon the shore, at the spot where the Cypriani's boat ordinarily landed, stood a tallish, stocky young man, looking at them cheerfully and swabbing his brow with a large blue handkerchief. Catching Varney's eye, he waved his hand with the handkerchief in it, and said, for the second time:

"Hello, aboard the Cypriani!"

Varney stepped to the rail, a faint smile on his lips. "Hello, there! What can we do for you?"

"Hot as merry hell, isn't it?" said the young man pleasantly. "Send a boat over for me, will you? I'm Hammerton of the Gazette and the New York Daily, and I want to come aboard for a little talk."

"Never in this world," breathed Peter, sotto voce.

The Cypriani shuddered like a live thing and slid slowly forward.

Four miles downstream the river's banks grew a long mile apart and the scenery was lonesome and a little wild. Here, as it chanced, there was flung across the water a thin, rocky island, well wooded and of a respectable length. It lay nearest the western shore, and not a hamlet, or even a house, it seemed, commanded it from either side.

They recognized it from afar as an ideal anchorage for a yacht which wanted to be let alone. So they slowed down into the island's curving shore and dropped anchor in the lee of it, out of sight of the Hunston side of the river and in little evidence from any point in midstream above or below.

Securely hidden from the probing eye of the press, they were now in something of a quandary as to what their next step should be. The hour set for the luncheon, upon which their mission hung, was only twenty-four hours away, and they had no idea whether the guest of honor intended to come or stay away. Varney was torn between the necessity of keeping clear of reporters and the even more pressing necessity of calling upon Mary Carstairs. If to go to town was a risk, not to go to town was a much greater one.

They finally decided that Peter should go to Hunston first, at once and alone. He would walk in, lest the use of the Cypriani boat should betray them, and there take charge of the situation and see what could be done.

"You sit tight," Peter urged, "and give me a chance at it first. The Gazette has got nothing on me, you know; they can camp on my shirt tail till they get good and tired. Meantime I'll spread it around that you've gone away and that I'm hanging on a day or two longer to help Hare. You only came on a pleasure trip and all these sensational lies spoiled your pleasure, so you pulled out. That's plausible and reasonably true, you see. Then I'm going to find that fellow Hammerton and try to bluff him off."

"How?"

"I'd much like to give him money, but it's never safe to try that with reporters. O, I'll hobnob with the fellow, hand him cigars, jolly him along about the neat way they got revenge on us for the meeting, and sort of take it for granted that the incident ended when they chased you away from town. If he seems dubious and acts as if he meant to work on the 'secret mission' idea just the same, I'll go in and call on Coligny Smith. O, I'm not going to hit him. If I hadn't known that would be the worst possible tactics, I'd have gone uptown at 9 o'clock this morning and yanked him out of bed by his long, lying ears. I'm only going to talk to him in a kindly way. He told us himself that he was out for the hard money, you know."

"All right," said Varney.

Peter hesitated. "You've got to go in, I suppose? It's hard luck. Here we are working overtime to build up the popular idea that you've quit and gone back to New York. It'll be deuced awkward if that reporter nabs you the minute you set foot in Hunston."

"I've got to risk it. I'll wait a while, though, and give them a chance to drop the trail. And when I do go in I'm not going with a brass band."

"There's not the least hurry," said Peter. "You've got all the rest of the day—tomorrow morning, too, for that matter. Wait here till you hear from me, will you? Maybe I can turn up something which will save you from having to go in at all."

Varney grinned. "Remember yesterday, Peter? When you were coming back at 10 o'clock and came at 4? No more unlimited contracts from me. It is twenty minutes past 1 now. You can get in by 2:30 if you hustle. I must start in by 4:30. It wouldn't be safe to wait any longer."

"Give me a show, will you? Make it 5, anyway."

"Five, then. If you're not back on the dot, in I start for my call. Till we meet again."

Peter started down the stair, hesitated, turned, and came back again. "Larry," he said, with sudden gruffness, "of course, we've both been thinking that if it hadn't been for me none of this mess would have happened. I kick myself when I think——"

"Drop it, Peter. Nobody in the world could have foreseen——"

"Every ass in the United States," said Maginnis, his ponderous foot on the ladder, "could have foreseen it but me. I just want you to know that politics is absolutely sidetracked now. Before I'll let this deal of ours fall through I'll see Hare licked till they can't scrape him together afterward with a fine tooth comb."

It was deadly quiet on the yacht after Peter left. At 2 o'clock Varney went down to a solitary luncheon. At quarter past, followed by the reproachful gaze of McTosh, he came out again. In the pit of his stomach reposed a great emptiness, but it was not hunger. He felt restless, high strung, all made of nerves. He wanted to do something of a violent, physical sort, the more grueling the better; and his task was to loll in an easy-chair under a pretty awning and inspect the landscape.

The port side of the Cypriani was jammed as close into the island as the science of navigation made possible. Varney went over to the other side and sat down to wait. In front of him, 100 yards away, the western bank rose abruptly from the water's edge, reaching here and there to loftiness. There were woods upon it, thick and silent, which looked as if the defiling hand of man had never entered there. At his back was the still, empty little island: at either side stretched the deserted river.

He thought it as lonely a spot as could have been found in a day's journey, but a moment later he discovered his mistake. It was suddenly borne in upon him that the tall, thin object which nestled so closely among the trees a mile to the south that it was scarcely distinguishable from them was in reality the spire of some church, and he knew that he was much closer to his kind than he had thought.

And then, in time, he noticed other things. Before a great while he saw a boat with one person in it—a woman, he thought—put out from the shore at about where the village must be and start across to the other bank. And later, as the afternoon wore on, he caught sight of a canoe a few hundred yards upstream rocking idly down with the current. An elderly looking man sat in it, with a short brown beard and sun goggles showing under his soft hat—for the water burned under a brilliant sky—stolidly fishing and reading a book. He looked like a rusticating college professor—of Greek, say—and this theory seemed to be supported by his obvious ignorance as to how to keep a canoe on the popular side of the water.

And later still a rowboat came swinging briskly up the quiet channel where the yacht lay and passed her at fifty yards. A man and a woman sat in it, presumably bound for Hunston, and they stared at the hidden, detected Cypriani with a decree of frank interest which suggested that they would not fail to mention the strange sight to every acquaintance they met in town.

"That's the beauty about a yacht," thought Varney, annoyed. "You might as well try to hide an elephant in a hallroom."

But his mind soon strayed from the pair of bumpkins and went off to other and more pressing matters. He had now, not one great difficulty to meet and overcome, but two. One of them was to make Uncle Elbert's daughter keep her engagement with him. The other was to prevent the Gazette from linking the name of the Cypriani with the name of Carstairs tomorrow morning. About the first of these he allowed himself no doubts. If the worst came to the worst, he would turn to Mrs. Carstairs. Brutal it might be to compel the mother to introduce the kidnaper to his quarry, her daughter; but that was no fault of his. He would do his duty by Mrs. Carstairs' husband, no matter who got hurt. Miss Carstairs should come to the Cypriani tomorrow as she had promised. In heaven or earth, on land or sea there was no power which should keep him from having his will there.

But then there was the Gazette. Smith, the clever, would doubt that the Cypriani had really gone back to New York. Suppose, since he could not find her, he would venture a few shrewd guesses in his paper tomorrow morning connecting that "secret mission" the Daily had mentioned with Mrs. Elbert Carstairs. Miss Carstairs would see what the Gazette said, and what questions would she have to ask him before she would come as his guest to the yacht? . . .

A ripple of water fell across the young man's thought and he glanced up. The college professor, whom the current had washed much nearer now, fancying, it appeared, that he had got a bite, had suddenly thrown himself far over the edge of his canoe, stretching his rod to the farthest reach. The slender birchbark tipped so violently that even he noticed it, and the next instant he sprang back again, rocking at a great rate.

"Simpleton!" thought Varney. "He will go over in a minute. . . . ."

Now her face rose before him as he had seen it first last night at Stanhope's cottage, radiant as a dream come true—looking at him, and saying: "I'd like it very much if you could just trust me!" And he saw her again when she had looked at him, eye to eye over the many heads before the theater, with only blank unrecognition in her glance, or had there been, after all, a sort of latent sorrowfulness there? And then he saw her once more, as she stood in the little box office, her cheeks suddenly stained red, when she begged him please not to ask her to discuss it any more. . . .

AN ODYSSEY OF THE NORTH

Naass, the Head Man of Akatan, Had a Debt to Pay—and Pay It He Did, with a Vengeance.

by JACK LONDON

THE sleds were singing their eternal lament to the creaking of the harnesses and the tinkling bells of the leaders; but the men and dogs were tired and made no sound. The trail was heavy with new fallen snow, and they had come far, and the runners, burdened with flintlike quarters of frozen moose, clung tenaciously to the unpacked surface and held back with a stubbornness almost human.

Darkness was coming on, but there was no camp to pitch that night. The snow fell gently through the pulseless air, not in flakes but in tiny frost crystals of delicate design. It was very warm—barely 10 below zero—and the men did not mind. Meyers and Bettles had raised their earflaps, while Malemute Kid had even taken off his mittens.

The dogs had been fagged out early in the afternoon, but they now began to show new vigor. Among the more astute there was a certain restlessness—an impatience at the restraint of the traces, an indecisive quickness of movement, a sniffing of snouts and pricking of ears.

Then came a hundred yards' dash to the frosted parchment window, which told its own story of the home cabin, the roaring Yukon stove, and the steaming pots of tea. But the home cabin had been invaded. Three-score huskies choruseu defiance, and as many furry forms precipitated themselves upon the dogs which drew the first sled. The door was flung open, and a man, clad in the scarlet tunic of the Northwest police, waded knee-deep among the furious brutes, calmly and impartially dispensing soothing justice with the butt end of a dog whip. After that the men shook hands; and in this wise was Malemute Kid welcomed to his own cabin by a stranger.

Stanley Prince, who should have welcomed him and who was responsible for the Yukon stove and hot tea aforementioned, was busy with his guests. There were a dozen or so of them, as nondescript a crowd as ever served the queen in the enforcement of her laws or the delivery of her mails. They were of many breeds, but their common life had formed of them a certain type, a lean and wiry type, with trail hardened muscles, and sun browned faces, and untroubled souls which gazed frankly forth, clear eyed and steady. They drove the dogs of the queen, wrought fear in the hearts of her enemies, ate of her meager fare, and were happy. They had seen life, and done deeds, and lived romances; but they did not know it.

Rough jests and rougher jokes went up and down, and great hazards by trail and river were spoken of in the light of commonplaces, only to be recalled by virtue of some grain of humor or ludicrous happening. Prince was led away by these uncrowned heroes who had seen history made, who regarded the great and the romantic as but the ordinary, and the incidental in the routine of life. He passed his precious tobacco among them with lavish disregard, and rusty chains of reminiscence were loosened, and forgotten odysseys resurrected for his especial benefit.

When conversation dropped and the travelers filled the last pipes and unlashed their tight rolled sleeping furs Prince fell back upon his comrade for further information.

"But, I say, what's that glum looking fellow by the stove? I'll swear he can't talk English. He hasn't opened his mouth all night."

"All the coast wondered about him eight years ago. Sort of mysterious, you know. He came down out of the north, in the dead of winter, many a thousand miles from here, skirting Bering sea and traveling as though the devil were after him. No one ever learned where he came from, but he must have come far. He was badly travel worn when he got food from the Swedish missionary on Golovin bay and asked the way south. We heard of this afterward. Then he abandoned the shore line, heading right across Norton sound. Terrible weather, snowstorms and high winds, but he pulled through where a thousand other men would have died, missing St. Michael's and making the land at Pastilik. He'd lost all but two dogs, and was nearly gone with starvation.

"After the ice passed out of the sea word came up from Nunivak island that he'd gone in there for grub. Then he dropped from sight, and this is the first heard of him in eight years. Now, where did he come from, and what was he doing there, and why did he come from there? He's an Indian, he's been nobody knows where, and he's had discipline, which is unusual for an Indian. Another mystery of the north for you to solve, Prince."

"Thanks, awfully; but I've got too many on hand as it is," he replied.

The next morning, he of the otter skins seemed very restless, and at last he drew Malemute Kid to one side and talked for some time in low tones. Prince cast curious eyes in their direction, and the mystery deepened when they put on caps and mittens and went outside. When they returned, Malemute Kid placed his gold scales on the table, weighed out the matter of sixty ounces, and transferred them to the Strange One's sack. Then the chief of the dog drivers joined the conclave, and certain business was transacted with him. The next day the gang went on up the river, but he of the otter skins took several pounds of grub and turned his steps back toward Dawson.

"Didn't know what to make of it," said Malemute Kid in response to Prince's queries; "but the poor beggar wanted to be quit of the service for some reason or other—at least it seemed a most important one to him though he wouldn't let on what. You see, it's just like the army; he signed for two years, and the only way to get free was to buy himself out. He couldn't desert and then stay here, and he was just wild to remain in the country. So he talked it over with the lieutenant governor, and made arrangements in the case he could get the money from me—loan, you know. Said he'd pay back in the year, and if I wanted, would put me onto something rich. Never'd seen it, but knew it was rich. Told him to consider it in the light of a grub stake. Think he'd have it? No, sir! Swore he'd give me all he found, make me rich beyond the dreams of avarice, and all such stuff. Now a man who puts his life and time against a grub stake ordinarily finds it hard enough to turn over half of what he finds. Something behind all this, Prince; just you make a note of it. We'll hear of him if he stays in the country"——

"And if he doesn't?"

"Then my good nature gets a shock, and I'm sixty some odd ounces out."

The cold weather had come on with the long nights, and the sun had begun to play his ancient game of peekaboo along the southern snow line ere aught was heard of Malemute Kid's grub stake. And then, one bleak morning in early January, a heavily laden dog train pulled into his cabin below Stuart river. He of the otter skins was there, and with him walked a man such as the gods have almost forgotten how to fashion. Men never talked of luck and pluck and five hundred dollar dirt without bringing in the name of Axel Gunderson; nor could tales of nerve or strength or daring pass up and down the campfire without the summoning of his presence. And when the conversation flagged it blazed anew at mention of the woman who shared his fortunes.

As has been noted, in the making of Axel Gunderson the gods had remembered their old time cunning, and cast him after the manner of men who were born when the world was young. Full seven feet he towered in his picturesque costume which marked a king of El Dorado. His chest, neck, and limbs were those of a giant. To bear his three hundred pounds of bone and muscle, his snowshoes were greater by a generous yard than those of other men. Rough hewn, with rugged brow and massive jaw and unflinching eyes of palest blue, his face told the tale of one who knew but the law of might. Of the yellow of ripe corn silk, his frost incrusted hair swept like day across the night, and fell far down his coat of bearskin. A vague tradition of the sea seemed to cling about him as he swung down the narrow trail in advance of the dogs; and he brought the butt of his dog whip against Malemute Kid's door as a Norse sea rover, on southern foray, might thunder for admittance at the castle gate.

Prince bared his womanly arms and kneaded sour dough bread, casting, as he did so, many a glance at the three guests—three guests the like of which might never come under a man's roof in a lifetime. The Strange One, whom Malemute Kid had surnamed Ulysses, still fascinated him; but his interest chiefly gravitated between Axel Gunderson and Axel Gunderson's wife. She felt the day's journey, for she had softened in comfortable cabins during the many days since her husband mastered the wealth of frozen pay streaks, and she was tired.

She rested against his great breast like a slender flower against a wall, replying lazily to Malemute Kid's good natured banter and stirring Prince's blood strangely with an occasional sweep of her deep, dark eyes.

She had traveled—had been in his country among others, he gathered from the conversation; and she knew most of the things the women of his own race knew, and much more that it was not in the nature of things for them to know.

This, then, was the wife of Axel Gunderson, a woman whose name and fame had traveled with her husband's, hand in hand, through all the northland. At table, Malemute Kid baited her with the assurance of an old friend, and Prince shook off the shyness of first acquaintance and joined in. But she held her own in the unequal contest, while her husband, slower in wit, ventured naught but applause. And he was very proud of her; his every look and action revealed the magnitude of the place she occupied in his life. He of the otter skins ate in silence, forgotten in the merry battle; and long ere the others were done he pushed back from the table and went out among the dogs. Yet all too soon his fellow travelers drew on their mittens and parkas and followed him.

There had been no snow for many days, and the sleds slipped along the hard packed Yukon trail as easily as if it had been glare ice. Ulysses led the first sled; with the second came Prince and Axel Gunderson's wife; while Malemute Kid and the yellow haired giant brought up the third.

"It's only a 'hunch,' Kid," he said; "but I think it's straight. He's never been there, but he tells a good story, and shows a map I heard of when I was in the Kootenay country, years ago. I'd like to have you go along; but he's a strange one, and swore point-blank to throw it up if any one was brought in. But when I come back you'll get first tip, and I'll stake you next to me, and give you a half share in the townsite besides."

The sleds came to a halt where the trail crossed the mouth of Stuart river. An unbroken sea of frost, its wide expanse stretched away into the unknown east. The snowshoes were withdrawn from the lashings of the sleds. Axel Gunderson shook hands and stepped to the fore, his great webbed shoes sinking a fair half yard into the feathery surface and packing the snow so the dogs should not wallow. His wife fell in behind the last sled, betraying long practice in the art of handling the awkward footgear. The stillness was broken with cheery farewells; the dogs whined; and he of the otter skins talked with his whip to a recalcitrant wheeler.

An hour later, the train had taken on the likeness of a black pencil crawling in a long, straight line across a mighty sheet of foolscap.

II.

One night, many weeks later, Malemute Kid and Prince fell to solving chess problems from the torn page of an ancient magazine. It was very interesting. Somebody knocked at the door a second time before Malemute Kid said, "Come in." The door swung open. Something staggered in. Prince caught one square look, and sprang to his feet. The horror in his eyes caused Malemute Kid to whirl about; and he, too, was startled, though he had seen bad things before. The thing tottered blindly toward them. Prince edged away, till he reached the nail from which hung his Smith & Wesson.

"My God! what is it?" he whispered to Malemute Kid.

The thing advanced on the table, tottered with a wolfish snarl to the meat shelf, and before they could intercept was tearing with his teeth at a chunk of raw bacon. The struggle was fierce between him and Malemute Kid; but his mad strength left him as suddenly as it had come, and he weakly surrendered the spoil. Between them they got him upon a stool, where he sprawled with half his body across the table. A small dose of whisky strengthened him, so that he could dip a spoon into the sugar caddy which Malemute Kid placed before him. After his appetite had been somewhat cloyed, Prince, shuddering as he did so, passed him a mug of weak beef tea.

"Who—are—you?" slowly and distinctly enunciated the Kid.

The man paid no heed.

He rose slowly to his feet, half leaning on the table.

"She laughed at me—so—with the hate in her eye; and she—would—not—come."

His voice died away, and he was sinking back when Malemute Kid gripped him by the wrist, and shouted, "Who? Who would not come?"

"She, Unga. She laughed, and struck at me, so, and so. And then"——

"Where is Unga?" For all Malemute Kid knew, she might be dying a mile away. He shook the man savagely, repeating again and again, "Where is Unga? Who is Unga?"

"She—is—in—the—snow."

"Go on!" The Kid was pressing his wrist cruelly.

"So—I—would—be—in—the snow—but—I—had—a—debt—to—pay. It—was—heavy—I—had—a debt—to—pay—a—debt—to—pay—I — had" —— The faltering monosyllables ceased, as he fumbled in his pouch and drew forth a buckskin sack. "A—debt—to—pay—five—pounds—of—gold—grub—stake—Mal—e—mute—Kid — I" —— The exhausted head dropped upon the table; nor could Malemute Kid rouse it again.

"It's Ulysses," he said quietly, tossing the bag of dust on the table. "Guess it's all day with Axel Gunderson and the woman. Come on, let's get him between the blankets. He's Indian; he'll pull through, and tell a tale besides."

As they cut his garments from him, near his right breast could be seen two unhealed, hard lipped knife thrusts.

III.

"I will talk of the things which were, in my own way; but you will understand. I will begin at the beginning, and tell of myself and the woman, and after that, of the man."

He of the otter skins drew over to the stove as do men who have been deprived of fire and are afraid the Promethean gift may vanish at any moment. Malemute Kid pricked up the slush lamp and placed it so its light might fall upon the face of the narrator. Prince slid his body over the edge of the bunk and joined them.

"I am Naass, a chief, and the son of a chief, born between a sunset and a rising, on the dark seas, in my father's oomiak. We dwelt in Akatan, which lies in the midst of the sea on the edge of the world. We farmed the salt seas for the fish, the seal, and the otter; and our homes shouldered about one another on the rocky strip between the rim of the forest and the yellow beach where our kayaks lay. We were not many, and the world was very small. There were strange lands to the east—islands like Akatan; so we thought all the world was islands, and did not mind.

"Two men came from out of the sea in the boat which lay in pieces on the beach. And they were white like you, and weak as the little children when the seal have gone away and the hunters come home empty. I know of these things from the old men and the old women, who got them from their fathers and mothers before them. These strange white men did not take kindly to our ways at first, but they grew strong, what of the fish and the oil, and fierce. And they built them each his own house, and took the pick of our women, and in time children came.

"But when they had become chiefs, they fought, these strange white men, each with the other. And the one whose blood I carry drove his seal spear the length of an arm through the other's body. Their children took up the fight, and their children's children; and there was great hatred between them, and black doings, even to my time, so that in each family but one lived to pass down the blood of them that went before. Of my blood I was alone; of the other man's there was but a girl, Unga, who lived with her mother. Her father and my father did not come back from the fishing one night; but afterward they washed up to the beach on the big tides, and they held very close to each other.

"The people wondered, because of the hatred between the houses, and the old men shook their heads and said the fight would go on when children were born to her and children to me. They told me this as a boy, till I came to believe, and to look upon Unga as a foe, who was to be the mother of children which were to fight with mine. I thought of these things day by day, and when I grew to a stripling I came to ask why this should be so. And they answered, 'We do not know, but that in such way your fathers did.'

"And they said I must hurry, that my blood might be older and grow strong before hers. This was easy, for I was head man, and the people looked up to me because of the deeds and the laws of my fathers, and the wealth which was mine. Any maiden would come to me, but I found none to my liking. And the old men and the mothers of maidens told me to hurry, for even then were the hunters bidding high to the mother of Unga; and should her children grow strong before mine, mine would surely die.

"Nor did I find a maiden till one night coming back from the fishing. The sunlight was lying, so, low and full in the eyes, the wind free, and the kayaks racing with the white seas. Of a sudden the kayak of Unga came driving past me, and she looked upon me, so, with her black hair flying like a cloud of night, and the spray wet on her cheek. As I say, the sunlight was full in the eyes, and I was a stripling; but somehow it was all clear, and I knew it to be the call of kind to kind.

"And a great thought came to me that night—a thought worthy of him that was chief over all the people of Akatan. So, when the moon was up, I went down to the house of her mother, and looked upon the goods of Yash-Noosh, which were piled by the door—the goods of Yash-Noosh, a strong hunter who had it in mind to be the father of the children of Unga. Other young men had piled their goods there, and taken them away again; and each young man had made a pile greater than the one before.

"So when the morning came I went down to the beach, casting out of the corner of my eye at the house of the mother of Unga. My offer yet stood untouched. And the women smiled and said sly things one to the other. I wondered, for never had such a price been offered; and that night I added more to the pile, and put beside it a kayak of well tanned skins which never yet had swum in the sea. But in the day it was yet there, open to the laughter of all men. The mother of Unga was crafty, and I grew angry at the shame in which I stood before my people. So that night I added till it became a great pile, and I hauled up my oomiak, which was of the value of twenty kayaks And in the morning there was no pile.

"And once, twice, she passed the knife."

"Then made I preparation for the wedding, and the people that live even to the east came for the food of the feast and the potlach token. Unga was older than I by the age of four suns in the way we reckoned the years. I was only a stripling; but then I was a chief and the son of a chief, and it did not matter.

"But a ship shoved her sails above the floor of the ocean, and grew larger with the breath of the wind. From her scuppers she ran clear water, and the men were in haste and worked hard at the pumps. On the bow stood a mighty man, watching the depth of the water and giving commands with a voice of thunder. His eyes were of the pale blue of the deep waters, and his head was maned like that of a sea lion. And his hair was yellow, like the straw of a southern harvest or the manila rope yarns which sailormen plait.

"When the tide rose the sea wanderers kedged the schooner to deep water, and then came among us. They bore presents and were friendly; so I made room for them, and out of the largeness of my heart gave them tokens such as I gave all the guests; for it was my wedding day, and I was head man in Akatan. And he with the mane of the sea lion was there, so tall and strong that one looked to see the earth shake with the fall of his feet. He looked much and straight at Unga, with his arms folded, so, and stayed till the sun went away and the stars came out. Then he went down to his ship. After that I took Unga by the hand and led her to my own house. And there was singing and great laughter, and the women said sly things, after the manner of women at such times. But we did not care. Then the people left us alone and went home.

"The last noise had not died away when the chief of the sea wanderers came in by the door. And he had with him black bottles, from which we drank and made merry. You see, I was only a stripling, and had lived all my days on the edge of the world. So my blood became as fire and my heart as light as the froth that flies from the surf to the cliff. Unga sat silent among the skins in the corner, her eyes wide, for she seemed to fear. And he with the mane of the sea lion looked upon her straight and long. Then his men came in with bundles of goods, and he piled before me wealth such as was not in all Akatan. There were guns, both large and small, and powder and shot and shell, and bright axes and knives of steel, and cunning tools, and strange things the like of which I had never seen.

"When he showed me by sign that it was all mine, I thought him a great man to be so free; but he showed me also that Unga was to go away with him in his ship. Do you understand?—that Unga was to go away with him in his ship. The blood of my fathers flamed hot on the sudden, and I made to drive him through with my spear. But the spirit of the bottles had stolen the life from my arm, and he took me by the neck, so, and knocked my head against the wall of the house. And I was made weak like a new born child and my legs would no more stand under me. Unga screamed and she laid hold of the things of the house with her hands, till they fell all about us as he dragged her to the door. Then he took her in his great arms, and when she tore at his yellow hair laughed with a sound like that of the big bull seal in the rut.

"The people said it was good, for there would be no more war of the bloods in Akatan; but I said never a word, waiting till the time of the full moon, when I put fish and oil in my kayak and went away to the east. I saw many islands and many people, and I, who had lived on the edge, saw that the world was very large. I talked by signs; but they had not seen a schooner nor a man with the mane of a sea lion, and they pointed always to the east. And I slept in queer places, and ate odd things, and met strange faces. Many laughed, for they thought me light of head; but sometimes old men turned my face to the light and blessed me, and the eyes of the young women grew soft as they asked me of the strange ship, and Unga, and the men of the sea.

"And in this manner, through rough seas and great storms, I came to Unalaska. There were two schooners there, but neither was the one I sought. So I passed on to the east.

"But the look in the eyes of Unga coming home from the fishing was with me always, and I knew I would find her when the time was met. She walked down quiet lanes in the dusk of the evening, or led me chases across the thick fields wet with the morning dew, and there was a promise in her eyes such as only the woman Unga could give.

"So I wandered through a thousand cities. Some were gentle and gave me food, and others laughed, and still others cursed; but I kept my tongue between my teeth and went strange ways and saw strange sights. Sometimes I, who was a chief and the son of a chief, toiled for men—men rough of speech and hard as iron, who wrung gold from the sweat and sorrow of their fellow men. Yet no word did I get of my quest, till I came back to the sea like a homing seal to the rookeries. But this was at another port, in another country which lay to the north. And there I heard dim tales of the yellow haired sea wanderer, and I learned that he was a hunter of seals, and that even then he was abroad on the ocean.

"So I shipped on a seal schooner with the lazy Siwashes, and followed his trackless trail to the north where the hunt was then warm.

"But the sea was no longer fruitful, and those who went upon it after the seal went to little profit and great risk. The fleets scattered, and the captains and the men had no word of those I sought. So I turned away from the ocean which never rests and went among the lands where the trees, the houses, and the mountains sit always in one place and do not move. I journeyed far and came to learn many things, even to the way of reading and writing from books. It was well I should do this, for it came upon me that Unga must know these things and that some day, when the time was met—we—you understand, when the time was met.

"So I drifted, like those little fish which raise a sail to the wind but cannot steer. But my eyes and my ears were open always, and I went among men who traveled much, for I knew they had but to see those I sought to remember. At last there came a man, fresh from the mountains, with pieces of rock in which the free gold stood to the size of peas, and he had heard, he had met, he knew them. They were rich, he said, and lived in the place where they drew the gold from the ground.

"I followed to England and then to other countries. Sometimes I heard of them by word of mouth, sometimes I read of them in the papers; yet never once could I come by them, for they had much money and traveled fast, while I was a poor man. Then came trouble upon them, and their wealth slipped away one day like a curl of smoke. The papers were full of it at the time; but after that nothing was said, and I knew they had gone back where more gold could be got from the ground.

"They had dropped out of the world, being now poor; and so I wandered from camp to camp, even north to the Kootenay country, where I picked up the cold scent. They had come and gone, some said this way and some that and still others that they had gone to the country of the Yukon.

"After that all the world began to flock into the north. I was a poor man; I sold myself to be a driver of dogs. The rest you know. I met him and her in Dawson. She did not know me, for I was only a stripling, and her life had been large, so she had no time to remember the one who had paid for her an untold price.

"So? You bought me from my term of service. I went back to bring things about in my own way, for I had waited long, and now that I had my hand upon him was in no hurry. As I say, I had it in mind to do my own way, for I read back in my life, through all I had seen and suffered and remembered the cold and hunger of the endless forest by the Russian seas. As you know, I led him into the east—him and Unga—into the east where many have gone and few returned. I led them to the spot where the bones and the curses of men lie with the gold which they may not have.

"The way was long and the trail unpacked. Our dogs were many and ate much, nor could our sleds carry till the break of spring. We must come back before the river ran free. So here and there we cached grub, that our sleds might be lightened and there be no chance of famine on the back trip.

"Sometimes, in a day's toil, we made no more than eight miles, or ten and at night we slept like dead men. And never once did they dream that I was Naass, head man of Akatan, the righter of wrongs.

"We now made smaller caches, and in the nighttime it was a small matter to go back on the trail we had broken, and change them in such way that one might deem the wolverines and thieves. Again, there be places where there is a fall to the river, and the water is unruly, and the ice makes above and is eaten away beneath. In such a spot the sled I drove broke through, and the dogs; and to him and Unga it was ill luck, but no more. And there was much grub on that sled, and the dogs the strongest. But he laughed, for he was strong of life, and gave the dogs that were left little grub till we cut them from the harnesses, one by one, and fed them to their mates.

"To reach that place—and the map spoke true—in the heart of the great mountains, we cut ice steps against the wall of a divide. And on one side, and one side only, the wall had fallen away till it was like the slope of the decks in a topsail breeze. I do not know why this thing should be so, but it was so. 'It is the mouth of hell,' he said; 'let us go down.' And we went down.

"And on the bottom there was a cabin, built by some man, of logs which he had cast down from above. It was a very old cabin; for men had died there alone at different times, and on pieces of birch bark which were there we read their last words and their curses. And the worthless gold they had gathered yellowed the floor of the cabin like in a dream.

"But his soul was steady and his head clear, this man I had led thus far. 'We have nothing to eat,' he said, 'and we will only look upon this gold, and see whence it comes and how much there be. Then we will go away quick, before it gets into our eyes and steals away our judgment. And in this way we may return in the end, with more grub, and possess it all.' So we looked upon the great vein, which cut the wall of the pit as a true vein should; and we measured it, and traced it from above and below, and drove the stakes of the claims and blazed the trees in token of our rights. Then, our knees shaking with lack of food, and a sickness in our bellies, and our hearts chugging close to our mouths, we climbed the mighty wall for the last time and turned our faces to the back trip.

"The last stretch we dragged Unga between us, and we fell often, but in the end we made the cache. And lo, there was no grub. It was well done, for he thought it the wolverines and damned them and his gods in one breath. But Unga was brave, and smiled, and put her hand in his, till I turned away that I might hold myself. 'We will rest by the fire,' she said, 'till morning, and we will gather strength from our moccasins.' So we cut the tops of our moccasins in strips and boiled them half of the night, that we might chew them and swallow them. And in the morning we talked of our chance. The next cache was five days' journey; we could not make it. We must find game.

"'We will go forth and hunt,' he said.

"'Yes,' said I, 'we will go forth and hunt.'

"And he ruled that Unga stay by the fire and save her strength. And we went forth, he in quest of the moose, and I to the cache I had changed. But I ate little, so they might not see in me much strength. And in the night he fell may times as he drew into the camp. And I, too, made to suffer great weakness, stumbling over my snowshoes as though each step might be my last. And we gathered strength from our moccasins.

"That night he was near gone; but in the morning he swore weakly and went forth again. He was like a drunken man, and I looked many times for him to give up; but his was the strength of the strong, and his soul the soul of a giant, for he lifted his body through all the weary day. And he shot two ptarmigan, but would not eat them. He needed no fire; they meant life; but his thought was for Unga, and he turned toward camp. He no longer walked, but crawled on hand and knee through the snow. I came to him, and read death in his eyes. Even then it was not too late to eat of the ptarmigan. He cast away his rifle, and carried the birds in his mouth like a dog. I walked by his side, upright. And he looked at me during the moments he rested, and wondered that I was so strong. I could see it, though he no longer spoke; and when his lips moved, they moved without sound. As I say, he was a great man, and my heart spoke for softness; but I read back in my life, and remembered the cold and hunger of the endless forest by the Russian seas. Besides, Unga was mine, and I had paid for her an untold price of skin and boat and bead.

"And in this manner we came through the white forest, with the silence heavy upon us like a damp sea mist. And the ghosts of the past were in the air and all about us; and I saw the yellow beach of Akatan, and the kayaks racing home from the fishing, and the houses on the rim of the forest. And the men who had made themselves chiefs were there, the lawgivers whose blood I bore, and whose blood I had wedded in Unga. Ay, and Yash-Noosh walked with me, the wet sand in his hair, and his war spear, broken as he fell upon it, still in his hand. And I knew the time was met, and saw in the eyes of Unga the promise.

"As I say, we came thus through the forest, till the smell of the camp smoke was in our nostrils. And I bent above him, and tore the ptarmigan from his teeth. He turned on his side and rested, the wonder mounting in his eyes, and the hand which was under slipping slow toward the knife at his hip. But I took it from him, smiling close in his face. Even then he did not understand. So I made to drink from black bottles, and to build high upon the snow a pile of goods, and to live again the things which happened on the night of my marriage. I spoke no word, but he understood.

"Yet was he unafraid. There was a sneer to his lips, and cold anger, and he gathered new strength with the knowledge. It was not far, but the snow was deep, and he dragged himself very slow. Once he lay so long I turned him over and gazed into his eyes. And sometimes he looked forth, and sometimes death. And when I loosed him he struggled on again. In this way we came to the fire. Unga was at his side on the instant. His lips moved, without sound; then he pointed at me, that Unga might understand. And after that he lay in the snow, very still, for a long while. Even now is he there in the snow.

"I said no word till I had cooked the ptarmigan. Then I spoke to her in her own tongue, which she had not heard in many years. She straightened herself, so, and her eyes were wonder wide, and she asked who I was, and where I had learned that speech.

"'I am Naass,' I said.

"'You?' she said. 'You?' And she crept close that she might look upon me.

"'Yes,' I answered, 'I am Naass, head man of Akatan, the last of the blood, as you are the last of the blood.'

"But she shoved her face in his yellow mane and laughed till it seemed the heavens must fall about our ears. I had thought she would be overjoyed at the sight of me and eager to go back to the memory of old times; but this seemed a strange form to take.

"And she ran her hand through his yellow hair and smiled in a way which was not good. And there was no promise in her eyes.

"I sat silent and marveled at the strangeness of woman. I went back to the night when he dragged her from me and she screamed and tore at his hair—at his hair which now she played with and would not leave. Then I remembered the price and the long years of waiting; and I gripped her close and dragged her away as he had done. And she held back, even as on that night, and fought like a she-cat for its whelp. And when the fire was between us and the man I loosed her, and she sat and listened. And I told her of all that lay between, of all that had happened me on strange seas, of all that I had done in strange lands; of my weary quest and the hungry years and the promise which had been mine from the first. Ay, I told all, even to what had passed that day between the man and me and in the days yet young.

"And as I spoke I saw the promise grow in her eyes, full and large like the break of dawn. And I read pity there, the tenderness of woman, the love, the heart and the soul of Unga. And I was a stripling again, for the look was the look of Unga as she ran up the beach, laughing, to the home of her mother. The stern unrest was gone, and the hunger, and the weary waiting. The time was met. I felt the call of her breast, and it seemed there I must pillow my head and forget. She opened her arms to me, and I came against her. Then, sudden, the hate flamed in her eye, her hand was at my hip. And once, twice, she passed the knife.

"'Dog!' she sneered, as she flung me into the snow. 'Swine!' And then she laughed till the silence cracked and went back to her dead.

"As I say, once she passed the knife and twice; but she was weak with hunger and it was not meant that I should die. Yet was I minded to stay in that place and to close my eyes in the last long sleep with those whose lives had crossed with mine and led my feet on unknown trails. But there lay a debt upon me which would not let me rest.

"And the way was long, the cold bitter, and there was little grub. The Pellys had found no moose and had robbed my cache. And so had the three white men; but they lay thin and dead in their cabin as I passed. After that I do not remember, till I came here and found food and fire—much fire."

As he finished he crouched closely, even jealously, over the stove. For a long while the slush lamp shadows played tragedies upon the wall.

"But Unga!" cried Prince, the vision still strong upon him.

"Unga? She would not eat of the ptarmigan. She lay with her arms about his neck, her face deep in his yellow hair. I drew the fire close, that she might not feel the frost; but she crept to the other side. And I built a fire there; yet it was little good, for she would not eat. And in this manner they still lie up there in the snow."

"And you?" asked Malemute Kid.

"I do not know; but Akatan is small, and I have little wish to go back and live on the edge of the world. Yet is there small use in life. I can go to Constantine and he will put irons upon me and one day they will tie a piece of rope, so, and I will sleep good. Yet—no; I do not know."

"But, Kid," protested Prince, "this is murder!"

"Hush!" commanded Malemute Kid. "There be things greater than our wisdom, beyond all justice. The right and the wrong of this we cannot say, and it is not for us to judge."

Naass drew yet closer to the fire. There was a great silence, and in each man's eyes many pictures came and went.

THE TEENIE WEENIE

DOCTOR SAID, "STICK OUT YOUR TONGUE."

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"DOCTAH! Doctah!" shouted Gogo, busting into the Teenie Weenie sitting room, where the Doctor sat dozing beside the tiny fireplace.

"What's up?" yawned the Doctor, rubbing his eyes.

"There's a powerful sick cat what am in-in-indisposed out on the garden walk, and he wants you fo' to give him some medicine," gasped Gogo.

"All right," said the doctor, grabbing his hat and medicine case. "We'll see what's the matter."

The two little chaps hurried down the walk to a spot near the garden fence where a very big cat sat surrounded by a crowd of curious Teenie Weenies.

"Well," said the Doctor, dropping his medicine case and peering up into the cat's half closed eyes, "what seems to be the trouble?"

"O, dear, I'm so sick! I'm—I'm—I'm afraid I'm going to have a fit or something," groaned the cat.

"Pains in your stomach?" asked the Doctor.

"Pains!" screamed the cat. "I've a—a—a million pains. O, dear! O, dear!" and the cat moved her big head from side to side while a tear fell off her hairy cheek and almost dropped on the General, who stood near.

"Stick out your tongue," said the Doctor.

The cat slowly stuck out her pink tongue and the Doctor very carefully looked at it for some moments.

"I thought so," he nodded. "Have you been eating much meat lately?"

"Why, er—er—only a rat yesterday and three mice today," answered the cat.

"You haven't had much exercise lately, have you?"

"N-n-no," said the cat. "I haven't been chased by a dog for several weeks."

"Well, you've been eating too much meat and you need more exercise. You cats are all too lazy; you sleep too much and eat more than is good for you."

"Well, we've got to catch the mice and rats, haven't we?" asked the cat.

"Certainly," answered the Doctor, "but you don't need to eat every mouse you catch, do you?"

"Well, it just seems wasteful to throw away a perfectly good fresh mouse," sighed the cat.

"If you want to get well you must leave off eating meat for at least three weeks. For breakfast you can have fresh milk and for dinner you should eat a little fish. The first thing in the morning you should have a little light exercise, say a half hour's play with a ball of yarn; and here," said the Doctor, reaching into his medicine case, "are some catnip pills. Take one after each meal."

The cat thanked the Doctor for his kindness, and, taking the pills in her mouth, she ran over to a bush near by and buried them in the ground for safe keeping.

FASHIONS, BEAUTY, CONTESTS.

PART 6

STRAIGHT IS THE LINE OF BEAUTY

By Corinne Lowe

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

A model from Doueillet of cream and lace; interesting not only for its effective commingling of these two materials but for the back and front panel so much in vogue now. "We must be thin," these panels seem to say and they do create a willowyness in the bearing of the wearer.

Center figure:

A sheath-like frock of black satin with a tunic of black tulle falling over it as the spray of a fountain falls over the marble figure in its center. From shoulder to hem it serves as a mist through which one beholds every line of that slim fitting satin underdress.

One of Doueillet's models of black satin with a gold embroidered cuirass-like bodice. Heavy gold bands cross over the shoulders and from these fall a sumptuous fringe of jet. The trail at the back is square in outline and bears the same message of richness as do its bold embroidered corners.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—(Special correspondence)—Things are different now from the way they used to be. In our good old fashioned openings it wasn't a bit hard to find a head line. "Clothes Are Inspired by the Directoire Period" or "Medieval Influence Is Strongly Apparent"—you remember the way it was done? For instance, there was that minaret tunic which Monsieur Poiret devised several years ago. The minaret was a regular cave man. It caught every woman by the back hair and whisked her away to its far from lonely (f)lare. No frock from the Baltic to the Red sea could get away from that sassy rag time tunic.

Alas for minaret! Alas for styles that everybody caught! This year the French fashion folk had a perfect quilting bee and they have sewed in for us every patch of fashion that ever was. We hate to think, in fact, what would have happened to us without Mlle. Jenny. We should probably still be groping for a head line on the night's Plutonian shore.

Before Jenny had her opening this year the American buyer was sitting around in a state of coma. They had rattled so many things before his eyes that he was like a big frightened baby. He couldn't tell what he wanted to grab for—Directoire or Empire, the peg top skirt that sticks out at the hips or the barrel skirt that balloons about the knees. And then—blessed lamp to the wandering bark—Jenny showed what she had been doing all these winter months. She didn't use short waists. She didn't whittle her skirts out into some puffy gargoyle grotesqueness of shape. On the contrary, the waist line was frequently dropped to the hips and the skirts—often set off with groups of knife plaits, frequently diversified by a broad floating panel in the back—showed never a symptom of either peg top or tonneau.

For this reason we give the central place today to Jenny's most distinctive frock. Please vitalize this mode. Behold before you a sheath-like underfrock of black satin—slim and compact and tight fitting as a Kipling sentence. It is belted at the natural waist line and trimmed with blue silk bands embroidered in silver. Over this falls—much as the spray of a fountain over the marble figure in the center—a tunic of black tulle with deep lace edge. The tunic, you will see, is not held in at a single place. From shoulder to hem it serves merely as the mist through which one beholds every line of that slim fitting satin underdress.

Yes, hard to wear it certainly is. Only the now and then figure would dare commit itself to that severe line of black satin. But to the slim and youthful these frocks with their misty tunics of tulle or organdy or lace hovering over slips of satin generally aglitter with gold or silver or jet embroidery are quite the loveliest and most provocative things seen this many a day.

In her less formal gowns Jenny shows the same slimpsy lines. Be a billiard cue, says she persuasively. And her bodices often patrol the coast line clear to the hips. This long slender waist and this narrow skirt have produced what is called the Egyptian silhouette. Why Egyptian we can't exactly see. Perhaps the Egyptians invented that long lined hipless gown, but since then the fire has been rekindled many times. The women of Crete wore that same elongated bodice and if you will compare a picture of some woman of ancient Egypt with the Middle Age chatelaine who embroidered in her turret while her lord went off to the wars you will see that the costumes are almost exactly the same.

Be that as it may the Egyptian silhouette is the name given to these new straight lined frocks. And this is the recipe over which was made the evening gown of black satin to the right. This model is from Doueillet and from its gold embroidered cuirass-like bodice falls the narrow skirt turned in slightly at the hem. Heavy gold bands cross over the shoulders and from these fall a sumptous fring of jet. The trail which falls from the back of the decolletage is, as will be seen, square in outline and bears the same message of richness in its gold embroidered corners.

Lace provides a text for many of the new evening gowns. Here in the last model—also from Doueillet— a few paragraphs of cream lace receive a commentary of jet. The fact of it is that never before has any spring caught us wearing so much heavy-weight gold and silver and steel and jet embroidery.

The frock to the left is interesting, not because of its use of lace and jet, but because it presents back and front the panels so much in vogue this season. Jenny, for instance, has featured for us the straight panel back in one of her most successful frocks—an evening gown of black charmeuse, which is, of course, embroidered heavily in gold. These panels contribute to the strength of our argument. Nothing puffed, distended, humpy, or even curvy is given a passport to the new modes. So—altogether—let us say it, "We're going to be thin, we're going to be thin."

One last word. In order to Egyptian silhouette well the woman afflicted with curves must take to herself a brassiere. The fact of it is that many of the mannequins who displayed the new modes did not seem to be wearing any corsets at all. They just dipped and slanted and bent like hollyhocks in the breeze.

One feature bound to make an impression is the great prevalence of vital color, of the kind of color that belongs to the primitive people. Whether we go to Russia or to China or to India, we are using color that belongs to those races, vivid greens and rich reds and splendid picturesque effects for indoor gowns and for country wear, with just touches of the same brilliancy to be found in costumes of the street. Some of the French designers are sending us afternoon gowns with cape-like wraps to match. They are charming and attractive and it is quite probable the wrap idea will take something of a definite hold.

There is a great deal of the coral pink and Flammont-Rose shade used and a wonderful kind of vivid green which might be known as Russian green. A country costume is of soft jersey silk in shades of dark blue combined with red and green. It is plaited to bring the blue on top and the coat is of green. Green and pink are conspicuous in costumes, too, and in fact, they give evidence of being favorite colors. For evening designers are sending them over in lavish use, and on this side of the sea the designers surely have been in touch, for the same colors appear in our own models.

We are to wear a great many separate blouses this season, for the so-called sports skirts are so lovely that they make a constant temptation. New ones are novel and interesting. These blouses consist of under garments which are really plain little blouses terminating at the waist line and with three-quarter sleeves buttoned down the front, finished with rolled over round collars and cuffs. The blouse proper is of colored linen, sleeveless, and with deep openings under the arms, which are edged with folds of the material. The blouse itself extends well below the waist line.

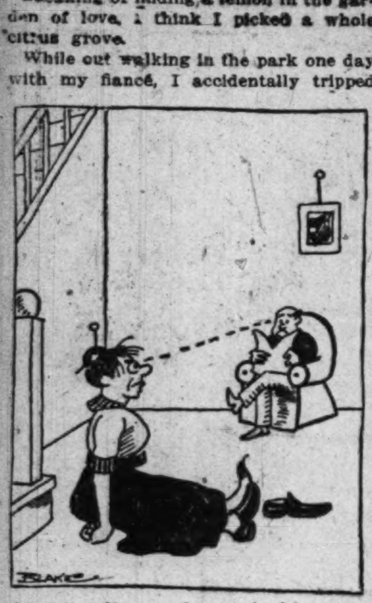
Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

Speaking of Lemons.

Speaking of finding a lemon in the garden of love, I think I picked a whole citrus grove.

While out walking in the park one day with my fiancé, I accidentally tripped and fell. He caught me in his arms, saying: "Did my little darling hurt herself?"



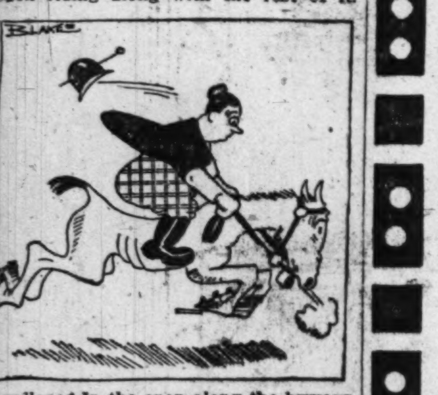
But as I was coming downstairs after our marriage I tripped on the top step and fell all the way down. My one time affectionate suitor merely looked up from his paper and growled: "Look out there, woman, or you will break your neck." C. L.

Weight Reducing Contest.

Did you try my method for reducing as outlined for Mrs. Eva Lane, who lost thirty-six pounds in six weeks? How much did you lose? Did you stick to it or not? I want to hear your experience, whether you were successful or not in reducing. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your chance for earning the dollar will be as good if you slumped on the reducing job as if you stuck until you got rid of pounds of flesh. Your name will not be printed. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "The Chicago Tribune."

Same Old Weight.

I was altogether too fat and started out to follow Mrs. Lane's method of reducing. I was so anxious to be rid of my bulk I thought I would try horseback riding along with the rest of it. I galloped in the open along the byways of my native village just as I had done for pleasure when I was young and slender. But it was so exhilarating and gave me such an appetite I couldn't keep to the prescribed diet. I was so hungry I just had to eat.



Soon I noticed the horse was beginning to show his ribs, and I awoke to the fact that it was the horse that had lost flesh while I had gained. After that I walked.

We—the horse and I—are back to where we started—the same old weight. M. E.

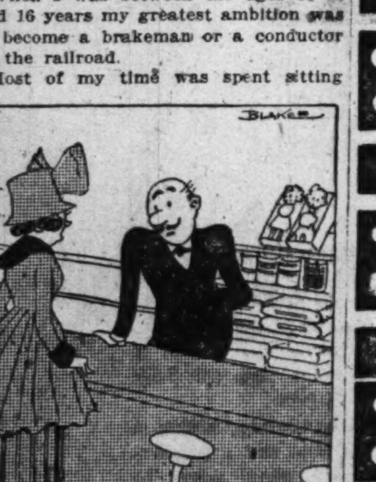
Childhood Ambition Contest.

Did you ever have a childhood ambition—a humorous one? Of course you did. And what you did wasn't anything like what you dreamed. Tell us what your great ambition was—and then tell us how far short you fell. Do it in 250 words, on one side of the paper, and address manuscripts to Childhood Ambition Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune. For each story printed $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned.

Quit in Disgust.

When I was between the ages of 12 and 16 years my greatest ambition was to become a brakeman or a conductor on the railroad.

Most of my time was spent sitting beside the tracks, watching them go by on their high perches, apparently happy as they rode by. My ambition got the best of me and when I was at the age of 18 years I started in as an oiler, and at last I became a brakeman. I worked for about a year and a half and quit in disgust.



Now I am a clerk in a dry goods store and not working as a brakeman, a job into which my ambition had led me. E. A. B.

To Make Hairs Vanish From Face, Neck or Arms

Keep a little powdered delatone handy and when hairy growths appear make a paste with some of the powder and a little water, then spread over hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be entirely free from hair or blemish. This simple treatment is unfailing, but care should be exercised to be sure and get genuine delatone, otherwise you may be disappointed.—Advertisement.

WHAT DRINK HAS COST ME

By Antoinette Donnelly

With the money I paid Maud X. and Hattie Smiley (another drink victim whose story will appear in next Sunday's "Tribune") they settled the balance of their fines at the house of correction and had enough left to keep them in comfort until they could secure work of some kind. They got outside the bridewell, hailed a taxi, and, as Maud told me the next day, they "rode downtown and helped drink up a couple of saloons," with the result that next day Maud was without a cent, and when I asked her what became of Hattie she said: "I don't know; I guess she's riding yet." I asked her why they didn't take the car downtown. She said: "Well, we were shut in there for sixteen weeks and we thought we owed ourselves a joy ride."

"My health is gone. I can't eat. All I crave is drink and more drink. My friends are through with me, and I don't blame them. My relatives are ashamed of me — desperately ashamed of me—and I deserve it. I've dragged their name in the mire. When my mother died they wouldn't even let me know. And my son—they've taken him away from me. I love him. My heart is broken. What I've suffered through drink God alone knows."

So spoke Maud X., one time high priced singer, and that but a decade ago—now a penniless outcast, with all semblance of her former beauty submerged in the ruins of a drink devastated body. And only 42! An age which poets have declaimed women to be at their zenith of perfection! An age when many grand opera singers are in their prime! Only 42 and nothing ahead but abject misery and grewsome hours of remorse which come to her when the ways and means of securing drink is exhausted, or when misdeeds born of the demon rum throw her back into the arms of the law and the garb of its offenders.

"I hate this dress," protested Maud X, referring to the blue and white striped dress of the inmates of the house of correction in which I first saw her. "I wish you could have seen me," spoke the eternal feminine in her, "when I had good clothes. I used to think nothing of paying $100 for a simple frock. And look at me now." And I looked at no small part of the tragedy of drink—a woman robbed of her right to becoming dress, of her ambition to make the best of the clothes she has, of a reason for dressing her hair attractively, of everything fine and womanly.

"I was created for better things," she cried out despairingly. "I had a scholarship in the X—— Musical college (one of the best in the west). I sang at the best clubs in the city and got $100 a song sometimes. But here I am ready to die at an age when other women are doing their greatest work. I pray that I may live to redeem myself and pay a few debts I owe. I mean debts of gratitude to those who helped me when I had not gone so far as I am now.

"But then, what can I do? Whisky has taken my music away from me. It has robbed me of every talent and every ambition. My music and needlework were the things I could do better than anything else. I wish you could see the beautiful fancy work I used to be able to do. That was my hobby when I wasn't singing and playing. But now my nerves and my fingers are too unsteady to earn a nickel at either. And who would want a broken down old ruin like me to play and sing to them?" she added pitifully.

With her blotched and pimpled skin, her hollowed cheeks, neglected hair, and missing teeth, one could imagine her services going begging. Her only chance now to play and sing and be listened to ecstatically is at the bridewell, where they told me the glad hand is always given Maud X., by the other women offenders because "now they'd have some good music." And Maud is a "repeater" there, which to the uninitiated must be explained as one who is sent down frequently.

"You should heah her sing and play," enthused the colored woman who was doing thirty days. "Ah jus' shet mah eyes and believe I'm in heaven."

"Aw, no, mammy, my voice is all cracked. And you know it. You can't drink booze as long as I've been drinking it without losing everything good you've got," retorted the pathetic down and out.

"How did I start drinking?" repeated Maud after me. "Well, I suppose I could tell you a long sob story about some one having ruined my life and starting me on my downward slide. Or I could tell you about the temptations of the stage which no girl can but succumb to sooner or later. But that would be playing to the gallery. And what's the use? I'm here because I brought myself here. Some of the finest women I have known have been stage women, and to say the stage is responsible for everything is all wrong.

"I didn't have to drink. I didn't have to go out after the shows. I had a voice so good that I didn't need any kind of drag. But I thought it was smart.

"I was always popular," continued Maud X., which fact I could readily believe, for even yet she shows a sense of humor and a brilliancy of mind at intervals that is amazing and makes the havoc wrought by drink that much more ghastly. "I used to find myself the center of more attraction when the drink would fire my mind and losen my tongue. I just lost my head. And I kept on losing it month after month.

"And then for a time I cut it out. I married and had a son. But the thing that I had never lost an opportunity to get got me. And I felt the thirst coming back upon me.

"It's the old story—new only to the one who knows the grief of it—of a sure, slow, and steady decline of self-respect and decency, until here I am just as you see me, without money, home, friends, husband, son, anything and everything."

I saw Maud X. later than that day at the bridewell. It was the day after her release. I got a telephone call from her begging me to come to her if there was any Christian charity in my soul. The directions she gave me led to a hotel and a neighborhood that I was afraid to enter in broad daylight. Up menacing stairway after stairway and back endless windings of a hallway I reached a room so utterly disgusting that I hesitated at the door. Upon the bed lay the poor derelict dressed in her street coat and her underwear. And the room reeked of stale beer which the colored slattern of a maid had brought to her to soothe her into quietude so that other 25 cent night lodgers might sleep a wink or two.

Maud X., Once High Priced Singer, Whom Drink Has Made a Wreck and Outcast at 42.

"Give me that snuff," she yelled wildly at me as I went in. "It's over there on the window. I'm too sick and too weak to get up and get it. I haven't eaten for three days. My stomach is all gone. I can't eat. If anybody asks you what drink has cost me tell them the truth. If my story will save one poor foolish girl print it in red ink."

Of all the sights unbeautiful I shall ever be forced to witness I pray that I may be spared another such as this poor driveling, disgusting, pitiful wreck of womanhood in a setting that was consistent with her outlook on life.

"I sent for you," she said, "because I want you to get me out of this place, get me away somewhere in a hospital where I can get straightened out, for I have to make good before I die. Every time I come out I try to make good, but they won't give me time. Nobody believes in me. If one soul would put her hand in mine and say 'Maud, you'll make good,' I could do it," she said vehemently.

I did it to the best of my convictions. But they took her back again the next day, for the money I left her went exactly the way of everything she's laid her hands on of recent years.

And she used to be billed as the BEAUTIFUL Miss X.

Answers to Inquiries.

MARGARET: An excellent exercise for reducing the abdomen is to assume a sitting posture with soles of feet together. Stretch your head back as far as you can. Then go forward as far as you can, bringing your hands around to clasp ankles as you start forward. Then see how nearly you can touch your toes with your head. This is difficult. Don't strain—begin with three times and gradually increase. This is one of the exercises I used in my work of reducing Mrs. Eva Lane thirty-six pounds in six weeks. The treatment included exercises for reducing the back, waist, hips, legs, etc. I shall be glad to send you the article if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

* *

LUCY: Your system is probably run down and your circulation poor if you are subject to chills. When the blood forsakes the skin it clogs the heart and the internal organs, and lays the train for diseases such as neuralgia, chills, and congestion. Shake your hands up and down as if your life depended upon getting something off the ends of your finger tips. You can do this shaking exercise with arms extended in front of you, or at the sides, or above your head, or better still, all three. After doing this for at least five minutes, if you are still chilly, take these same exercises, only shake your hands in a circular motion in and then out in circles with arms extended.

* *

ELOISE: You must use as much taste in the wearing of rings as you do in gowns. If you have short fingers and plump hands the fewer rings you wear the better your hands will look. Always consider both hands together and remember that a contrast is desirable. The prettiest effect will be obtained by keeping one hand considerably more bare than the other, particularly if you have one fine ring which can be worn alone on one hand and the other saved for those of lesser beauty.

* *

TILLIE C.: You, like many others, neglected to send me a stamped, addressed envelope. If you will do this I shall be glad to send you my instructions on how I reduced Mrs. Eva Lane 36 pounds in six weeks. I can only mail formulas when a stamped, addressed envelope is sent to me.

* *

EVA: The side body bending exercise is excellent for reducing the waist. Stand erect with your knees stiffened and arms raised high over head. By bending the body at the waist only try to touch tips of your fingers to your floor on the opposite side to the hand you use. Alternate with the other hand. Begin with five times and increase to fifty or seventy-five. This is one of the exercises I gave Mrs. Eva Lane in my work of reducing her 36 pounds in six weeks. I shall be glad to send you full instructions of my mode of reducing if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

* *

J. G. S.: Most persons worry needlessly about their hair falling out. There is a normal shedding of hair. According to one eminent medical authority, the life of a hair ranges from two to six years, after which it falls out to be replaced by a new one. In this way, he claims, about fifty or sixty hairs are normally shed every day. Another authority claims the normal life of a hair to vary from several months to two to four years. It is generally agreed on, however, that hair falling varies with seasons and varying health conditions. I shall be glad to send you my treatment for oily hair if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—Advertisement.

Paul, with his mother, was visiting his grandparents. One day other guests came and Paul was told that he must be a good boy. When the guests were ready to go, Paul, who had been trying hard all day, said to his mother: "Mamma, have I been a good boy?"

"Yes," said his mother, "you have been a very good boy. I'll write and tell papa. I know it will please him."

"O," said he with a sigh, "I'm so tired being on my manners."

My wife and I, with our little girl, were on our way to a theater one evening and being a little late were in quite a hurry when we met a woman friend who was "some" gossip. I mentioned the fact that we were a little late for the show, but it had no effect and it was all of five minutes before we were finally on our way with an indignant little daughter, who remarked, "That woman would stop you to talk if your hat was blowing away." Jack was among a number of school children who were to sing at the opening of memorial exercises, and, having done so, were requested to again sing at the close of the address. It made rather a long siege for the little fellows, who did not fully appreciate the words of the speaker, and upon arriving home his mother said:

"Did you not get awfully tired waiting for the speaker to get through talking?"

"I should say I did," said Jack, "and I guess everybody else did, too; you should have heard them clap their hands when he sat down." W. P. R.

Mildred was fond of playing with her dolls and always called herself "little mother." One day when her mother wished to put her in her little crib for her nap Mildred objected, saying she wanted to be in the bed. When her mother refused, Mildred started crying.

"Elder dey don't lie in cribs," was Mildred's quick reply. M. E. M.

There seemed to be an epidemic of the pink eye. Craig contracted the disease and was absent from school. Upon his return the teacher asked him for his excuse, and he responded that he had the yellow eye. She gazed at him with a smile and said she never had heard of such a disease. That night Craig went home with feelings badly hurt and told his mother. She laughingly told him it was the pink eye, not the yellow eye. "Well," said Craig, "I knew it was some color." M. C. B.

Her Old "Pal."

I was an awful flirt.

For lack of other amusement, I flirted with a rather elderly man and, strange to say, we became fast friends. As our acquaintance ripened he made me somewhat of a confidante—told me his domestic troubles, his financial difficulties and successes. The only thing he withheld was his real name, and try as I would I never could inveigle him into admitting it.

After we had lunched and suppered together and had been "pals" for months, he began to grow sentimental and told me that he was going away for a while to try and forget me. So he left town.

Then I met the real man—the man with whom I could look forward to a happy future, and for the first time I fell desperately in love. Shortly our dreams materialized—we eloped.

Then, since my parents refused to see me after the elopement, we went to his. His mother welcomed us with open arms and I loved her at once. My husband rushed me upstairs to meet "the pater," as he fondly called his father.

And pop-in-law was my one time "pal." I. N.

"The Eye of the Tempter."

I was usher and sexton in a certain church. It was a cold winter morning and I had to put more coal in the furnace to heat the church. I had to go down a trap door in front of the pulpit. The preacher came out while I was down there and started his sermon. He was just saying, "Look down into that seething, burning pit and see the tempter," when I opened the trap door and came up. Every eye in the church was on me. I turned red and wanted to run. T. W.

His wife looked over and, seeing him with his feet stretched out, said, so loud that everybody around us just laughed out loud, "Russell, if your feet hurt you why don't you take off your shoes?" A Party Spoiled.

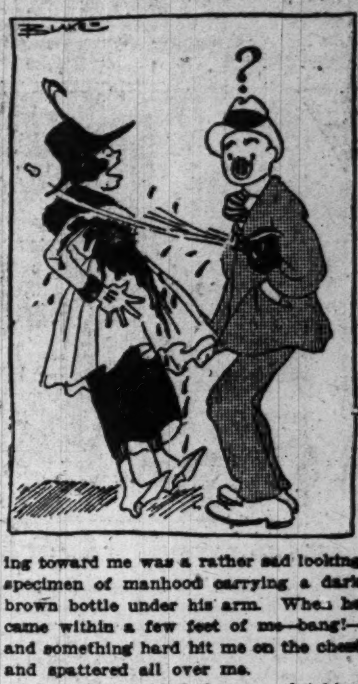
Most jauntily I walked down the street attired in a fresh white linen suit on my way to a luncheon and bridge. Coming toward me was a rather sad looking specimen of manhood carrying a dark brown bottle under his arm. When he came within a few feet of me—bang!—and something hard hit me on the chest and spattered all over me.



I looked up to find the man clutching the bottle with both hands, a most horrified expression on his face. His lips moved, but he couldn't speak. I looked down at my suit. It was covered with brown, sticky malt. I could have wept!

Finally the man explained that he had had the druggist remove the cork for him, as he had no corkscrew at home. It was a hot day and the malt brew fermented and blew out the cork at the crucial moment.

I didn't go to the luncheon. I couldn't. M. K. C.

Whose Business Was It?

My girl friend and myself were coming home from lunch. It was a stormy day and I turned to my friend and said, "Do you wear heavy underwear in winter?" To my embarrassment a rather fresh man answered, "What do you want to know for?" I hadn't seen that my friend had been carried away in the crowd. Miss M. T. N.

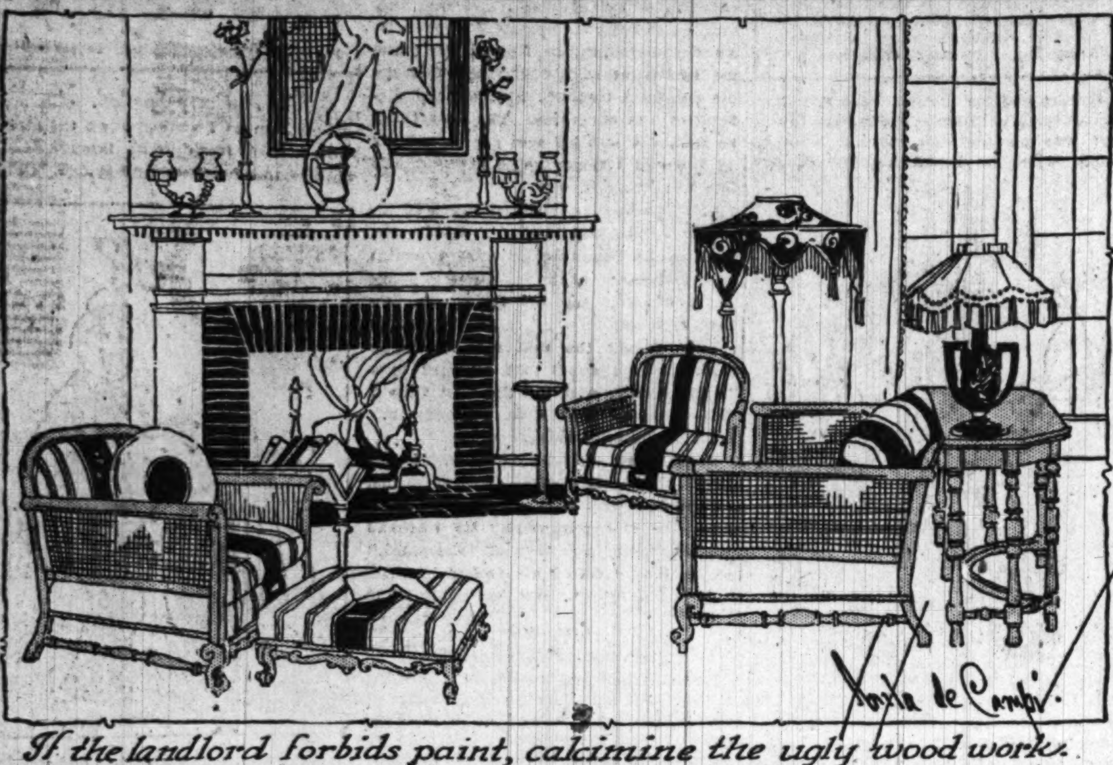
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By Anita de Campi



If the landlord forbids paint, calcimine the ugly wood work.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

CIRCUMVENTING the landlord seems to be a favorite and in many instances a highly commendable diversion of young leaseholders. This circumvention has become necessary because so frequently the landlord's willingness to improve his property has not kept pace with the rapidly improving taste of the renters. An amusing struggle between the two is usually the result.

Of course "perfectly adorable" (this is the favorite phrase) apartments are to be had if one can afford to pay the price, but such freedom is not universal. The best that many of us can do is to select a flat in an old building. We see to it that we have good hygienic light and air and proper surrounding and convenient transportation, and then we determine to take a hand in the redecoration that is always promised.

Alas, how often that promise of the agent to redecorate is a delusion and a snare. The young tenant's ideas have been kept up to date by the conscientious work of talented writers on the subjects that newspapers and magazines have placed at their disposal and are totally at variance with the deficient ideas on the subject possessed by the landlord, who assures you that he never reads the women's section. It is hopelessly palpable that he is not, and has not been, and doesn't care to be in touch with what might be called current interior decoration.

The woodwork of an old flat is the most distressing of all obstacles, particularly the "natural" wood, which the landlord vigorously refuses to have "spoiled" with paint. He knows its real worth in spite of "faddists who come in here with new ideas" and want to run his property because of a caprice. If space allowed I could print several hundreds of letters of protest on this score that have come from readers.

Suppose you have bought a fine little French bedroom set in ivory enamel. You have taffeta spreads and draperies and beautiful neutral rugs in delicate tints. Just imagine your feelings at having to place that in a room with "grained" woodwork, or even natural mahogany or antique oak! It would spoil the whole effect. It would be ugly and as shocking as though an exquisite Watteau type of woman suddenly addressed you in a deep male voice.

But rejoice, for the problem has been solved. Not to keep you in suspense a moment longer, the old detested woodwork can be calcimined! The old finish is not jeopardized in the least, because when you are ready to move you need only have the calcimine washed off and there is the woodwork again, restored to its prestine ugliness—as natural as nature. The funny part of it is that when the landlord sees the effect of the light tint throughout and is convinced that this is an improvement, he is less loath to have the woodwork actually painted the next redecorating time.

Calcimined woodwork has, of course, its disadvantages. While in appearance it is identical with good flat tone paint, it cannot be washed, but for that matter neither may calcimined walls. It is inexpensive, though, and it might be done over once in awhile. The most commonly railed against old flat fixtures are the mantel tops and the glass center domes in the dining rooms. These may be detached and relegated to the storerooms until the week before your lease expires, when they must be resurrected and replaced to daunt new tenants.

A pretty silk shade that can be made at home may be substituted for the glass dome, but it is not always so easy to dispose of the mantel. If the apartment has been freshly decorated the unsightly mantel top, when removed, leaves a still more unsightly wall space that may be difficult to finish off. One plan would be to cover it with chintz cretonne or brocade to match the draperies that will be used in the room, and then to frame it in, as it were, by tacking over its edges a tiny molding of painted wood. This wood must match the rest of the woodwork in the room.

Any local carpenter can divide your walls off into panels by means of wood moldings, and walls trimmed with such moldings may be either painted or papered. When paper is used, it is best to apply the moldings after the paper is hung. If buff and cream or white and gray effect is desired, the molding is laid first, then the lighter calcimine or paint is applied to the panels and moldings, and a darker tint used to fill in the borders outside of the panels.

The woodwork is calcimined or painted white or a delicate ivory.

It must be unequivocably granted that a sense of space is attained in small apartments by having the wall covering and paint alike throughout. A light neutral tone gives a sense of delicate cleanliness as well.

The question comes up frequently as to whether it is in good taste to use white curtains. If white enters in the whole decorative scheme in the apartment, without a doubt white is correct in the curtaining as well. If, however, white is barred in other accessories of the rooms, substitute for it whatever other color may be prevalent in the scheme employed.

The flatter the side wall tints the greater the decorative possibilities in draperies and upholstery. Whole sets of furniture are now being upholstered to order to match the window hangings. In some rooms the effect is delightfully consistent. Much depends upon the choice of fabrics. There is a sense of the whole thing having been frightfully overdone if the fabric is too ornamental. A safe design is an inconspicuous little floral stripe on a solid light colored ground.

Some lovely old chintz patterns have been reproduced this season in taffetas, and these make the most ravishing draperies.

It is always an agreeable surprise to find that what looks like an extravagance proves to be practical. Such is the case in regard to a boudoir I have recently seen in parchment and rose color. The walls were in neutral tint, while the inside curtains, chair cushions, and funny little chair valances were of rose corduroy. The practical point is that the corduroy washes well and wears forever.

In the accompanying illustration the walls and draperies are of grayed robin's egg blue and the woodwork calcimined sand color. The rug is in a shade of taupe known as nutria. The French walnut furniture is upholstered in sand color and robin's egg blue, and the lamp shade is in amber and drake blue.

An important accent is in the color of the tiny silk candle shades on the mantel. These are done in clear orange color, and a copper plate and ewer on the shelf respond to this color in a deeper tone. Minute touches of red in the bookbindings also play their part in the general scheme.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. F. P. B.: I would use a pair of curtains at each window rather than one at each side window and a pair in the middle. No, I don't think forty-two inch net is too full for small windows. Plain hems are used as often as other trimming. With your inside curtains use lambrequins. These are adjusted to a little wooden frame and hung on to the top of the window frame. Roller shades of silk, scalloped at the lower edge, are sometimes used on French doors. They are trimmed with fringe and tassels and roll up, excepting when used for privacy. If you use these select a shade of red. The blue tiling would not be objectionable if you make all of the other colors in your room correspond with it. Figured hangings would be pretty in your living room.

* *

MRS. F. A. S.: For the boy's room, discriminate in your selection of furnishings as you would discriminate in your choice of clothing material. Clear-flax rugs are good. Homespun is an excellent curtain material. This also makes good bed covers. Boys don't care for pink or blue, but prefer darker, more neutral colors, with a touch of vivid tones. As to the furniture the straight line type is by all means the best.

* *

MISS MARIE S. M.: The mantles you have reference to, I believe, are made to order. Any of the big furniture manufacturers should be able to make a portable mantle for you according to your own ideas.

* *

MRS. M. J. F.: No, I don't believe you have too much rose in your room unless the shade you have chosen is of too bright a hue.

Real Love Stories

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

IT'S AN ILL WIND.

MARY, a young girl about 18 years old, lived in a small lumber town in northern Michigan. She taught school at the little village schoolhouse, but did not intend to spend her life as a schoolma'am, because she was engaged—engaged to the finest man in the world—big, handsome Peter, who was engineer on the little railroad owned by the lumber company, which connected with the big railroad.

Their engagement was a new affair, when, on the Fourth of July, Peter took her to a picnic. While they were walking around they met Stanislaws, Peter's best friend, and Peter proudly introduced Mary to him. Stanislaws was good looking and was much better off than Peter, but Mary was too much engrossed in her own love affair to notice that Stanislaws fell in love with her immediately, while his high sense of honor and fidelity to his friend prevented him from pressing his suit.

The date for the wedding was set for October and Mary and Peter were busy getting their home in readiness for the event.

About the end of August terrible forest fires broke out in that region. They raged for days before the people of Mary's little village realized the menace they held for them. At last calls were received for help from another town that was in imminent danger. Only the little railroad connected it with the world. Peter responded instantly. He made countless trips to and from the village, while the fire swept closer and the smoke thickened until it was almost a wall. Only a few more remained to be rescued and Peter made an adventurous trip in full realization of the dangers, was swallowed up by the flames and perished.

Mary's sorrow was exalted. Her lover—her man—had died a hero! She resolved she would give her life to her fellow creatures. After a few weeks she packed a few simple things, departed for a large city and entered a convent.

She no longer had any interest in the world. Her span of life must be lived on earth and she resolved to spend it in the most self-sacrificing manner possible. The length of time that she would have to spend until she became a nun irked her. She was all impatience to cast off every worldly bond. Slowly the time rolled by. Only one more week remained until she would take the final vows, when she received a telegram telling of the serious illness of both her father and mother. She was the only child and her presence worked like magic on the old people, for they soon recovered, but not until it was too late for Mary to go back and take the vows with the others. But by that time she didn't want to go back to the convent, for Stanislaws made good use of the time she was in the village and won her love and her consent to marry him.

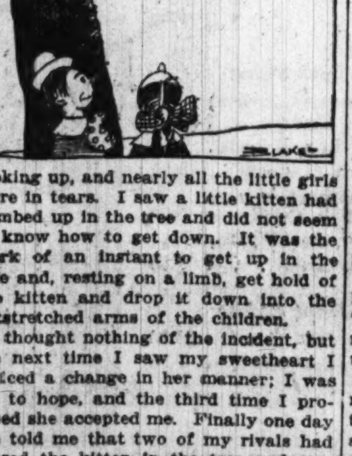
How I Won My Mate.

How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

He Had a Heart.

I was in love with the dearest girl in the world, but she had other suitors besides myself. She had refused me twice and I was just about ready to give up the game and try and forget.

One day on my way home I saw half a dozen children standing around a tree looking up, and nearly all the little girls were in tears. I saw a little kitten had climbed up in the tree and did not seem to know how to get down. It was the work of an instant to get up in the tree and, resting on a limb, get hold of the kitten and drop it down into the outstretched arms of the children.



I thought nothing of the incident, but the next time I saw my sweetheart I noticed a change in her manner; I was led to hope, and the third time I proposed she accepted me. Finally one day she told me that two of my rivals had passed the kitten in the tree and saw the distress of the children, but had not offered to help; but when I rescued the kitten it decided the question, which up to that time she had been unable to decide for herself.

Shade and Ornamental Trees Recommended for Chicago and Vicinity.

In preparing the following list, many trees were omitted which, though seen in parks and gardens, do not thrive well enough to entitle them to recommendation. "Average height" signifies the approximate height attained in the second zone, which is higher than will generally be attained in the first, and not equal to the possibilities in the third zone. A tree recommended for the second or third zone only may, under exceptional conditions, make a very presentable growth elsewhere. So, too, local conditions may render impossible to grow specimens recommended for the zone as a whole. See "The Tribune" of March 5 for the map of "Smoke Zones."

Marion Harland's Helping Hand

By Marion Harland

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

When an address or other information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to the newspaper office.

Flower Cuttings Offered.

"I have some cuttings of roses and also of Traveler's Delight I would send to any one who wishes them. If there are any Cornerites who have any crocheting thread or tatting thread they have no use for I would be glad to get it. I don't live close to town and I am not able to buy the thread I need. I would be glad to send anything in return. I am a great lover of fancy work, but have not the money to buy the thread to work with. MRS. L. H."

The cuttings of flowers and the vine will be welcome and I hope some one will be able to send the thread desired. The address may be secured on request.

* *

Reading Matter Wanted.

"I would like to have the magazines offered in the Corner, and so would be glad to have the address of the correspondent who has them. I have rheumatism, and thus have time to read a good deal. I would send the magazines, after I had read them, to people in the country who do not get town and are not able to buy reading matter. "G. R. H."

Another case of some one writing for articles offered without giving the initials signed to the offer. As usual, I am unable to trace the generous correspondent, and my only course is to print this request in the hope that some one possessed of magazines to give away may see this and write to me for the correspondent's address, with the desire of helping with reading matter.

* *

Wants Doll Pattern.

"I saw in your Corner that M. A. P. had a nice rag doll pattern. I have wanted such a pattern for a long time, as my little girl and also my baby boy are fond of dolls. If you still have the address of the correspondent offering the patterns I surely will be glad to receive it. MRS. C."

Unfortunately, the rag doll pattern, which was offered before Christmas, has been given away long ago. Has any one else such a pattern that she would be willing to send to this correspondent? I shall keep her address on the chance of some one writing for it.

* *

Music to Donate.

"Replying to your letter of several weeks ago, I sent the postal cards to Mrs. F. M., for which she was grateful. I also wrote to Miss L. telling what music I had, but have received no answer. The letter must have been received, for the return address was placed on it. The music is still in my possession. Is there any one else who would care for it? M. B."

This letter gives a fair idea of many others I receive. One of the correspondents to whom something was sent wrote and returned thanks; another took no notice of the offer of music, and the person making the offer is left with the music on her hands and a not unnatural idea of the ingratitude of some of those who make use of the Corner. She is benevolent enough to repeat her offer of the music, and I hope that the next person who tries to get in touch with her may be more courteous in replying to her letters. I will supply the address of M. B. to any one applying for it.

Little Girl Wants Skates.

"I am a little girl 8 years old and I am going to ask if some one has a pair of skates to give to me. I would gladly pay the postage on them. I have nothing to give in return but a few pieces of easy music that I'd be happy to give. All the little boys and girls in town except a few have skates, and they have so much fun with them! My parents are not able to buy any for me, as we have a very big family. R. H."

The child does not state if she wishes roller skates or ice skates. One can readily understand the trial it must be to an active child to see all her little friends disporting themselves on roller skates while she must trust to her own feet alone as a means of locomotion. I trust that some one who has not forgotten the keenness of childish desires may be able to supply this need.

* *

Music Books for Beginners.

"I want to offer some instruction books in music for beginners. I am indebted to the Corner for some delightful correspondents; all of those whom it has been my privilege to help have written me most appreciative letters. I wonder if any of the Cornerites have remnants of any kind of goods which would do to cover a small shirtwaist box. I would be so grateful for something of this kind. I would also like any flower seeds, especially nasturtiums; or vegetables would also be acceptable for a neighboring shut-in. You must be glad to bring sunshine into so many lonely hearts. MRS. S. R."

The sunshine is brought by the Cornerites themselves. I am merely the instrument through which they work. I am sure some one will be glad to get the music books offered, and I hope the material you wish to cover your shirtwaist box may be forthcoming, as well as the flower and vegetable seeds. I will be happy to send the address of the correspondent to any one who writes for it.

How to Order Your Clotilde Patterns.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

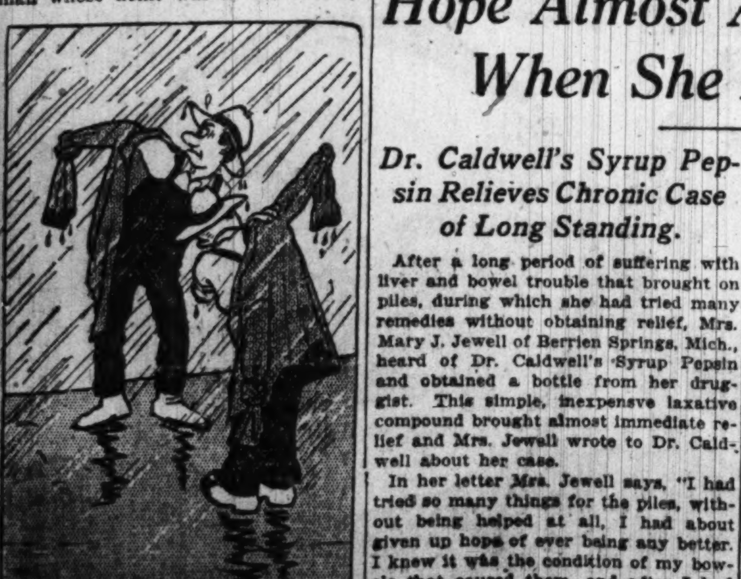
Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for "The Chicago Sunday Tribune" and may be obtained through no other service. A Chicago distribution office has been opened, and following this announcement orders will be filled on the day of receipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and will thereby hasten delivery. Patrons are requested to send stamps instead of dimes, as money is frequently lost in the mails.

Suitors' Mistakes Contest.

Did you make a mistake that cost you the one you wanted to win more than any other? Was it an unkind remark, a selfish deed, a mean or careless one, an error or tendency of your past come to light? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Mistake That Cost Me the One I Wanted Most to Win." Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

Out in the Rain.

Three years ago I met a nice young man whose home was in the country.



During his stay in town we became fast friends, and the following summer, when a schoolmate invited me to spend the summer with her, I gladly accepted. My friend of the previous winter lived only a few miles away and showed me marked attention all through my visit.

Just two days before returning to town we went to see the threshers, my friend being among those helping. In a spirit of fun the other girl and I tightly tied together the sleeves of the coats of her friend and mine. Soon after rain began to pour down and the boys returned from the field and were unable to put on their coats.

They were bitterly indignant and through our innocent little joke we girls both lost out. L. M.

Harriet Hammond, president of the Nemours Gun club of Wilmington, Del., is one of the best rifle shots in the United States.

Mrs. Stella M. Jellica, a co-ed at the University of California, is a musician, singer, housewife, teacher, and junior student.

Hope Almost Abandoned When She Found Remedy

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Relieves Chronic Case of Long Standing.

After a long period of suffering with liver and bowel trouble that brought on piles, during which she had tried many remedies without obtaining relief, Mrs. Mary J. Jewell of Berrien Springs, Mich., heard of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and obtained a bottle from her druggist. This simple, inexpensve laxative compound brought almost immediate relief and Mrs. Jewell wrote to Dr. Caldwell about her case.

In her letter Mrs. Jewell says, "I had tried so many things for the piles, without being helped at all, I had about given up hope of ever being any better. I knew it was the condition of my bowels that caused them, and after I had taken a bottle of your Syrup Pepsin I knew it was just the medicine I needed. I am very grateful to you for sending me the little book—the advice and instructions it gives would teach anyone how to get well and how to keep well."

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, free from opiate or narcotic drugs, and is mild and gentle in its action, bringing relief in an easy, natural way, without griping, or other pain or discomfort.

Mary J. Jewell

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for fifty cents a bottle. To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure you get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup of Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 455 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois, for whom this advertisement is published.

Corns Peel Right Off With "Gets-It"

2 Drops, and the Corn is a "Goner!"

When you've got to walk on the sides of your shoe to get away from those awful corn-pains, there's only one common-sense thing to do. Put 2 or 3 drops of "Gets-It" on the corn right away. Pain and inflammation will disappear, the corn will begin to shrivel from that instant—then it loosens and falls right off.

Use "Gets-It;" Your Corns Won't Swell in Water. Besides, They'll Shrivel, Loosen and Peel Off!

There's no other corn-remover in the world that acts like "Gets-It." No new discovery has been made in corn-removers since "Gets-It" was born. Don't forget that fact. "Gets-It" does away forever with the use of salves that irritate, bandages that make a bundle of your toe, plasters that half do the work, knives and scissors that draw blood. Use "Gets-It"—no more digging or cutting.

Intense Itching Of Large Blotches On Child's Head

Face and Limbs, Red and Fiery. Could not Sleep. In Two Months Cuticura Healed Sound and Well.

"My little daughter began breaking out on her head in small pimples or blisters which discharged a watery fluid. In a day or two these dried and formed a rough, scaly surface. This continued to break out about every two weeks, spreading out larger until her scalp, face, and limbs were covered with large blotches, red and fiery. The itching was so intense we had to keep her hands tied and she could not sleep or let any one else. It was a life of torture.

"We heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and began to use them. A wonderful change took place at once and in two months' time she was healed sound and well." (Signed) Mrs. Arch Lagle, Depauw, Ind., Oct. 4, 1916.

Why not prevent these distressing skin troubles by making Cuticura your everyday toilet and nursery soap aided by touches of Ointment now and then to remove the first signs of pimples, rashes and dandruff. Do not confound these delicate emollients with coarsely medicated soaps and ointments.

For Free Sample Each by Return Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. H, Boston." Sold everywhere.

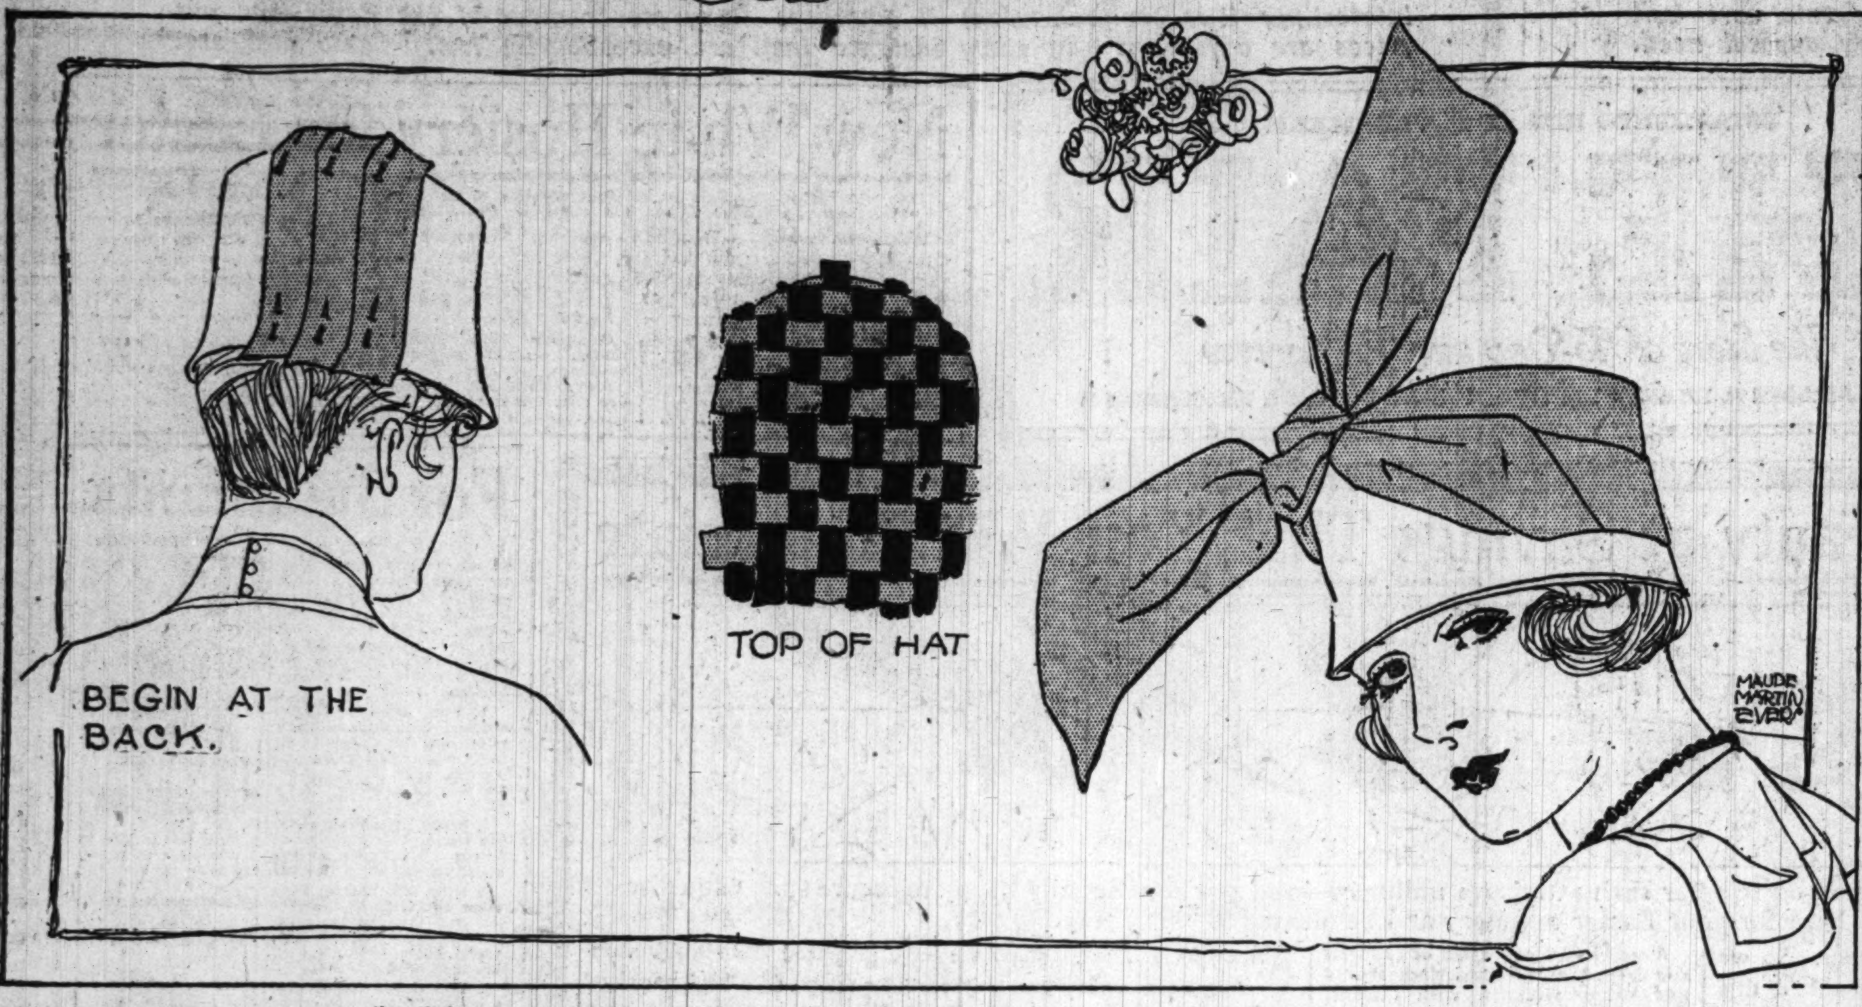
Practical and Fancy Needle Work



Now that every woman is supremely interested in the question of hats, this department is to be devoted entirely to millinery for the next few weeks. Various hats will be shown with adequate and detailed instructions as to how to make them and in what manner to trim them. Later on, the embroidery designs and needlework articles of various sorts for spring and summer use will appear again.

ONE of the season's most attractive novelties—the ribbon hat—with its various modifications is quite within the scop of the home milliner. This little turban is a pleasing change from the more common variety made from narrow ribbon.

For this hat you will need a small shape about five inches high with a lower edge which flares slightly into a tiny brim shading the forehead. For the covering five yards of two and one-half inch reversible or doub. faced ribbon in black and gold—a popular color scheme this season. Also two yards of this same ribbon in one and one-half inch width, one-half yard of ribbon wire three-fourths inch wide, and some milliners' glue.

In this particular turban the top of the side crown consists of a soft roll and the tip, which is a separate piece, sits down inside of this.

Before beginning to cover the frame the stitching which joins the tip to the side crown should be ripped and the tip taken out so that each part can be covered more easily.

First bind the lower edge of the turban with a two inch bias strip of old silk or satin or some soft cotton material. This is to soften the effect of the edge when the ribbon is turned over it. Do not sew the ends of this binding in a seam, but lap one over the other about one-half inch.

Cut from the two and one-half inch ribbon twelve strips nine inches long. The edge of the brim is twenty-seven inches. Beginning at the center back, lay a strip of ribbon over the bound edge of brim, allowing two inches to turn up for a facing on under brim. Draw ribbon smoothly up side crown and turn under two inches at top. Place ribbon with black finish outside on the side crown. Pin in place, taking care to use good pins and placing them in edge of ribbon so pinholes will not show. Lay next strip in place, lapping one-fourth inch at brim edge and as much as necessary the rest of its length in order to make it lie in a straight line up the side crown. Continue in this way until all the strips are pinned in place, slipping edge of last one under the first edge pinned down.

Now we are ready to sew the ribbon in place. The charm of this hat lies in the absence of that stiff, nailed-down look so characteristic of many of the home milliners' efforts. The secret of this effect is in catching the ribbon just often enough to hold it securely in place. Use black sewing silk and, beginning at the brim edge—before drawing lower ends of ribbon back against under brim—fasten each piece of ribbon where it overlaps the next piece through to the brim with two or three stitches directly in corded edge of ribbon. Make these stitches as inconspicuous as possible. Slip your needle along in the binding of the next lapping, and so on around the hat.

Fasten ribbon edges again in the same manner about one or one and one-fourth inches from edge, where the slight curve marks the joining of brim and side crown. Then fasten securely the ends turned over the rolled top of the side crown, sewing to the frame itself.

After this is secured draw the ribbons over the lower edge and across the under brim up into the head size. Lap these as necessary to make them lie smooth and fasten with long stitches, slipping the needle along so they do not show through on the right side.

The covering for the top is made by interlacing strips of narrow ribbon, alternating the colors to produce a checkerboard effectt. Pin in place strips of ribbon, black side up, lengthwise of crown, allowing about three-fourths inch at ends to extend for finish. Then interlace with strips—gold side up—over one, under one. This will give alternate squares of black and gold. These st[illegible] are fastened on the side edge of the tip, which is then slipped into the si[illegible] crown and [illegible]wed in place invisibly from the inside of the crown.

The trimming of this little hat is effective by reason of its simplicity and absolute harmony with the hat itself. Two yards of the two and one-half inch ribbon are used.

Cut off one nine inch piece to use in making knot and two other nine inch pieces to face back the ends of the one and one-fourth yard piece. The ends are prepared by spreading a coating of milliner's glue on the gold side nine inches from each end, laying a strip of flat ribbon wire down the middle of each and placing the nine inch pieces exactly on top with black side down, making edges match perfectly. When thoroughly dry twist ribbon around crown, bring ends to right side front, fasten by twisting remaining nine inch piece of ribbon around the ends, gold side out and attaching securely to side crown.

SPRING LAMB.

THE epicure looking for pleasure in what the French call "primeurs," or the first appearing of the special foods of the season, says of April that it "opens the eye of expectation." The honors of April today, if divided, allow a leading place to spring lamb as the primeur meat. Great numbers of people consider roast lamb an essential viand on the Easter dinner table, and happily forget its symbolism.

There may be more of a question about choosing it this year than usual, for the breaking of the Lenten fast, for even the butchers declare it high enough to be boycotted; that is, some butchers say that, while others hang in their windows a whole row of the uncut meat.

The economical and rather excellent cook can have lamb for a dinner without investing in an expensive cut, even though she think the crown of lamb handsome and the leg peculiarly serviceable. Of these cuts that can be cut without chopping into pieces, of course, the breast is the cheapest, but unless it is cut from number one meat it is a mere shell.

From a No. 1 lamb, breast meat may cost up to 16 cents a pound, but considering the prime quality of the meat this is not expensive, since for 40 cents it can be made to serve from four to six people daintily, with some left over for hash, and a liquor for broths if we choose boiling as the first part of the actual cooking preparation.

Number one shoulder may cost up to 25 cents a pound, but a two pound and a half piece, pot roasted, can be made to serve six people, if carefully carved, and I could make it go much farther than that.

Compare this with crown roast, really a company or large family viand. About the least price for a handsome crown roast of number one meat is $2.50. At one high grade meat store they charged, the other day, 15 cents a chop, and considered it necessary to use eighteen chops in making a crown. But with this they furnished a forcemeat filling, weighing about a pound and a half, and all the little paper frills or papillotes which some one has facetiously called the cuffs of the chops. The end of each chop bone would undoubtedly be protected with little dice of larding fat, which would in cooking improve the quality of the whole, because pork fat is one of the softest of the fats not liquid, while lamb fat is hard.

The old idea that the essence of good stew making was to use several kinds of meat was not so much because of what the different lean meats added, but because of what the different fats lent to the perfection of the whole. If we bear this fact in mind in cooking our cheaper cuts of lamb we may get results in no way inferior to the best, especially if the cheaper meat is cooked to perfection and the more expensive but indifferently cooked.

Unless a forcemeat is not made up for a crown roast a plate is commonly put in the center when it is roasted in order that it may keep its shape as a perfect crown. Many people prefer to finish a crown roast with a filling of vegetables, which may be mashed potato carefully rounded, or peas and carrots in a cream sauce, or cauliflower prepared in the same way.

By garnishing cheaper cuts, or even mounting them in some way, when ready to serve, and perhaps using a garnished hatelet (silver skewer) or two, if we have them, or can devise a substitute, these may rival the crown roast when they appear upon the table.

Pot Roasted Lamb Shoulder.

Trim, skin, and wipe or wash as you please a two pound and a half piece of lamb shoulder. Remove blade bone. When of this weight it will only have a bit of the shoulder joint, but if larger remove also the piece of leg bone. The butcher will do this, but it is more sensible to do it just before the meat is put to cook, and perhaps you may have a preference for using your own fingers in your meat. Use fingers as much as knife in removing bones, as in removing skin.

After the piece is boned fold the ends together and tie in a nice roll with a scalded string; that is, a highly sanitary white string. Try out about three tablespoons of diced salt larding pork in the "Dutch oven" or pot roasting kettle. Roll the meat in two tablespoons of lightly seasoned flour and rub it over with the hand to smooth it in lightly, then put it into the pot and sear it about six minutes on each end and then on the sides.

While this is being done prepare a bed of sliced vegetables, among which should be carrots, onions, and whatever else you choose. A good combination is two onions, one good sized old carrot, or two or three new ones, several stalks of celery, and the nice white leaves and a little chopped parsley if you have it. To this may be added a piece of ginger root, a green pepper, and two or three slices of lemon.

When the meat is well seared take it out on a plate and put the prepared vegetables in the kettle with two teaspoons of sugar. Stir them around for about five minutes, then put in the meat, and if you are a good cook add only a tablespoon of water with which you rinse off the plate on which the meat stood. If you are not a careful cook, or if you want a generous amount of gravy, add from half a cup to a cup of boiling water.

Some people insist on having so much fire under their kettle that they will even allow a cup to evaporate, so that even with this amount they will have no gravy. There is enough water in the vegetables, if it is all conserved, to make a fine gravy, and it will be good after short cooking.

Baste the meat every fifteen minutes or even every ten, and cook for one hour over just enough fire to keep the liquor boiling. Salt about fifteen minutes before it is done. Take up, remove string, stand so that it may be carved across the grain with a pretty garnish of potato and one or two other vegetables. When well cooked those from the gravy may be drained and used effectively. They may be served in the gravy separately or strained out of it before serving.

Mint Sauce.

Chop three tablespoons of mint, add to it a tablespoon of sugar, and pour over it a half cup of just boiled vinegar, diluted up to a half, if strong. Some people prefer white wine vinegar for this.

Lamb Broth.

Let the liquor in which the breast of lamb was boiled get cold, and then remove the fat. For each cup of this allow one tablespoon of rice and cook until the rice is tender. Freshly grated raw carrot improves the appearance and character of this.

Spanish Lamb Chops.

A great number of people would prefer to use either the breast or the shoulder with a dressing or stuffing. I have not much use for this rather indigestible mass, but here is a recipe of a cook who does:

Buy one pound of English chops. Soak one cup of bread in a little milk, cut one canned pimento in strings and use salt and pepper to taste and an egg to bind the whole. Divide this stuffing into as many parts as there are chops, roll a chop around each part, and fasten it with a toothpick. Almost cover with water or stock and bake from one-half to three-fourths of an hour. The liquor around when done should be like a nice gravy.

Breast of Lamb.

A breast of lamb may be skinned, trimmed, wiped, or washed, rolled around the leg, tied, and then pot roasted. Another way is to prepare it thus and then boil it for an hour and a half. Put in the water in which it is to be boiled two slices of pork cut in strings, a sliced onion, a carrot, a branch of celery, and other seasoning to taste. When done take up, remove bones, stretch out the breast, and press it for a half hour, then cut in pieces—preferably in fancy shapes, if these are to be served around a mound of spinach or something similar—dip these pieces in melted butter and then in fine cracker or bread crumbs, and fry them for about five minutes to a side either in butter or savory fat.

Sauce for Breast of Lamb.

These fried pieces of breast of lamb may be served with plain lemon juice or mint sauce or an Italian sauce made in the frying pan with them. For the latter beat up the yolks of three eggs and add to them the juice of a lemon, and then turn the fire off from under the meat and stir this in with the meat. The hot meat and the heat of the pan will cook the egg sufficiently.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH 'DANDERINE'

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—Advertisement.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Impetuous

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

If you're an April child, "by those in sign of Aries born, the precious diamond should be worn," says one authority. Aries, meaning the ram, it is only natural you should partake to some extent of the well known qualities of this animal, and with most of you 'tis true that once you enter a fight you'll stick to the finish of one or the other.

You are lively, energetic, full of life and activity, so it's natural for you to like dancing and music. Personality is your strong point, and you are so intensely individual that all those who come in contact with you are duly impressed. Right in line with these traits is the fact that you do not work well under others, for you must be left to your own devices if you are to be truly successful.

The meaning of your tribe is, "Lo, a troop cometh," which takes it for granted that you will be armed and prepared. Thus, if your impetuous and unconquerable energy should ever be directed towards real warfare, you would probably make a world famed name for yourself.

You're a born comforter, your intuition making you understand without words the troubles of others and showing you the way to help the sufferer. But your intuition is not applied to the faults of your friends, for you seem to see none in them, and no sacrifice is too great for you to make for those you love. You will make a good leader in society, for you do not like to follow along the too conventional lines.

As teachers, lecturers, and writers you will succeed, because you have a natural desire to spread information, and you can deliver your lessons in such a way that all like to listen. Your natural mechanical ability makes good artisans of you, but you will not make such a success in positions where patient drudgery and detail are required. Literature, trading, and commercial work would appeal to you and be well worked out by you.

One of your greatest faults, for you have them like all other mortals, is jealousy, which is seen in your desire to talk about yourself and your affairs at all times, with a tendency to exaggerate their importance. You see everything as a whole and hate to be bothered with details.

But once you fall in love (you are quite apt to be fickle until you do), all your faults disappear as if by magic. This softens your disposition and your fiery temper and your energy becomes unbounded. As your love nature is so intense, it behooves you to be careful in the selection of your life mate. To be rejected, hard as it may be for you, is far better than an uncongenial marriage.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

Your union with Sagittarius, Nov. 23-Dec. 22, provided your stations in life are about the same, will be a happy one. A union with one of your own sign would be a sympathetic one, unless you both tried to be "boss." Gemini, May 22-June 22, and Libra, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, will make good life companions for you.

The two most fortunate times in the year for you to begin new enterprises would be the two weeks beginning April 13 and Nov. 29. Your colors are blue, pink, and white, and your birthstone diamond. To this stone some add the amethyst.

Marking Linen.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am going to be married in a year or so, and would like to ask you a few questions. 1. Should a girl in moderate circumstances buy bed linen, table linen, and general household necessaries before she is married? 2. In marking linens, etc., should she put her present initials or that of her future husband? L. R."

Since time immemorial the prospective bride has furnished the household linen to whatever extent her means permitted. It would not be right for you to make any undue sacrifices in this matter, but just get what you can conveniently afford and mark it with your own initial or your own monogram.

Wants Horoscopes.

"Dear Miss Blake: I would like one of the horoscopes you tell about for myself, and if possible, one for every month in the year. What further information do you need? IGNORANT."

For one of those much desired horoscopes, it's necessary that you send me a stamped, addressed envelope and the date of your birthday. Sorry, but I can't possibly send more than three to a person.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

A STRUGGLE AGAINST ODDS.

At this time of the year, when her physical endurance is at lowest ebb after the long, stormy winter, and when she is so weary of her somber winter clothes that she grows careless of her appearance, the business girl is more than likely to allow herself to grow discontented and become easily discouraged if the affairs of the office, for any reason, fail to run smoothly. Success seems to her far out of reach and a slight mistake is exaggerated into an irretrievable blunder.

The business girl needs to shake off a depression of spirit, which, more than anything else, can doom her to failure.

The telling of Molly Lee's story of success and her optimistic struggle against odds that seemed at times too great to overcome seems especially apropos at this time, for it surely holds some measure of encouragement to other working girls, particularly to those who feel that they can never get any further toward success than the humble positions they now hold.

Eight years ago Molly was a stock clerk in a large department store. It was not a fancy position, as everybody in the store realized but Molly. She was too busy learning and committing to memory the details of her stock to be troubled about her lowly position.

After she had been in the position two years she was given her first opportunity. The head stock clerk had been back from his vacation about ten days when the manager of the store came into the stock room for some information. The head clerk, unable to answer, had to refer to Molly, who delivered the desired information without a moment's hesitation. The manager asked the head clerk how long he had been back from his vacation, and departed, saying he had had plenty of time to familiarize himself with the changes in stock. A week later the head clerk was changed to another department, and Molly appointed to fill his position.

With a proportionate increase in salary she took up her new position, which she held for another two years. At the end of that time she asked to be put on the selling force of the store. Her request was granted, but in changing her work Molly had to submit to a decrease in salary. She was willing to make the sacrifice because she realized that although she was giving up the highest position of the stock room for one of the humblest places on the sales force, she was entering a broader field, where her opportunities were practically unlimited.

The training received in the stock room was invaluable to Molly in her new work, and although the going was rough at times and the keen competition of her associates more than once tempted her to give up and go back to her old job, where she had been supreme, her determination to master the job kept her behind the counter.

It was not long before the buyer realized that Molly's ability to carry the details of the department work at her finger tips was a great boon to him. Much to the chagrin of his assistant, Molly helped the buyer make up his reports and on request made suggestions about clearing up old stock and the purchase of new. Her suggestions were on the whole sound and practicable and often used to good advantage by the buyer.

At this time, in spite of the buyer's friendly help, her work was made hard and her progress tedious by the jealousy and animosity of the assistant buyer, who did everything in her power to have Molly dismissed. After three years of struggle and bitterness the buyer's assistant suddenly married and left the employ of the firm. Molly, of course, was her logical successor. Molly and the buyer worked in harmony for a year. That year, with her superior's careful coaching and her own eagerness to learn, was the keystone of her career, and when at the end of that time the buyer was promoted to be assistant general manager of the store and he glowingly recommended Molly to fill his place in the department she was able to step into the position with assurance and more than justified the confidence the new assistant general manager had placed in her.

ETIQUETTE
by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

LOUD VOICE ANNOYS.

No one knows better than the average American the disagreeableness of listening to a loud "barnstorming" orator or lecturer. But how much magnified and more deplorable is this fault when introduced into the realms of the home or a private gathering! A loud or shrill voiced person makes life a trial for all within earshot.

Voice training by a professional instructor is one remedy for this evil. But each clamorous mortal can effect his or her own cure by realizing the defect and giving immediate and constant attention to counteracting it.

Avoid talking or laughing in public places so as to attract attention. It is one of the strongest evidences of bad form, bad taste, bad judgment. "A soft answer" has always been commendable, but a soft question, a soft assertion, a soft exclamation, together with the general air of moderation which always accompanies voice modulation, are the hall marks of good breeding.

* *

MISS H.: It is desirable to inclose at home cards with the marriage announcements for all those people to whom the bride wishes to be at home. One of the main purposes of these cards is to give the friends and acquaintances of the newly married couple the new address of the latter.

* *

M. G.: If the young woman has a preference as to what she wants for dinner or desires to curb her escort in the matter of expense, she can tell him what she wants, but, on the whole, it is better to leave the choice to him. It is not good form to rest elbows on the dining table, though many otherwise well bred people are guilty of this breach of etiquette.

* *

L. B.: When the hotel or restaurant serves dinner a la carte the first courses are usually ordered at the same time, the dessert being selected later. If the service be what is called table d'hote it is generally ordered course by course. For luncheon at a fashionable place oysters on the half shell, creamed sweetbreads, French fried potatoes, peas, rolls, head lettuce with Russian dressing, and an ice make a good repast. It is correct to drink from one's bouillon cup after sipping a few spoonfuls to make sure that the temperature and seasoning are satisfactory.

Lift Out Any Corn Please Try "Freezone"

Doesn't Hurt a Bit! Hard Corns, Soft Corns and Corns Between the Toes, Also Hardened Calluses, Just Shrivel and Peel Off With Fingers---Magic! Truly Magic!

Remarkable Discovery By Cincinnatian! A Few Drops Stop Corn Pain Instantly. Women Should Keep a Tiny Bottle on Dresser and Never Let Corns or Calluses Ache Twice—Millions Getting Rid of Corns

For a few cents you can obtain from any druggist a tiny bottle of the magical drug Freezone. This is the remarkable ether discovery made by a Cincinnati man which you have been reading so much about in the papers lately.

A few drops applied to a tender, aching corn or callus relieve the pain and soreness instantly; then you will see the corn or callus shrivel up and become so loose that it lifts out, root and all, with the fingers. It really does this! No humbug! No catch!

No pain or twinge of irritation is felt when applying Freezone or afterwards, and it does not inflame the surrounding skin or flesh.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes and hardened calluses loosen and lift off. It seems magical—It is magical! It works like a charm.

WOMEN! KEEP FREEZONE ON DRESSER! LISTEN!

When a corn starts aching, just touch on a drop of Freezone. It dries instantly. Put on your stockings and shoes and forget you ever had a corn. You will feel no pain or soreness. Walk, dance and wear tight shoes if you want to. Your corns won't hurt a bit. Try Freezone!

Genuine Freezone is sold by all druggists, in tiny bottle as here shown, each bottle packed in a sealed, round wood case—NO OTHER WAY.

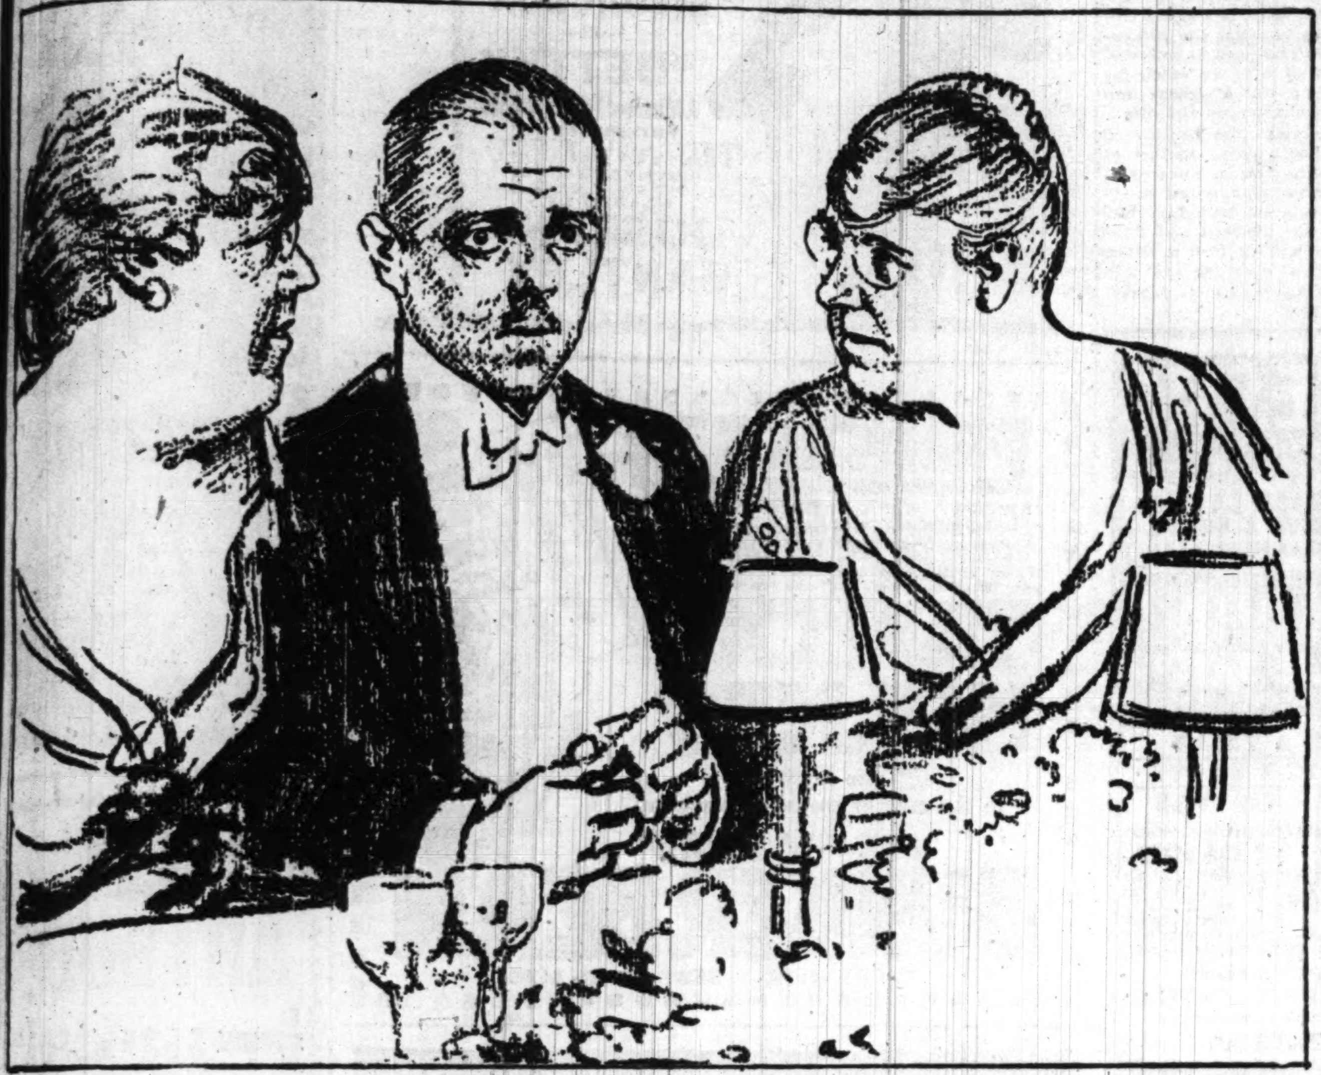
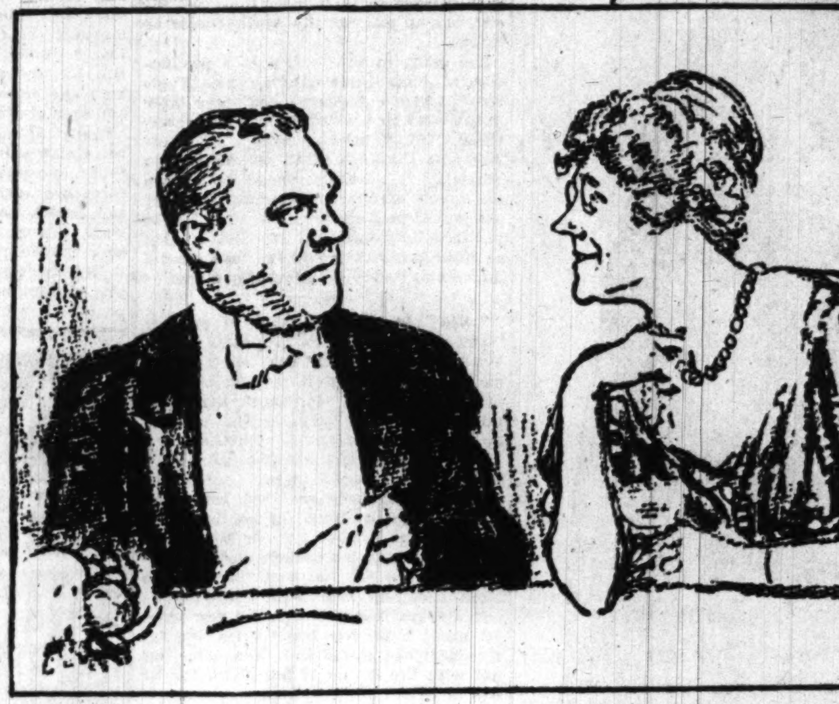
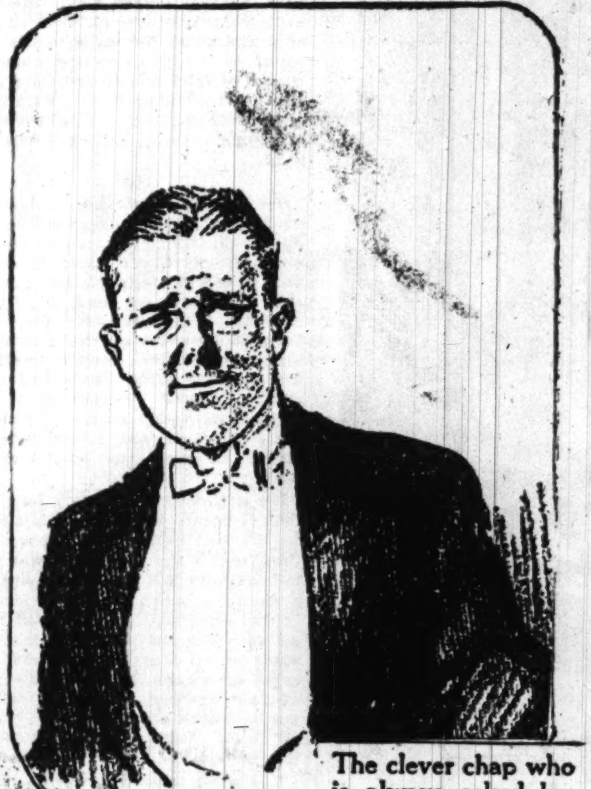
THE DINNER PARTY



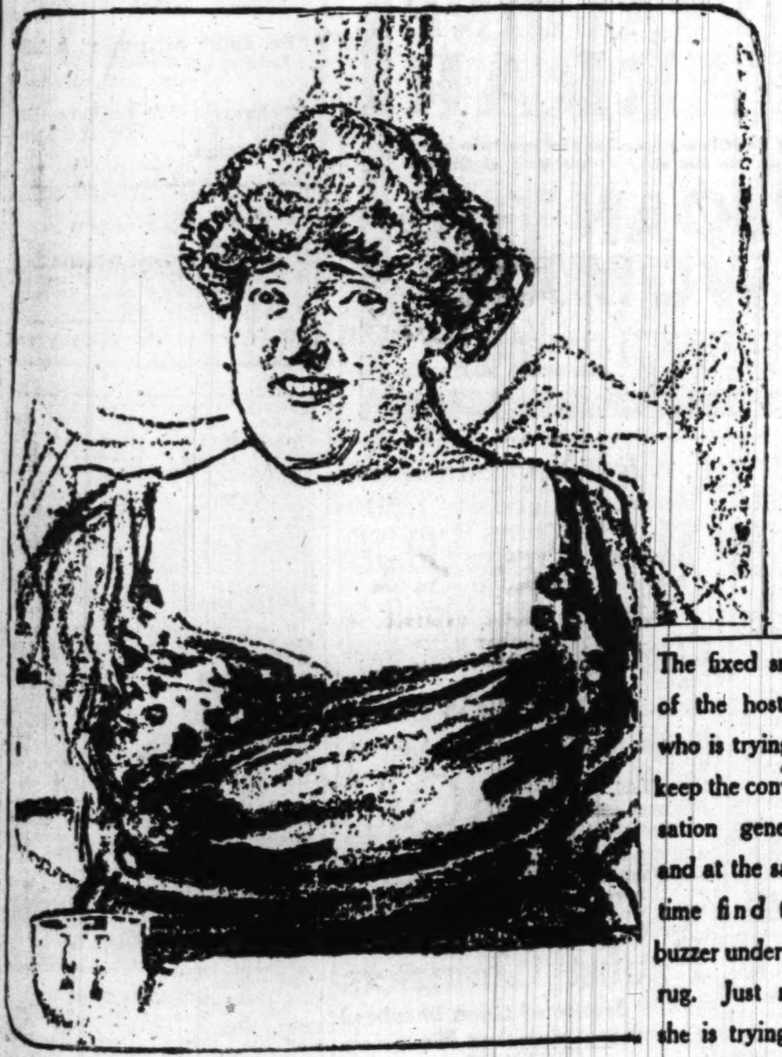
The lady who really thinks we all eat too much meat talks dieting with the lady who is sure we eat too many sweets. In the neutral zone is the unoffending young man who nervously crumbles his bread



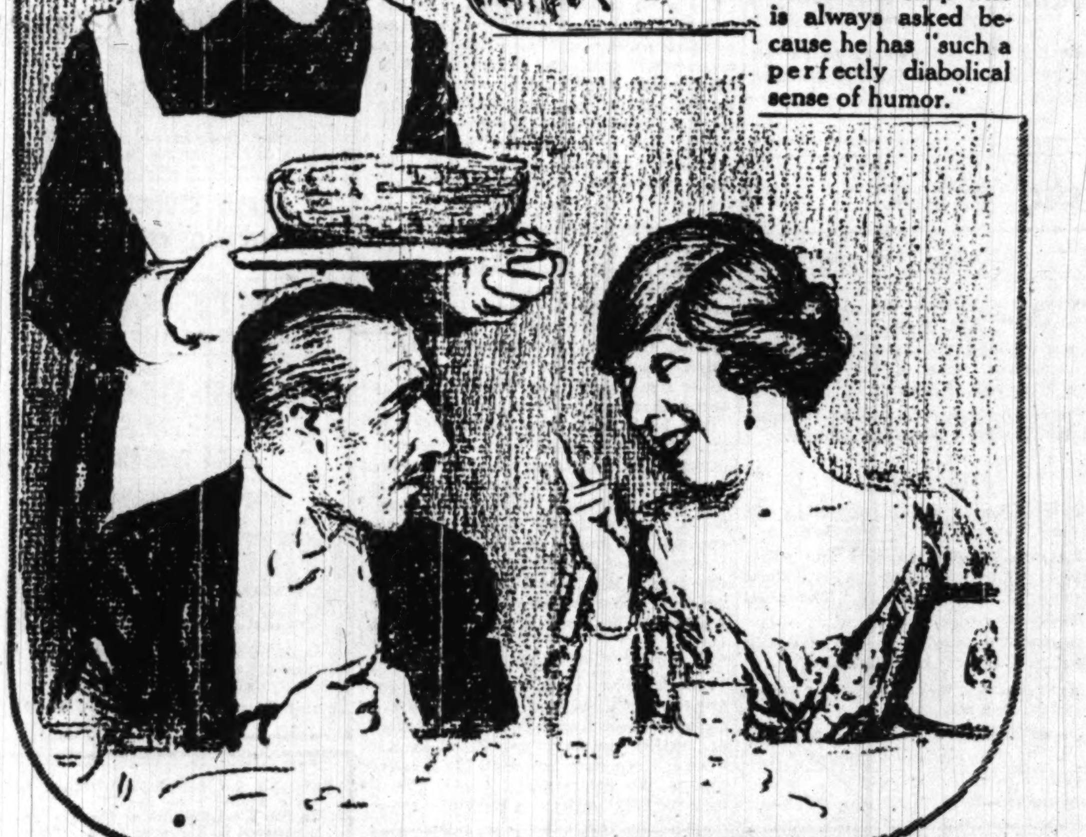
The lady who tries to lure the tired business man into a sex discussion



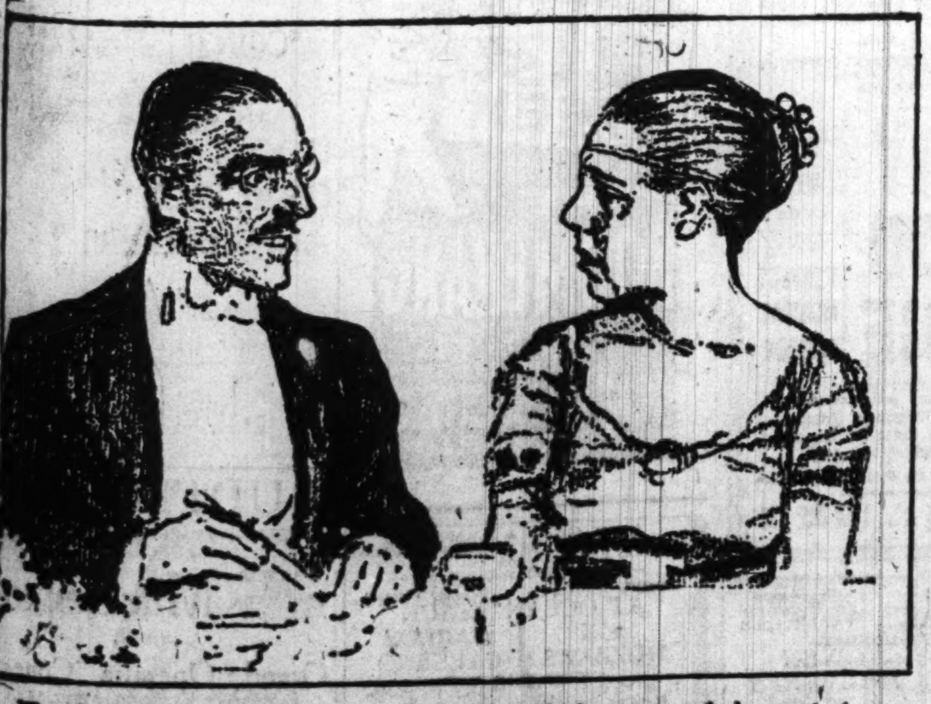
The clever chap who is always asked because he has "such a perfectly diabolical sense of humor."



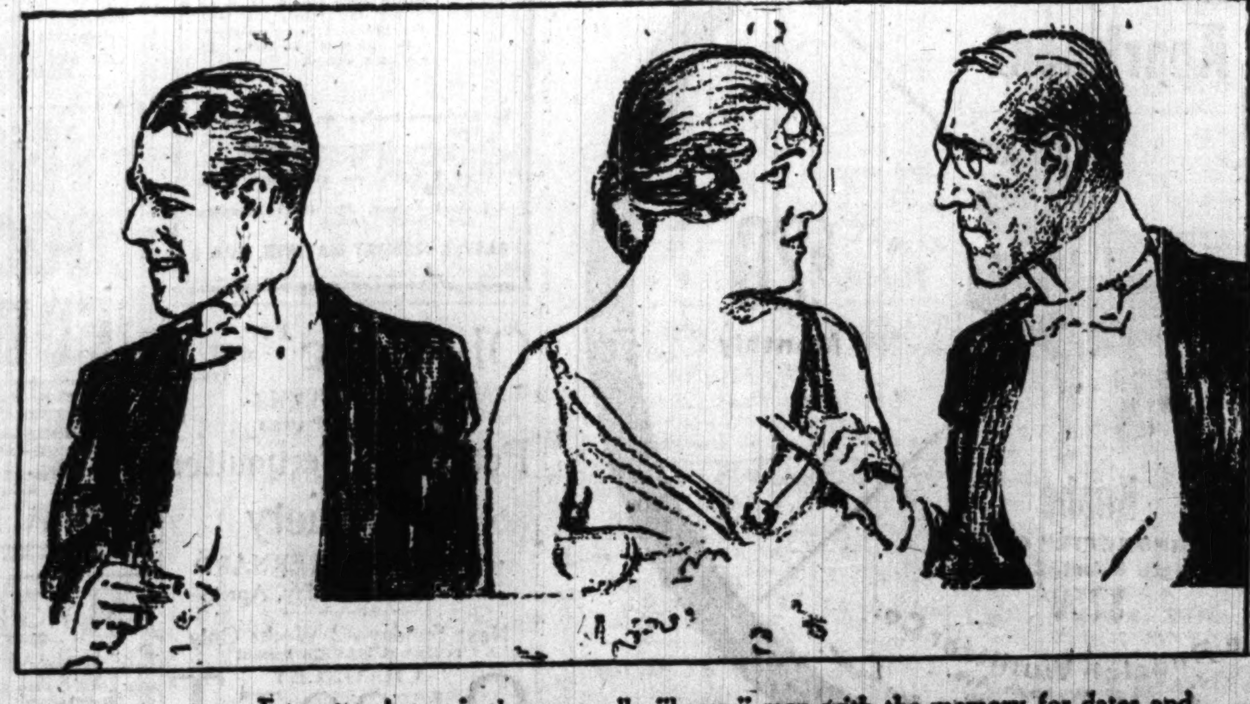
The fixed smile of the hostess, who is trying to keep the conversation general, and at the same time find the buzzer under the rug. Just now she is trying to dope out what the crash in the pantry could have been



The coy girl who always springs a trade-last on some totally unprepared person. In the background is Helga, hired for the evening, who enjoys the jokes and conversation hugely.



The debutante who has had just four hours' sleep out of the past forty-eight trying to concentrate while the amazingly technical young man explains just why his power boat engine is better than any other on the market.



Tete-a-tete between the unusually "heavy" man with the memory for dates and statistics and the girl who is anxious to get back to her exchange of intimate personalities with the other man. She is trying to catch just what he is saying to the girl on his right.

News and Views of the Theater

By Percy Hammond.

IN the performance of "Good Gracious Annabelle" characters in New York City at luncheon time have been seen reading the sporting editions of Chicago afternoon journals, much to the vexation of playgoers who stickle for probity of detail in the theater. Similar annoyance is induced by the actors in "The Lodger" when, the scene calling for an evening newspaper, a copy of the London Times is produced. The average audience resents little lapses of this sort more than it does greater ones in plausibility of construction and characterization.

Mr. Mansfield was a naive offender in this respect. In "Don Carlos" he lighted one of the great halls of the Escorial with Edison incandescents, and in "Ivan the Terrible" the barricades in the streets of Moscow were made of flour sacks bearing the inscription, legible to all parts of the theater, "Washburn-Crosby, Minneapolis." Mr. Lackaye tells of Hall Caine's contempt for him when he failed to follow the author's instruction which called for the "soft humming of bees" in one of the scenes of "The Bondman." In the days of Mr. W. A. Brady's Shakespearean enthusiasms he contemplated a production of "Titus Andronicus," but grew cold when, on reading the play, he discovered this stage direction of the author: "Enter Lavinia, ravished, her tongue cut out and her arms cut off." Mr. Brady's reverence for an inviolate Shakespeare was, at times, idolatrous.

Winchell Smith insists that the money stolen by his friend Muggsy from the skinflint's safe in "Turn to the Right" must be real money, and so it is—six perfectly good twenties and a five. He thinks that if he could have real peach jam cooking on a real stove, with the accompanying aroma, the play would run forever. You may have noticed in this drama Miss Helen Collier unobtrusively watching the clock as she times the brewing of the magic preserves. That example of minor integrity, whether intentional or not, is almost as effective as the faithful way in which she repeats, "Pleased to meet you, I'm sure," observing the niceties of rural etiquette.

Mr. Belasco, of course, is the master of minutæ. Even before it was proved by the movies that actuality of background—waving trees, real buildings, etc.—would cover a multitude of incredibilities—he knew the efficacy of little, immaterial truths as a disguise for great breaches in probability. There is one of these items in "The Boomerang." Near the end of the first act Miss Ruth Shepley announces that she is going home to get into her golfing clothes, and a little later you hear her and Mr. Byron, off-stage, preparing to start for the country club. "Are you going to drive this car?" asks Mr. Byron. "Yes," says Miss Shepley. "Then I'll walk," Mr. Byron decides. Miss Shepley is not seen in the act again, but when she appears for the curtain call, she wears the full regalia of the links. This is carrying detail to absurd lengths, for the curtain call is not a part of the play. But, take it from the management, whenever Miss Shepley shirks, which, it is said she sometimes does, many protests are received from vigilant disciples of realism in the drama.

An analyst of the character of Paul Verlaine once described the poet taking off his shoes in a café and scratching the soles of his feet. "That detail," wrote Mr. Vance Thompson, then an essayist, now a cruel and an eminent dietitian, "that detail is worth reams and reams of exegesis!"

LEW FIELDS is spending money like a cannon maker on his cast for "Bosom Friends." Richard Bennett is his latest extravagance, and John Mason, Helen Ware, Irene Fenwick, and Willis Sweatnam are some of the others. The play didn't cost much as it was produced in Chicago.

A. H. Woods, believing that the day of the theater in the smaller cities is over, will not send the cast of "Potash and Perlmutter in Society" on the road. After next Saturday's performance at the Olympic the company will be dismissed. The piece may be filmed, later, for the benefit of the one-night stands.

On the stage in St. Paul the other evening Louis Mann expressed hatred and contempt for C. M. Flandrau, critic of the Pioneer Press, who had written unfavorably of Mr. Mann's talent. Responding the next day, Mr. Flandrau described Mr. Mann as vulgar, tedious, objectionable, tasteless, disgruntled, and a has-been.

More than ever is Eugene Walter convinced of the stupidity of playgoers other than those of New York. "The Cheat," of which Miss Charlotte Walker was the star, has been abandoned after two weeks in Pittsburgh and Baltimore.

"Sweet Kitty Bellairs," once played by Miss Henrietta Crosman, is to be turned into a comic opera called "Kitty Darling" for Alice Nielsen. David Belasco, the author, has made a present of it to his sons-in-law, William Elliott and Maurice Guest, who have hired Rudolph Friml to write the music and Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse the lyrics. Mr. Guest is the impressario who invented the scheme of exchanging a pass and two sandwiches for a laudatory sermon on "Experience."

News comes from San Francisco that W. H. Crane's production of "Mr. Lazarus" under the title "The Happy Stranger" is a success and that the audiences like Miss Eva Le Gallienne almost as well as they do the star. "It may sound incredible," Mr. Crane telegraphed, "but a crowded house was delighted. Nineteen curtain calls, much enthusiasm, and I could start a wholesale florist's establishment with the flowers I received. It seems too good to be true."

William Hodge reads many plays with Lincoln as the leading character, but he can find none to please him. "He must walk the stage as he walked the path of life," says Mr. Hodge, "an inspiration to honesty, with great simplicity, an example of loyalty to lofty ideals, and ever an optimist and humanitarian."

Out Kansas City way they say that Miss Wilda Bennett's performance in "Sybil" is much to be preferred to that of Miss Julia Sanderson.

John and Lionel Barrymore, Miss Laura Hope Crews, and Miss Constance Collier will act in "Peter Ibbetson" in New York April 16.

Food for reflection may be found in the fact that Miss Blanche Bates and Wilton Lackaye have shelved their new play "Eleven P. M." in Boston and will revive "East Lynne."

Mme. Bernhardt's variety troupe has been dispersed and she is now in Charleston, S. C., visiting friends.

The contretemps in Washington the other night, when Mme. Nazimova resented audible criticism from a box party, recalls a similar but more violent incident in the capital years ago. An early chronicler of the stage records that the Hon. James Blair, M. C., from South Carolina, attended the Washington theater one evening in March, 1834, "when, the players displeasing him, he drew his pistol and fired at the actors on the stage, the bullet passing just above the head of Miss Jefferson, daughter of Joseph Jefferson Sr. The players stampeded from the stage and a quick curtain was rung down. Presently the manager appeared, looking pale and agitated, and said to the audience, 'Ladies and gentlemen, if there is to be shooting at the actors on the stage it will be impossible for the performance to go on!' 'I'll shoot again if they don't do better!' responded the critical statesman."

"To the King's House to see 'The Mayd's Tragedy,'" wrote Mr. Pepys in 1667, "but vexed all the while with two talking ladies and Sir Charles Sedley; yet pleased with their discourse. . . . But by that means lost the pleasure of the play wholly, to which now and then Sir Charles Sedley's exceptions against both words and pronouncing were very pretty."

Klimt and Gazzolo are eager to acquire the dramatic rights to a series of Hearst newspaper articles on Why Working Girls Leave Home, by Clara E. Laughlin, president of the Cordon club.

Frederick Herendeen of Chicago is among the authors of "The Masked Model," a musical play soon to be presented by Lew Hearn, Bonita, and others.

"Flora Bella" is traveling westward without Miss Lina Abarbanell, who appeared as its prima donna in eastern cities. Miss Eleanor Henry is her successor.

The next "Passing Show" will be written around De Wolf Hopper as its principal comedian.

Miss Rose Coghlan observed her fiftieth anniversary on the stage last Wednesday by inviting the guests of the Actors' Fund home to see her play in "Our Betters" in New York.

Those readers who deplore the frequent publication here of news concerning Miss Laurette Taylor are requested to skip this paragraph. It is to tell that the New York newspapers say she is very good in her husband's not so good new play, "Out There," in which she impersonates a cockney nurse in a war hospital.

Fred Niblo, late of "Hit-the-Trail Holliday," is to try again this season in "Under Pressure," by Sidney Rosenfeld. Mr. Niblo's brother-in-law, Mr. Cohan, is the manager, and other actors in it will be Grace Elliston and Percy Ames.

"Bob" Adams, once of Chicago, was married last week in London to Odette Myrtil, a vivid young French woman who used to play the violin in Mr. Ziegfeld's Midnight Frolic in New York. Mr. Adams' nuptials are recorded here because he will be remembered by celebrants of the waning generation as the rag time troubadour who invented cabarets years ago in the red light terrain around Twenty-second street.

News and Views of the Theaters

Mr. Hitchcock, returning in "Betty" after more than three years, is again of a mind to express aspirations for the tuneless drama: he babbles o' such a piece called "Some," and, unmindful of past disasters, says he will act in it. This, perhaps, is the urge of the Something Higher: no droll of the girls-and-music shows is complete without it. Once, it is recalled, he cost a prudent manager, Mr. Savage, money by insisting that he would be good as a sentimental fireman in a play called "Easy Dawson." Later, he had Richard Harding Davis fashion him a piece in which he would perform as a heroic American war-correspondent in the Graeco-Turkish war. It was called, doubtless, "The Galloper," and was salvaged, after the public frowned upon it in that form, with songs by Wallace Irwin and renamed "The Yankee Tourist."

When he came back from London—where, it seems, he was the most successful of the war-time comedians—Mr. Hitchcock did so with the notion that he ought to play his part in "Betty" just as it was written, and as it was played there by George Huntley. Whether he did it well does not matter: what does is that the public in New York was not interested, and did not impede traffic by forming in line at the box-office after the first-night. He broken-heartedly renounced art, and resumed the way that was his in home-made shows; and now, from all reports, he is effective and funny once more, with a good song in the manner of "All Dressed Up," and a comic speech about the Reverend Sunday for the entr'acte.

Miss Maude Adams will not leave New York until next year. Then she will travel for two years, playing nothing but Barrie's "A Kiss for Cinderella."

The Paulist Players announce for production tomorrow night at their theater, 1120 Wabash avenue, an Easter playlet called "Resurrection," by Erle Putnam. It is described as a free verse attempt in the treatment of a highly conventionalized theme to embody the pre-Raphaelite spirit in the method of the Post Impressionists. Fyllis Fay will impersonate the Virgin.

Arnold Bennett's "The Great Adventure" will have its first Chicago presentation in Mandel hall April 7 by the Dramatic club of the University of Chicago. The cast will include Bartlett Cormack, Hertha von Baumgartner, Emily Taft, Albert Pick Jr., Glenn Millard, James Evans, Emer Evans, Lee Ettleson, and Arthur Baer. Mme. Borgny Hammer is the director.

Vaudeville News.

May Irwin, having had no success with long plays this season, will experiment in vaudeville with a short one, "The Hero of Santa Maria," an item from the repertory of the Washington Square players.

"The Very Naked Boy," from Stuart Walker's Portmanteau, is about to be subjected to vaudeville.

Herbert Moore says that, discouraged by B. L. T.'s sneer at his patriotic anthem, "America Today," he will write no more. "And," he laments, "I had just started one beginning, 'O, say!'"

"Vaudeville," the Chicago organ of the varieties, announces that Pantages, the western magnate, will build a theater in Chicago next summer. One of the sites suggested for it is that of the American Express building in Monroe street.

Miss Anna Chandler, singing last week at the Majestic, was requested by the management to omit the song "O, Johnny," from her repertory, on the ground that it is for men only.

Stan-Stanley, the aisle seat comedian of the current bill at the Majestic, stopped a runaway horse last week in Indianapolis and was called a hero therefor by the newspapers.

Miss Clara Morton will have a new act next season, called "The Doll Shop."

Joseph E. Howard and Miss Ethelyn Clark are planning a new vaudeville revue with twenty people in the cast.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Heisen, the Chicago dancers, have enlisted the interest of Messrs. Dillingham and Ziegfeld, and are now among the contributors to the midnight revels in the Cocoanut Grove, a roof theater in New York. They have changed the orthography of their patronymic to the more neutral Hyson.

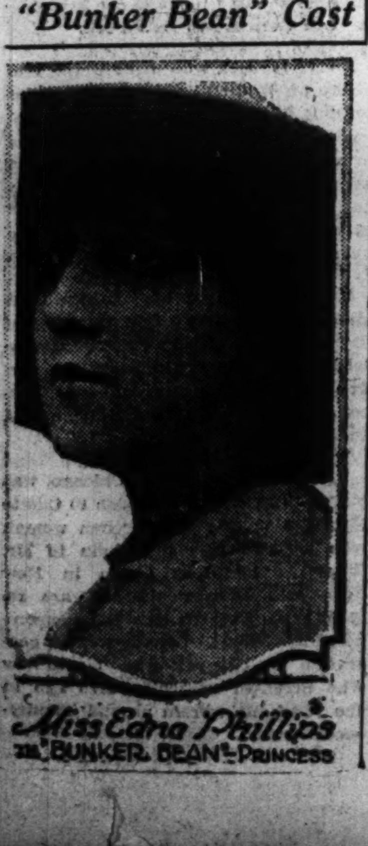
A New Member of the "Bunker Bean" Cast



Miss Edna Phillips in "BUNKER BEAN" at the PRINCESS

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The lady in search of her soul, the lady who loves and loses, has been the heroine of the week's dramas, and we rather resent her intrusion. She really has no place in the spring drive that is coming over the edge of the world hereabouts. She is a leftover from the serious October days of the drama, a pessimistic person, misunderstanding and misunderstood. She is forever seeking heaven on earth, though she gets no farther than purgatory, and purgatory, we insist, has no place in the April scheme of things.

She came to notice first in a production of John Galsworthy's "The Fugitive," and she repeated her story later in the week in a weird Russian effort entitled "Nju," in which the "j" is silent and the rest of it pronounced as written. It probably would be asking too much of the progressive duma of our would-be sister republic to adopt a possible language, but we feel certain an anti-consonant party in Russia could do a lot to further popular education.

"Nju" is really a term of endearment, a diminutive for Annette. When she is very dear they call her "Nuja," as they called Mrs. Romanoff, the late empress, "Sasha" for short, her name being Alexandra. Nju is the wife of an honest citizen and the mother of a 7 year old boy, but still she counts her life a failure. In the eighth year of her marriage she discovers that her blood runs cold to the touch of her husband, and there is neither joy for her in his presence nor in his spoken words of affection. He is, as was Torwald to Nora, a strange man in the house and he irritates her excessively. All day long, all night long, her heart cries out for freedom; she would live, live, live, but not with the father of her child, for he has no soul.

It happens that at a ball she meets a poet, a fever heated poet, who writes her a verse libre love message on a strip of confetti and throws it to her in the mazes of the dance or thereabouts. It speaks of fairy stories and fairy castles and fills the unhappy wife with the joy of impending adventure and the hope of a soul flight through dark clouds to the light.

She tells her husband, confesses her loathing of him and her love of another. She is still true to her maternal instincts and truly reluctant to part from her son, but the call of life is stronger even than that and she must heed it. Husband proposes a compromise. So long as there is no overt act he is willing to make concessions. Can't they all three live together some way? And then if anything should happen to the soul flight Nuja would be near home. No, she couldn't do that; it would be monstrous. So she goes away with her poet.

For a time they are very happy, and then it occurs to Nju that her longing for life is still unsatisfied. It was something higher than love that was calling to her. Perhaps it was death! And, being a sincere investigator, she tries death. It was reported that she killed herself. At any rate she dies, and in the last scene of all there is a funeral—a funeral at which the husband's wreath of forget-me-nots is mixed with the poet's wreath of white roses by a clumsy florist. Russian humor is always a bit ironical.

The most interesting member of the cast is Ann Andrews, said to be a Los Angeles society girl who took to the stage but recently and played this same heroine with Mr. Ordynski at the Little theater in Los Angeles. She is an interesting beauty, though still untrained. Frank Mills is the husband and Henry Stanford an unromantic poet lover. No lover past 40 is ever romantic.

Galsworthy's "The Fugitive" is, as the reading public knows a taut little tragedy conceived and written in the modern spirit on the same theme—that of woman's fight for the freedom of her soul. The heroine here, too, has come to look upon her prosaic husband as an awful thing to have about the place. After five years' trial, four of them a complete failure, she, too, rebels.

The husband in this instance is also mystified. And being a sensitive, self-centered Briton, he tries to avoid the break, not because of the love he bears his rebel wife, but because of the scandal her abandonment of her wifely responsibilities might cause. She insists, however, that she must go. Neither will she permit him to settle an allowance upon her. She cannot accept favors for which she does not give something in return.

She is encouraged in her stand for freedom by a writing chap. He is not a poet, however, and therefore, as lovers go, rather conservative. He does not ask her to come to him until her love for him is the determining factor. For a time the lady works as a clerk in a store. When this fails her she returns to the writing man and, their love for each other having awakened, they set up housekeeping.

When the crash comes, when the husband sues for his divorce and the disclosures threaten the lover with failure, the poor little fugitive, hounded by her weakness as well as her husband's detectives, realizing the burden she is to the man she has come to love, leaves him rather than bring further trouble upon him. Months later, in a cheap restaurant, she tries to adopt the life defeated women are presumed to embrace. But the thought of it is too much for her; she empties a vial of poison into her first glass of champagne and dies.

Emily Stevens plays the heroine of the Galsworthy play, giving another of those exceptionally fine technical performances, exact and illuminating in detail, which are common with her. Edward Emery is the husband and Conway Tearle the writing person. Even "The Fugitive," well written and well played though it is, left us cold. It must be the time of year.

Right off the Reel

By MAE TINEÉ.

WITH THE "E" AS IN NAY.

YOU do have an awful time pronouncing my name, don't you? You know how to say "Mae," but when it comes to the "Tinee" you slip and slide, and then most of you fall down. Well, I'm sorry for you, and I'm going to help you out. I'm going to change my name. No, not a radical change, just a little one. We'll put an accent mark over the place where the accent should be. Today and hereafter it shall be written Mae Tinée. Note the accent mark and pronounced it Tinay.

In case you don't understand just what was the origin of the name anyhow I may as well tell you that it was brilliantly evolved from "matinée" at the time when my work consisted exclusively of interviewing dramatic stars.

And now I hope we're all happy and comfortable.

Without describing exactly the duties performed a certain detective agency filed in the New York Supreme court last week a suit against Clara Kimball Young for $11,436. It is said that Mrs. Young has paid $3,000 on account, but refuses to meet further demands.

"Mobilize the movies!" The association of motion picture advertisers, feeling that motion pictures may be of possible assistance to the country's military resources, has instituted a campaign—object preparedness. The plan of campaign includes, it is said, the organization of a responsible bureau in New York which shall immediately prepare two feature pictures to be shown in the 20,000 motion picture theaters in the United States, and the immediate use of smaller patriotic reels now available from the motion picture companies. It is planned to prepare slides to induce recruiting. Among the men said to indorse the plan are Jesse L. Lasky, Adolph Zukor, and Walter Irving. Trust the movies to keep moving.

Being strong in principle, Mabel Taliaferro has ordered her cook to eliminate potatoes and onions from her table, and she has limited her breakfast menu from two eggs to one. "Not a question of dollars and cents, at all," says Miss Taliaferro, "but a matter of American principle."

Few married couples are more popular on the screen than Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. They are known as comedians of high order and can make you laugh without making you nauseated at the same time. It is interesting to know that before Mr. Drew undertakes to make one of his releases he submits it to his wife, who arranges the settings and sees that the story is adapted to the talents of her husband. Incidentally she is known as one of the best woman directors in motion pictures. She directs many of the Metro-Drew comedies.

William Fox and the Fox Film company are in a damage suit. Alleging that "The Honor System," a Fox production, is a plagarism of her scenario, entitled "A Wizard's Love," Emma Del Pierson, a California scenario writer, is suing for $50,000.

Bessie Love wore heavy ribbed stockings for four weeks while impersonating the part of a boy in her next picture, "Cheerful Givers."

Ruth Stonehouse gave a St. Patrick's party to a lot of people whom she thought were Irish. She afterwards discovered that the only Irishman of the party was her husband, Joe Roach.

Seven of the actresses at the Selig studio, Los Angeles, having the ukulele mania, Thomas Santschi threatens to take lessons on the aliphorn in self-defense.

Arthur Shirley has been engaged to play opposite Jackie Saunders in a series of five reel productions.

It is said that "Mothers of France," the new Sarah Bernhardt picture, which has just been purchased by the World Film-Brady Made Pictures corporation, has broken every attendance record in the history of the Rialto theater in New York.

The Jesse L. Lasky company announces with glee that it has purchased the motion picture rights to Edward Milton Royle's "The Squaw Man." It is a sequel to the play and screen production, "The Squaw Man." This picture when it is released April 26 will feature Wallace Reid in the stellar rôle, supported by Anita King and Dorothy Davenport. At last, children, you will have your wish and see Mr. Reid and his wife playing together.

The Parent and Teachers' association of Tacoma, Wash., which organized a campaign for better films for children, has leased the Tacoma theater, a "legitimate house, which seats 1,500, for each Saturday until the summer season.

A new starring combination on the Paramount program will be Sessue Hayakawa and Vivian Martin. One hopes that Tsuri Aoki will be the third.

Is Marriage Sacred?

Causes of Matrimonial Unhappiness Shown in Gripping Photodramas

Why is the tongue of scandal busy with the names of so many married people of your acquaintance?

Why is our country honeycombed with ruined homes and disrupted families?

I have produced an unusual series of photodramas in which the chief causes of matrimonial tangles, discords and divorces are treated with convincing realism—"Is Marriage Sacred?"

Each one of these powerful pictures tells a complete story—sheds a clear, truthful light upon some vital problem of married life.

See one each week—they will give you food for thought and a new viewpoint on the complex subject of the marriage relation.

A great cast is led by such famous screen favorites as Marguerite Clayton, Edward Arnold, Lillian Drew and Sydney Ainsworth.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

H. Z. C.: Ruth Stonehouse is married to Joe Roach. Address her care of the Universal company, Universal City, Cal. You're welcome.

EARL C.: Mary Miles Minter is about 18 years of age.

E. H.: The next picture in which Dorothy Gish is scheduled to appear is "Her Official Fathers." I don't know. I am sorry.

I CAN: I'm glad you like the column. Yes, my kind heart is the best thing about me. I'm going to write Mr. Sennett regarding the statement he sent you. In one of its own periodicals the company stated that it was anxious for new stuff. Never mind—try again somewhere else, some other time.

J. F.: Several things might cause the lines you speak of to appear on the screen. It might have been raining when the picture was taken; the negative might be faulty, or the screen itself might have some irregularity. Usually however, the fault is in the negative.

MY FAN: Indeed I do remember you. Mae Murray was born in 1896. Probably. She was on the "legitimate" stage before going into pictures. I understand she is very "nice." T'wekkum.

E. L. L.: You're really quite a poet—but maybe you don't know it. (Yes, I know that's old stuff.) I'm going to save it and maybe I'll put it in the paper. Wouldja mind?

P. F. M.: I'm so sorry you didn't send me your address, for I would have liked to have written you a personal letter. It makes me feel happy to know I have made some of your hours pleasanter ones. I assure you that your few words of appreciation made my day bright. Thank you!

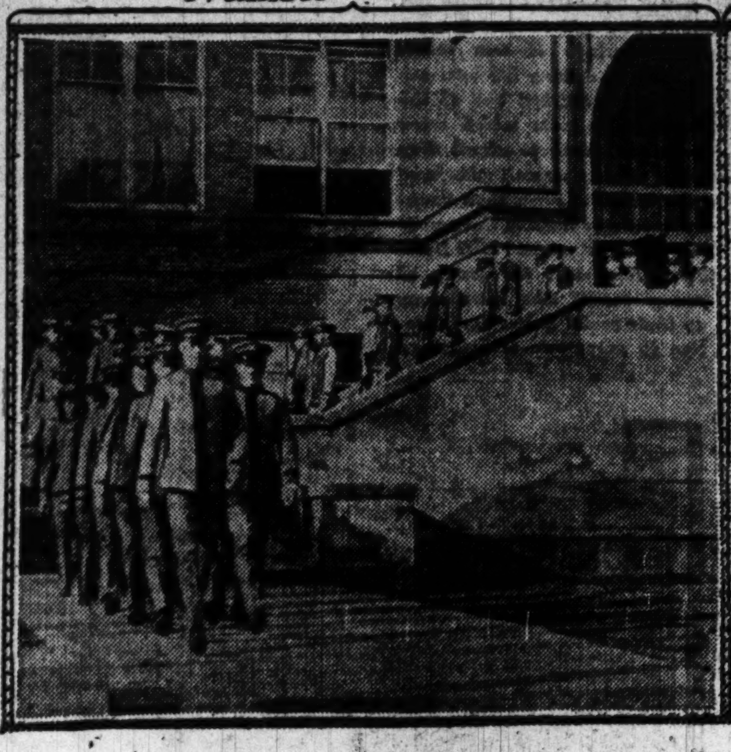
In the two issues this week are shown:

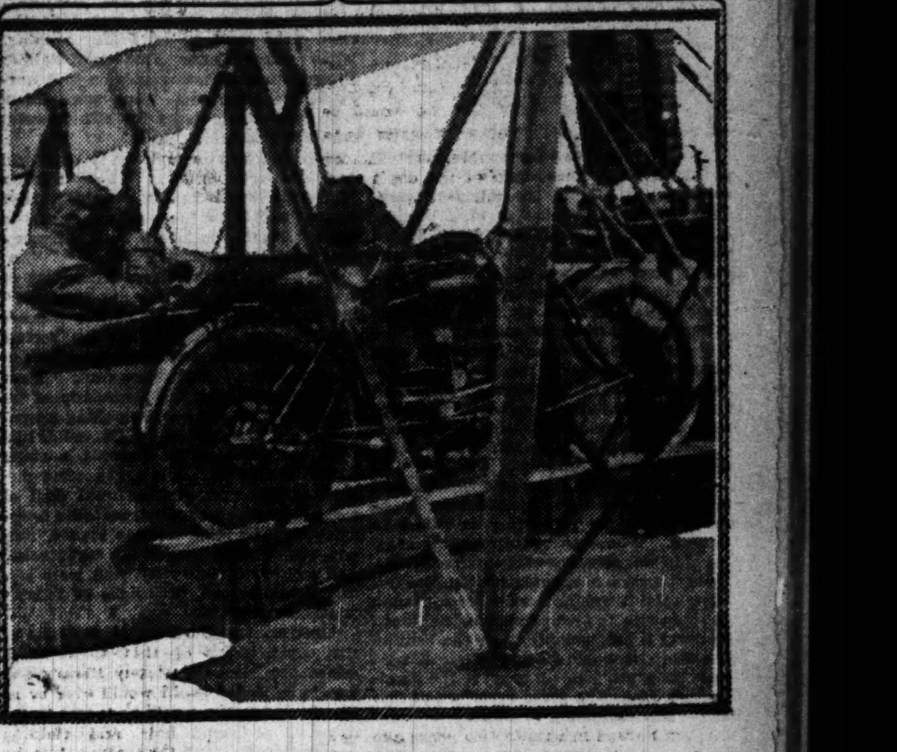
Number 26



CADETS SHOW PATRIOTISM.

No one entertained the slightest doubt as to the patriotism of the crowd of Oak Park, Ill., military cadets who paraded through the streets of Chicago the other day with an armored automobile. After this demonstration they attended a theater benefit for the French wounded.

Number 27



"LATEST" AERO WAR DEVICE.

The latest innovations in the flying corps are aeroplanes equipped with motorcycles. The motorcycles are intended for scout duty and it is believed will bear the same relation to the aeroplane as the steam launch does to the battleship.

"Joan the Woman" is a production that impresses. Its force is deeper than the tinsel thrill; it has the power to linger in the memory. It has created a vivid transcription of a past age and a past patriotism that will live with the present and perhaps fire it into a new glow of loyalty.

Chicagoans to Enlist with the U-Boat Chasers

By Mme. X.

THIS year's April foolery:
"See that submarine?"
"Where?"
"April fool!"

A grim year for simple hearted, old April fool! The origin of the day's traditions is lost in the mists of ages. The French term for it is "poisson d'Avril" (April fish), and in Italy, Spain, Germany, and even in Greece the day is one dedicated to jokes and rustic foolery. But few nations today are in a humor to play pranks. Just what lies before us Americans none of us knows, and who will venture prophecies? But when such representative young men as John Borden and Donald M. Ryerson make all their preparations to take to the high seas as U-boat chasers—an exciting but perilous sport—it is an indication of the spirit of young America.

John Borden has long evidenced a soul animated by a love of adventure, especially when the adventure is yoked to danger. When, en route to polar seas, his ship was wrecked last summer off the rocky barriers of an uninhabited Alaskan island and it was necessary for some one to jump into the rough and icebound sea to carry a ship's cable from the boat to the shore he would let no one but himself undertake the job. A copy of the Engineering Magazine gives a picture of him in the sea swimming to shore.

When he was in France two years ago he visited his sister, Mrs. Borden-Turner, then working in a hospital at Dunkirk. The Germans from their lines twenty-five miles distant shelled the town. As his sister refused to leave her wounded, he refused to leave her, and quietly endured the mental strain of awaiting those terrific explosions timed to come every nine minutes for certain hours of the day. So hunting for submarines will be a royal sport for him.

No Protest from Women.

Donald Ryerson goes to his self-appointed task with no such natural love of danger and excitement. He is moved solely by what he believes to be duty to his country. He resigns an important position in the well known old firm of J. T. Ryerson Sons and has already bought a swift motorboat and enlisted a crew to scour the American seaboard and help clear its waters of the U-boat menace.

Like Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Donald Ryerson takes the stand that not from her will her husband hear any protest against his decision.

In line with this attitude on what he thinks patriotism demands of Americans was an address Mr. Ryerson made yesterday afternoon at the French war movies at the Strand theater.

From Paris comes news from Capt. Reilly, who is occupying his aunt, Mrs. George Dunlap's apartment there, that owing to a shortage of coal that apartment building, like all others, had been quite without heat during this long, bitterly cold winter—the coldest since 1871. Fancy Paris with the thermometer 10 degrees below zero and no "chauffage centrale!" He writes that at night he donned no light and fancy pyjamas, but, on going to bed, put on his warmest clothes and topped all with a heavy sweater. He also was concerned over the announced intention of the Paris government further to circumvent the coal shortage by shutting down all house lights at 8 p. m.

Crowds at Registry Bureau.

The registry bureau opened by Mrs. Joseph Coleman at 60 East Madison street last Wednesday, where women can go and sign up for some one of the many branchse of national service, was proven a great success on its opening day. Women from all over the city and from every walk of life came in to volunteer some kind of service.

Mrs. John Carpenter had decorated the large empty shop most attractively with banners and red, white, and blue paper doodaddles, and had adorned the wide window seats with rims of little Dutch looking flower pots planted with red and blue paper, roses, and real, God-made white hyacinths.

A crowd of women that extended out to the sidewalks awaited Mrs. Coleman and her aids on their arrival on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock. The candidates were formed into lines and thus marshaled were soon accommodated at table where the pledges were stacked up to be signed.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. Joseph Winterbotham, Mrs. Julian Mason, Miss Ellen Ryerson, and Mrs. John Carpenter were all on hand to explain the pledges and their classifications to the inquiring multitudes. Some women seemed to think that it was a sort of employment bureau and that they would be immediately assigned to lucrative jobs—preferably in other towns. One woman breathed the wish that she should be sent to St. Louis. "I think I'd like it there," she sighed. On the whole, however, an intelligent and loyal spirit animated the candidates.

The registering will continue for another ten days; you'd better go in and see in what way you can serve your country—the greatest country in the world.

All this sounds as if the social world were doing nothing but the serious nowadays. As a matter of fact, most people are taking even their pleasures with unwonted gravity. The Casino club, usually the rendezvous for the gay, listened to still another war talk—the third since January—on Friday evening, when after dinner Frederick Palmer showed them his war movies and narrated his experience. But more lively entertainment is listed for this cheerful club after Easter.

Soon the Saddle and Cycle club will open its real season, when Sunday luncheons and Saturday evening dinner dances will draw the young and gay in ever increasing numbers until summer's heat scatters he smart set.

One of the choicest entertainments of the winter was he "soiree musicale" given by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker last Tuesday evening, when the Société des Instruments Anciens—a French enterprise—gave the program. Four Frenchmen, under the leadership of M. Casadesus, played quaint looking grandfathers of the modern violin, cello, and bass viol, while Mme. Patorni, a sister of M. Casadesus, made a charming picture as she extracted a great deal of music from a resounding, metallic harpsichord. The program was gigues, rondos, etc, compositions of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and were gay and light hearted, with none of today's "welt schmerz."

One looked at the fine old portraits of the court ladies of that time which adorn the Meekers' stately library and wondered if the world would ever be as simple and festive again as it was in the days of powdered hair and tinkling harpsichords. And then came, like an illuminating flash, the thought that all that cour life and those merry dances rested on a huge substructure of human misery. So far did thoughts stray under the influence of the music from ancient instruments. They looked so sad, those French players and the pretty Mme. Buisson, who sang with them!

Among the company, who all paid close attention to the program and gave it hearty applause, were the Morris Johnstons, Joseph G. Colemans, Julian Masons, George Higginson Jrs., Donald M. Ryersons, Tiffany Blakes, William Prescott Hunts, Samuel T. Chases, Ray Athertons, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. Hale Holden, Mrs. James Keeley, Russell Tyson, Frank Cramer, and Eames MacVeagh.

Have you ridden yet in or on one of the double decker busses? It's a real experience. They are still such a novelty that you feel like a pioneer, and as pioneers are always friendly and unconventional so passengers on the doe colored busses don't wait for introductions, but exchange views on their experiences and impressions with entire lack of formality.

Junior Leaguers Rehearsing.

Ahead of us are various social functions, chief of which is the Junior league show on the 10th, when at the Auditorium this enterprising group of youngsters will outdo all their previous records by a musical and dramatic entertainment more than usually chic and amusing. They are training night and day under the direction of Miss Grace Gerrish in the Blackstone's crystal ballroom.

The program will consist of a two act piece with a musical intermezzo performed by a group of young men—which is a complete secret from even the Junior leaguers getting up the show. We only know that Billy Fuller and Deering Davis are in the drum corps and that John McIlvaine is to play one of the three pianos which will be a resonant part of the orchestra.

Those chiefly instrumental in getting up the entertainment are Miss Isabelle Holt, president of the Junior league, and the Misses Katherine McFadon, Helen Hinde, Elizabeth Goodrich, Marion Strobel, Mrs. Howard Spalding, and Mrs. Robert Gardner.

Some Chicago university men "with voices"—for song, we presume—are to take part in the two act musical play.

It is safe to say that this play will present some striking features. The first act is to be in the establishment of a much married oriental costumer whose mannequins are his wives. The second act is to be in a tea garden. A slight plot links the whole.

The following evening at the Winnetka Woman's club three one act plays will be given for the work of the Cathedral Mission of SS. Peter and Paul in Chicago. Those taking part in the first piece, "The Sire de Malatroit's Door," are Mrs. Francis Butler and Murry Nelson. Mrs. Arthur Havemeyer and Ernest Ballard will play the two rôles in "Katherine Parr," while "The Twelve Pound Look" will be presented by Mrs. Laird Bell, Ernest Ballard, and Francis Butler. Quite a number of Chicago folk are going to motor out to see the histrionic qualities of the city's highest browed suburb.

Saturday evening, April 14, a concert and dance at the Blackstone hotel is being gotten up by Mrs. Archibald Freer, the proceeds of which will go to the support of the work of two American women in France for the benefit of French wounded. Miss Grace Gassette of Chicago and Baroness Charles Huard are the two American women whose endeavors to ameliorate suffering in France will be aided and abetted.

On April 16 at 3:30 in the afternoon, Albert Spalding, one of the most delightful living violinists, will give a recital in the Blackstone's cheerful ballroom for the benefit of the only American hospital in Florence, Italy, for Italian wounded. Mr. Spalding and his mother have one of the loveliest villas in Italy on the heights overlooking this historic city, so his heart is in the cause for which he will play and he will make the occasion a memorable one.

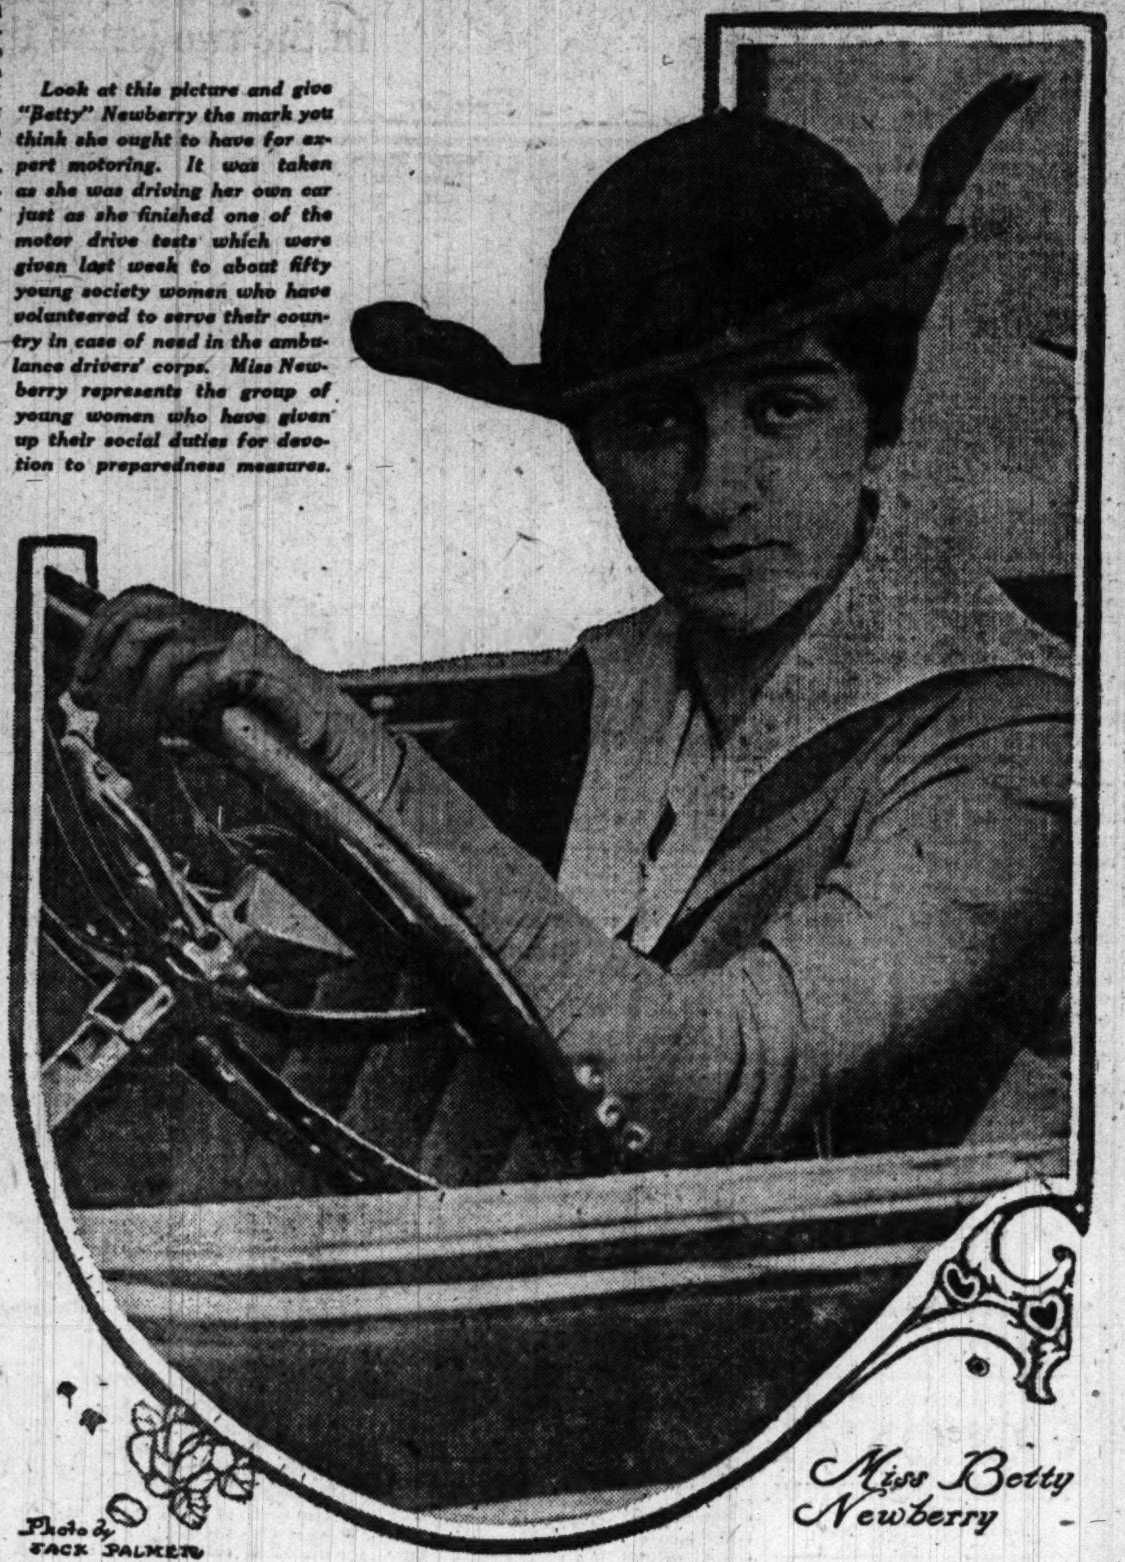
Miss Georgie Sheldon, who, with Miss Mary Nixon, had, in ante-bellum days, a popular school there for American girls organized this hospital in an old and historic palazzo, soliciting funds for its maintenance and now is in need of further support for her soldier boys. Miss Mary Nixon, Miss Ethel Wrenn, and others are working for the success of this concert.

From faraway Santa Barbara come rumors of the Chatfield-Taylor's new house, "Far Afield," in which they are now well settled. They gave a house warming dinner recently to sixteen guests when speeches were made, among them one by the host in which he said that he thought he was the happiest man in the world, that he had the handsomest wife, the finest children, and the most attractive house in the land—a cheerful summing up of his resources for any man to make.

The Chatfield-Taylors' only daughter, Mrs. Hendrix Whitman, and her husband and children are visiting at "Far Afield." The engagement of their eldest son, Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, to Miss Adele Blow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Blow, was announced recently.

So delighted are the Chatfield-Taylors with southern California that it is probable that in the years to come they will spend less and less time here. Land of the lotus eaters it is where the mountains and sea and ideal climate cast such a spell over the inhabitants that they forget all previous existence. People recently returned from there say that you seldom or never hear the war mentioned there. The Santa Barbarians live for golf, bridge, dancing—and climate.

She Will Serve Country as Ambulance Driver in Case of War.



Look at this picture and give "Betty" Newberry the mark you think she ought to have for expert motoring. It was taken as she was driving her own car just as she finished one of the motor drive tests which were given last week to about fifty young society women who have volunteered to serve their country in case of need in the ambulance drivers' corps. Miss Newberry represents the group of young women who have given up their social duties for devotion to preparedness measures.

What We Think of Pearls

FROM Revenue Reports we have learned that in the past two months we have paid on pearl importations more than six times the amount of duty collected by the Chicago Custom House during the entire year 1916 from all other local wholesale, retail and manufacturing jewelers combined.

¶ This is indicative of the commanding position we occupy in the pearl trade and of the unique advantages we in turn can offer those who are considering the purchase of pearls as an investment.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Woman's Aid Ends Season of Varied Activities

A BUSINESS meeting on Tuesday will end the official year of the Chicago Woman's Aid, a year that has been full of accomplishments, three of which have been the employment of a civic director, who has kept in close touch with the civic, educational, and philanthropic interests of the city; the employment of an expert dietician at the West Side dispensary to teach proper food values, and the extensive work that has been done in connection with the City Garden association.

The Chicago Woman's Aid was organized in 1882 and started as a flower mission. Five years ago the work was organized into departments, and now there are nine separate classes that have been formed for the study of civic problems, five current topics classes that meet weekly, ten art and four music classes.

◆

One of the first social service nurses in Chicago was employed by this society. Vacation schools were another enterprise fostered by the organization; a ward in the Sarah Morris Hospital for Children was endowed; one of the first vocational directors was employed by this group of women; and for the last six years the society has been in charge of the social center at the John Smyth school, where 2,000 children are reached and their out of school hours directed by trained supervisors. Gymnastic games, folk dancing, cheery rooms, all these privileges and many more are furnished the people of this neighborhood.

The Mothers' English club, in connection with the center, has been studying civic problems and most of the members are about ready to take out their first citizenship papers. Sewing and domestic science are also included in their course of instruction, and entertainments of various kinds are given regularly. Since this work has been organized over $10,000 has been expended by the society in working out social center activities.

Comfort stations have been placed by the organization in the Public Library building, and the club has been instrumental in coöperating with the public school building inspection committee in employing matrons in school basements.

◆

The committee for assisting the blind gives monthly concerts at the Industrial home, and these are open to the blind of the city. Special concerts have been arranged this year for blind school children at the Felsenthal school, on the south side, and at other schools in different sections of the city.

The Fannie B. Adler memorial loan fund has been of great assistance to many this year who could not obtain guarantors for loans. Of the $500 set aside for this purpose, over $400 has been returned within the specified time.

The art section of the club now owns fourteen pictures; its special aim has been to encourage deserving Chicago artists.

BUNDLED in bearskin robes, the woman of the frozen north sits stiffly erect on her dog sled, cold, cramped and uncomfortable. It is a hardy mode of travel, but the best that land affords.

Many miles farther south her more fortunate sister steps leisurely into her OHIO ELECTRIC. She sinks into its deep, soft cushions and lightly touching a button, sends the beautiful car spinning noiselessly on its way.

For her, driving is a pleasure—a delightful diversion. Speeding along the boulevard or threading through crowded traffic, her OHIO ELECTRIC is instantly responsive to her will.

With the magnetic control she starts the car, stops it and regulates it to a nicety. This is an advantage exclusive to the OHIO ELECTRIC. It makes driving easy, simple and safe.

Inspect the OHIO ELECTRIC. Its graceful lines, its satin finish, and its luxurious riding comfort will surprise and delight you. And an OHIO ELECTRIC may be bought for as little as $2380. We will gladly give you a demonstration.

FUTURE EVENTS

Meditation, not social activity, is to be the occupation of this week, preceding Easter day, and there are but few events on the social calendar except those of a Lenten character. Those few will, as a rule, be benefit entertainments.

Mrs. Theron Colton will give the first of a series of three illustrated bird lectures tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Three Arts club, 1300 North Dearborn street. A number of society women are acting as patronesses for the lectures.

The opening reception of the annual architectural exhibition will be held Thursday evening in the galleries of the Art institute, and the guests will be welcomed by representatives of the institute, the Chicago Architectural club, the Illinois Society of Architects, and the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

The Chicago Wellesley club will hold its annual spring luncheon at the Union League club on Saturday at 12:30 o'clock. Miss Sophia Hart of the English department of Wellesley college will be the guest of honor. Miss Dorothy Richardson is one of those in charge of arrangements for the luncheon.

The benefit lectures scheduled for this week include that by the Rev. William Chalmers Covert of the First Presbyterian church, to be given Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. S. Leonard Royce of [illegible] Grand boulevard, on "Anne of Askew: Woman's Voice in England's Protest." The proceeds will go to embellishing the church grounds. Horace J. Bridges will give the last of the series of lectures for the benefit of the Henry Booth house extension fund Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock in the Fortnightly clubrooms in the Fine Arts building. For the benefit of the social service committee of the Children's Memorial hospital Dr. Charles P. Caldwell, president of the board of directors of the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium, will speak Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the residence of Miss Ethel Wrenn of 1500 Astor street.

The Liberty Hall players will give three plays at Hull House theater this evening. Lady Gregory's "The Rising of the Moon" and "Hyacinth Halvey," and William Ellery Leonard's "Glory of the Morning" will be presented. Jim Larkin of Dublin is directing the plays.

There will be a woman's card party tomorrow afternoon at the Kenwood club.

The South Shore Country club schedule for this week includes a concert this afternoon by the Blackstone orchestra, a formal ball on Thursday evening, and bridge tournaments and Red Cross classes on Monday and Friday afternoons. Plans are being made for an Easter concert at which the University of Chicago choir will furnish the music.

One of the largest social events of the year will be the "Junior League Revel," to be given by the young society men and women of the city on Tuesday evening, April 10, in the Auditorium theater, for the benefit of the charities of the league. The entertainment will be a pantomimic fantasie in two acts, with a prologue and entr'act, the latter to be given by John McIlvaine, John McCarthy, and Tom Shackford. The opening scene will show a gorgeous Persian bazaar, where modern young people are coming in and out to purchase costumes for a masquerade party. Miss Anita Blair is to be the star and there will be seven groups of dancers and singers.

Twenty-five little Belgians will be the beneficiaries of an entertainment to be held in Central Music hall on Thursday evening, April 12, when the Wentworth Drama club will present "The Flower Shop," by Marion Craig Wentworth. A group of girls will sell flowers and pass programs. Miss Pauline Smith and Miss Elsa Calvin will take the principal parts.

A recital will be given by Albert Spalding, the violinist, on Monday afternoon, April 16, in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel for the benefit of the American hospital in Florence, Italy. Miss Mary S. Nixon of the Girls' school in Florence, who is now in Chicago, is promoting the affair.

A benefit concert will be given at the Blackstone hotel on Saturday evening, April 14, for the benefit of the war relief work in Paris of Miss Grace Gassette and for the hospital founded by Baroness Huard at her chateau at Villers, France.

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot=Ease to Be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Fort Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things says: "The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk further and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions incased in rawhide.

The Government's foot powder order is regarded as the last word in the scientific outfitting of the defenders of the flag."

The English, French and Allied Troops constantly make use of Allen's Foot=Ease. It takes the friction from the shoe and rests the feet. Foot Powder, shaken into the shoes of soldiers, has long been in use in the German army, and Uncle Sam's adoption of this form of treating and easing the feet, emphasizes the testimony of the millions of people the world over, who are shaking Allen's Foot=Ease, the antiseptic powder, into their shoes, and using it in the foot bath, as the only practical and lasting treatment to ease and prevent sore feet. Sold by Drug and Department stores everywhere, 25c. Sample sent FREE. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y., U. S. A.

Grass Rugs of Rare Beauty

THE story of the Grass Rug is an interesting one. It goes to prove once more that very few of the products of nature are without their uses.

Wire grass, which grows on the wild lands of Minnesota and in parts of Wisconsin, was one kind of fodder that cattle refused to eat, but it had its uses, and today this same long, tough, wire grass is being utilized to adorn the homes of the land in the form of perfect rugs—

DELTOX GRASS RUGS

At first these rugs were used solely on porches, but gradually made their way inside and now you'll find them in every room in the house.

Handsome designs, good colors, and in all sizes—they add a cozy home-like look wherever placed.

Deltox Rugs are beautifully woven. They show no knots or sharp protruding ends, which was the common fault of most of the so-called "Grass" Rugs of earlier days.

Spots may easily be removed by a damp cloth.

And they are so sanitary—clean and easy to keep clean. Dust and dirt sift through them and may easily be gathered up when rugs are lifted. They need no beating.

A new Deltox is shown this year. We have christened it

The DELCRAFT Grass Rug

—a double warp, mixed weave, mottled effect grass rug, shown in many handsome designs and colors.

All Deltox dealers will carry a line of Delcrafts. Don't fail to see them both.

Wool rugs are almost prohibitive this year, because of the extremely high price dealers must ask for them. Let Deltox Grass Rugs take their place in your home. You will find them on display in all good stores where rugs are sold.

DELTOX GRASS RUG COMPANY
Oshkosh, Wisconsin

DELTOX RUGS can be purchased from all the leading Floor Covering and Department Stores. See that the word DELTOX is on the label.

A supremacy that is acknowledged by every other store in America—a supremacy earned by our strenuous efforts to serve you better than elsewhere. Here service means that we must provide, always, the largest stocks, the greatest varieties, absolutely the best values, and thoroughly competent salesfolks—and we do. Particularly do we ask you to test us during this April Sale, for never have conditions in the Silk World been so unusual in every respect. Still you may come here and find that we are ready, as never before, to fill your silk needs. Should we attempt to tell you of the vastness of the varieties it would take you far afield in the realm of color and fabric. The glowing, living, inspiring creations for Spring are alluring and bewildering, but they've proven themselves to be so truly beautiful that our Silk Sales are far larger than last season—and so we expect the April Sale to surpass its predecessors on its merits, and have no fear of the results, for when the women of Chicago read only the small part of the story that can be told here, they'll hurry to share in the economies. Main Floor and Basem't—State St.

News of the Religious World

Churches to Hold Services Through the Coming Week

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

PALM SUNDAY services today will usher in Holy week in all the churches which follow the church year in their worship. Many nonliturgical churches will recognize the solemnity of the association of the week with the last events in the life of Christ and will use the opportunity in holding religious services of a simpler, though of no less devout character.

The Lutherans and the Protestant Episcopalians will hold noonday services, the Lutherans at the Olympic theater, Clark and Randolph streets, and the Protestant Episcopalians in the Majestic theater, 22 West Monroe street.

The Rev. Louis Hoelter, pastor of the Immanuel Lutheran church, will speak tomorrow noon at the Olympic and other pastors will speak on successive days. In the Majestic theater the Rt. Rev. Charles P. Anderson, bishop of Chicago, will speak every noon.

At the Cathedral of the Holy Name, Superior and North State streets, Holy week will be observed with the complete ceremony of the Roman Catholic church. Archbishop Mundelein will pontificate at 11 o'clock and bless the palms before the 11 o'clock mass. On Holy Thursday at 10 o'clock the archbishop will pontificate. The mass of the pre-sanctified will be said at 9 o'clock on Good Friday, in the presence of the archbishop. At the services on Honly Saturday, commencing at 8 o'clock, the archbishop will officiate.

This evening at 7:30 the Rev. Dr. D. J. Dunne will preach. On Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday at 4:30 p. m. the Tenebrae will be sung. The sermon on Wednesday evening will be preached by the Rev. James Horsburgh, and on Friday by the Rev. Dr. Berger. Archbishop Mundelein will attend the Tenebrae services each evening.

The music will be furnished by the new choir consisting of double male quartet and chorus of men and boys' voices, and chancel choir of students of Cathedral college, Hans Merx, musical director.

The Tenebrae program will be:

"Miserere mei." (Psalm [illegible])	Palestrina
Lamentations of the Prophet Jeremiah	J. E. Stehle
Christus factus est	Palestrina
Populo meus	Vittoria
O bone Jesu	Palestrina

The Calvary Presbyterian church, Jackson boulevard and South Keeler avenue, the Rev. Ralph D. Kearns, pastor, will be dedicated today with a special program of meetings, receptions, and dinners throughout the week. The preachers today will be at 10:30 a. m., the Rev. Prof. Edgar P. Hill; 7:45 p. m., the Rev. F. L. Selden. On Tuesday evening the gymnasium will be dedicated; on Wednesday evening there will be a church dinner, and on Friday evening a communion service, conducted by President J. G. K. McClure. On Monday evening, April 2, there will be a fellowship meeting, at which neighboring pastors will speak. Tomorrow evening the Rev. R. Kee[illegible] will speak, and on Thursday evening the Rev. O. M. Caward. The church cost [illegible]0,000.

The Berry Memorial Methodist Episcopal church, Giddings and North Leavitt streets, will observe today as Joash day. It is hoped that $700 will be placed in the Joash chest as the result of a month of self-denial. The Rev. Alfred Peache is pastor.

The Rev. Ivan S. Nowlan has accepted the call to become associate pastor of the Hyde Park Baptist church of which the Rev. Charles W. Gilkey is pastor. Mr. Nowlan will be director of religious education.

Miss Camille Henry has charge of the group of Lenten mornings for the benefit of the Henry Booth house extension fund which have been given at the Fortnightly rooms on Tuesdays at 11 o'clock. The last of the series will be a lecture on "George Bernard Shaw—His Two Ideas," by Horace J. Bridges.

The Rev. James S. Stone

The Rev. James S. Stone, D. D., is rector of the St. James Protestant Episcopal church, Huron and Cass streets, the oldest Protestant Episcopal church in Chicago. The services conducted in the church for Holy week will be held at least twice every day, at 10 a. m. and 5 p. m., and on certain days in the evening. On Good Friday in addition to the 10 and 5 o'clock services there will be the three hour service from 12 to 3 o'clock and at 8 p. m. Dubois' "Seven Last Words" will be sung by the choir. On Thursday evening there will also be a service. At all of the services select voices from the choir will sing and on Good Friday the full choir will be present under the leadership of the musical director, John W. Norton. Dr. Stone has been rector of St. James church since 1895.

The West Pullman Baptist church, One Hundred and Twentieth street and Eggleston avenue, will be dedicated at 3 o'clock today by Dean Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago. At 10:30 a. m. the Rev. Frank L. Anderson, superintendent of the Baptist executive council, will preach, and at 7:45 p. m. there will be a musical service and a rally of the young people, with an address by the Rev. A. H. Gage of the Garfield Park Baptist church. The Rev. Louis J. Velte is pastor. The church cost $12,000.

The choir of St. Timothy's Evangelical Lutheran church, North Kildare and Dickens avenues, the Rev. J. A. M. Hinderlie, pastor, will sing "The Seven Last Words," by Dubois, on Good Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

Dr. John Kelman of Edinburg, Scotland, will speak today at 11 o'clock in the Central church, of which Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus is pastor, at the Auditorium theater, on "Life in the Trenches." Dr. Kelman speaks from his own experience.

The festival of the Passover will be observed by Jews beginning next Friday evening, continuing for a week. The first and seventh days are observed as full holidays and the other days as semi-holidays. Those who follow the strictest orthodox customs observe the second as well as the first day. The festival is in commemoration of the deliverance of the Jews from Egypt under the leadership of Moses and emphasizes especially the thought of liberty from bondage.

The Rev. E. H. Curtis, whose resignation as pastor of the Woodlawn Presbyterian church will take place May 1, and who will then become pastor emeritus, will be a special guest of the Presbyterian Ministerial association at a luncheon at Carson, Pirie & Scott's tomorrow noon. The luncheon will follow the regular meeting of the ministers at 509 South Wabash avenue. There will be fifteen other ministers who have recently assumed Chicago pastorates who will be introduced.

The state association of the Young Men's Christian association of Illinois will give a dinner in honor of John R. Mott and Albert E. Roberts of New York at the Hotel La Salle next Thursday evening.

The Methodist ministers' meeting will be held at the Chicago Training School for City, Home, and Foreign Missions tomorrow at 10:30. The Rev. T. P. Frost of Evanston will speak.

At the annual meeting of the First Presbyterian church, Forty-first street and Grand boulevard, last Wednesday evening the roll of members was called, and Mrs. Salmon Chase, who was a member of the Sunday school in 1848 when the church was located at Clark and Washington streets, responded. Others present were Henry M. Curtis and Mrs. Henry W. Dudley, who have been members since 1858.

The Rev. Byron Stauffer of Toronto, Canada, has declined the call to the pastorate of the New First Congregational church, Chicago.

The Trinity Protestant Episcopal church, Twenty-sixth street and South Michigan avenue, closed its fiscal year yesterday. During the last three years the following expenditures have been made: Current indebtedness of $5,300; redecorating and remodeling the church, $6,000; endowment fund increased $25,000. A subscription to the clergy pension fund of $16,000 has been made payable in installments. Trinity received help from many sources in its campaign three years ago to save it from abandoning its present location. An appeal has been sent out to old friends and to many others asking for future support, the new year beginning today.

Gov. Charles S. Whitman of New York will be the principal speaker today at the dedication of the Billy Sunday tabernacle in New York City. The Sunday evangelistic campaign begins on Easter.

The Rev. John M. Dean, pastor of the Second Baptist church, Jackson boulevard and South Lincoln street, will occupy his pulpit today for the first time since his returns from a three months' vacation on the Pacific coast. The pulpit has been supplied in his absence by the Rev. Percy W. Stephens. Mr. Stephens will be the speaker tomorrow morning at the regular meeting of the Baptist ministers in the Masonic temple.

The Rev. William H. Hartman will preach his first sermon today as pastor of the Advent English Lutheran church, North Karlov and Kamerling avenues. He came to Chicago from Monroe, Wis.

President Henry Churchill King of Oberlin college will be the speaker tonight at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall. President King has been connected with Oberlin college over forty years, as student, tutor, professor, dean, and president. He has been president for fifteen years. He has been given degrees by nine institutions and has lectured frequently on the university foundations of Harvard, Yale, and Columbia. He made a tour of the orient, speaking to thousands of students. His subject is one that will get close to the heart—"Friends, How to Make Them, Choose Them, and Keep Them." Charles S. Holt will give the Bible talk in place of Clifford W. Barnes, president of the club, who is ill. E. H. Adams of Adams, Crews, Bobb & Westcott will read the scripture lessons. The musical program will be in recognition of Palm Sunday.

Nemo
STANDARD OF CORSETS AND SERVICE

"GET THE REAL THING!"

NEMO Self-Reducing Corsets, introduced twenty years ago, were the first of our inventions embodying a hygienic service. They are still the only corsets that reduce the figure symmetrically, and give that hygienic support which means style with comfort, better health and looks. No other corset has ever been so popular. None has been so extensively and INEFFECTIVELY imitated.

The patented Nemo health features are, to many women, worth even more than the corset itself. You can get this service in NO OTHER corset.

When anybody tries to sell you a "reducing" corset that is not a Nemo, be a wise woman and insist upon having the "real thing."

There are many IMITATIONS of Nemo Self-Reducing Corsets, but NOT ONE SUBSTITUTE. "Nicknaming" an imitation to sound like "Self-Reducing" or "Nemo" doesn't make it a Nemo.

SELF-REDUCING SERVICE

MILLIONS OF STOUT WOMEN WEAR THESE THREE MODELS

No. 322—medium in all proportions
No. 320—same, but with lower bust
No. 326—similar, with fuller hip
All have semi-elastic Lasticurve-Back
All of fine coutil, in sizes 22 to 36
$3.50

These corsets represent at least twice as much value, in material and workmanship, as any other corsets at the same price.

BE A WISE WOMAN! Be sure it's a NEMO!

About Music and Musicians

By Frederick Donaghey

COMPOSERS interested in one hundred dollars are urged to try to get it by fitting a tune to Mr. Wilbur D. Nesbit's verses called "Your Flag and My Flag." The one who wins will be in on Mr. Nesbit's royalties, also. The specifications call for something "stirring"—something which would, perhaps, lend itself to a knife-and-fork obbligato in the College Inn after the theater, or might tempt Mr. Ziegfeld into having graceful girls in fleshings march to it against a new trick in blue backgrounds by Josef Urban. There is no time to waste, however: the Congress convenes tomorrow; Hiram Johnson is already in Washington, ready to do and say whatever seems most expedient to those dear people back in the Earthquake State; the administration's censorship has not yet been applied to Bryan; and Amos Pinchot is spending his own money to explain that there are things more important than national honor and patriotic songs. So, the tune must be in by the 15th instant.

"Why the lament for Arthur Middleton," asks a reader with respect to some Thursday lines on Frances Ingram's Wednesday recital, "when, unable to connect with Campanini, he found a berth in the Metropolitan?" The lament is because he did not: he is on the roster there, but only, it seems, as an honorary member. Gatti-Casazza has not used this clever Chicagoan in the season, so far as it is gone—and it is gone nearly all the way. My notion of good direction in merchandising opera is placing singers like Middleton, Miss Ingram, and Theo Karle, the tenor, in long-term servitude: among their best assets is ignorance of usage, tradition, and practice in the milieu. Neither Campanini nor Gatti-Casazza is in possession of so good a contralto as Ingram, a basso-cantante as Middleton, or a tenor of the "romantic" quality as Karle. A season of judicious casting and good stage-management would end with each of the three "up" in from ten to twenty operas, with the sense of répertoire developed, and stagewise from attrition with the routined veterans.

Gatti-Casazza is flaming with resentment against the use of the Metropolitan in the advertising of singers no longer connected with the enterprise: they, in the pursuit of engagements for concerts and recitals, find the reference to the Metropolitan to be good commerce in the smaller cities and in California. The Chicago venture is used in like fashion by its ex-members. Young women who never got anything better in the Auditorium than an occasional Valkyrie, a Rhinemaiden, or a sempstress in the workroom-scene of "Louise" fare forth billed as prima-donnas of the Chicago Opera Company.

Campanini is calling for volunteer contraltos for the chorus. Contraltos are useful in any opera-house, even in the roster of principals.

Myrtle Moses, listed as one of the Auditorium contraltos for two seasons, sends, from Macon, newspapers that call her great: she and another lyric celebrity, Vice-President Marshall, have been dividing headline honors in a Chautauqua revel down there. Operagoers who heard Madame Moses as Siebel and in "Königskinder" will be delighted to know of her success—in Georgia.

"Parsifal," following custom, will be given a special Good-Friday performance in the Metropolitan, with Matzenauer as Kundry.

Some of the music of "Betty," new in Chicago, was among the last work done by the late Paul Rubens, who took part in the making of a long list of the London musical farces. He wrote too much to be always good; but his music was invariably clean, refined, witty stuff, exposing a shrewd regard for the use to be made of it. To him and two or three other composers in the genre, like Leslie Stuart and Sidney Jones, has been due the immense vogue for more than two decades of the type of light musical piece which, in the mid-nineties, supplanted both operetta and burlesque in the affections of English and American theater-goers alike. To make up a competent catalogue of the good comic songs of the last twenty years would be to include among the first five or six "She Was a Miller's Daughter," one of Rubens' in "Three Little Maids."

Miss Mabel Garrison

She is among the singers of the Metropolitan Opera-House whom Frederick Stock is bringing to Chicago for the big music-festival, the final week of this month, in the Auditorium: Margarete Matzenauer, Frieda Hempel, and Clarence Whitehill are others. Miss Garrison is best known in this neighborhood for her participation last summer in the operas sung in Ravinia Park.

Miss May Peterson, who has twice given recitals in Chicago, has been engaged as one of next season's singers in the Metropolitan. Anna Fitziu—the comely figurante who was Anna Fitzhugh in "The Wizard of Oz"—is said to be bonded to return to that organization, with which she sang in Granados' "Goyescas." Maria Barrientos, the coloratura, has been engaged for a third season there: if Campanini realize his ambition next season of giving some performances in New York, she will find herself in close competition with Galli-Curci. Their mutual affection, from accounts, is comparable only to that of Bryan and Champ Clark.

Rosa Raisa, with the tenor Crimi and the baritone Rimini, are going to Havana to sing: the three are to come back to Chicago in November. Geraldine Farrar, also, is to sing in Havana after the Metropolitan season, which has three weeks to go. If she come to Chicago next season for the Opera, it will be for not more than two or three special performances: she has been drawing so well in New York that the Metropolitan is now of the belief that she is cheap at the price, although it permitted her to go sooner than pay that price when her first contract ran out, two years ago.

Francis Maclennan and Florence Easton [Mrs. Maclennan], of the Opera last season and this, are on the night of the 14th instant to take part in what is billed as "a grand operatic concert" in the Auditorium.

The Berkshire String Quartet has submitted itself to New York City, where the newspapers speak of it as a Chicago organization, although it takes its name from the Berkshire neighborhood of Massachusetts. Three of the four are, however, ex-members of the Chicago Symphony—Hugo Kortschak and Hermann Felber, the violins, and Emmerman Stoeber, the 'cello; they are, as an organization, the one which bore Mr. Kortschak's name; and a Chicagoan, Mrs. Coolidge, is behind them in the attitude which the late E. J. deCoppet maintained toward the Flonzaleys. The critics liked the Berkshires' playing well enough to argue that they made their appeal at a time entirely propitious because of the disbandment of the Kneisels.

Caruso is to make three appearances, next month, with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra—one each in Cincinnati, Toledo, and Pittsburg. His set program for this engagement is made up of "O Paradiso!" from "L'Africaine," "Una Furtiva Lagrima" from "The Elixir of Love," and—of course!—the Lament from "I Pagliacci." It is understood that, in making the contract, he promised to be liberal in the matter of encores.

Louise Homer, still one of the singers of the Metropolitan Opera, will be next week's soloist with the Orchestra: Händel, Gluck, Verdi, and Massenet will enlist her.

Percy Grainger has composed, or is at work on, "The Marching-Song of Democracy": it is scheduled for a first hearing next October in the Worcester Music-Festival.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. Y.

Gorgeous Pleasure Yachts Offered to Uncle Sam

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—In this mid-Lenten season the only social activity to relate can scarcely be called social activity at all, but merely activity of the social set. With one eye on Germany and the other on Washington, they are still industriously preparing for war. Five yachts have been given over. The young girls have raised $80,000. And the matrons have prepared a stock of bandages that are at present agitating New York—that is to say, they are cluttering up New York.

The only place available for storing them in that ridiculously crowded city is a vacant room of a trust building. For years men have been meeting in that room to frame up the various strategic moves in the financial war which has been waging for over a century, and which, I believe, is pretty generally accepted as the basis of this later war, in which bandages are necessary.

* *

Mrs. Harriman's Regret.

Of the yachts proffered perhaps the most sensational story is connected with the Sultana. It belongs to Mrs. Edward H. Harriman. She wrote a note offering it to the government, and she expressed the regret that she could not proffer her own services to the defense of her country. That is the way the women feel about this war. They are sorry that they cannot get out and fight.

Although this is the most dramatic proffer of a yacht, it is by no means the most dramatic yacht proffered. Vincent Astor has given the Noma, and you will realize at once, if you have followed this column of mine at all, that for the Noma to go to war would indeed constitute a picturesque ending to its picturesque career.

It is the boat that plied the seas like a living sorrowing thing, for its master, the late John Jacob Astor, when he was lost on the Titanic, and it is the boat that carried his body into New York harbor. While its master was living it went all over the civilized waters of the world, spending much time in India. In late years it was made over for the wedding journey of the son of this man, Vincent, and his bride in its rich, up to dateness of furnishings it will go to war, just as it has gone to social functions at Newport, carrying our country's richest merrymakers out into the blue waters of their favorite summering place.

* *

Another Corsair Donated.

The Corsair, owned by J. Pierpont Morgan, is another of the boats proffered to our government, and is the namesake of a boat that had a dramatic life. The old Corsair was transferred by the late Mr. Morgan to the government at the beginning of the Spanish-American war. Under another name she now—I was going to say "trains men," but perhaps I would better stick to unfigured language, and say that she is the training vessel on which our sailors get much of their early instruction.

The other boats that are given over by their rich owners for the protection of our country are the Viking of George F. Baker and the Kamawho by John Borden.

It is always natural to personify a vessel and this makes one think of the above facts as dramatic indeed. It is almost as if scions of the rich and great, and not merely the chattels of rich people, had given over themselves to defend us.

* *

Among the Recruits.

This last sentence is not intended to convey any hidden criticism of the scions of the rich and great. As I have already told you, the men are enlisting in numbers. The name of Vanderbilt appears many times among the recruits. Harold Vanderbilt, long time suitor of Eleanor Sears of Boston, and son of Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, is among them. He is the owner of a scout cruisers and is rear commodore of the New York Yacht club. In the regular service he is going to do scout patrol duty with the rank of lieutenant.

Griswold Lorillard of the famously rich house of that name is also enrolled. Richard Sears Jr. of Boston is enlisted as electrician, second class radio.

Speaking of the character of social doings in war times, a dinner was given the other night by Col. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at their house, 677 Fifth avenue, for Mr. and Mrs. James W. Gerard, who thus had an opportunity to meet for the first time since their return from Germany many old friends. There were sixty guests.

Newport, center of fashion, has closed the most remarkable of campaigns. They have succeeded in enrolling 2,500 members in the Red Cross. This places the home of fashion in the lead for membership over every other city in the country. Arthur B. Comerford promised that he would get 1,000 members in one week, and the smart set rallied round him to help make good his promise.

The fashionable young women there at this time have taken turns in the window at the headquarters as demonstrators of the work of the Red Cross. It has been one of the most unique exhibitions of history. Mrs. French Vanderbilt and Mrs. Livingston Beeckman have worked hard in pulling the membership up to this high figure.

Women Manage Unique Charity.

One benefit which has nothing to do with war charities and yet which possesses an unique appeal, is the Easter sale of goods made in the Old Men's Toy shop, which gives work to elderly men who can no longer find employment in their regular trades. This sale was held in one of the stores on the ground floor of the Astor Trust company's new building at Fifth avenue and Forty-second street. The old men made a number of flower boxes which were put on sale with the toys.

Miss Beatrice Bend was chairman of the managing committee, which included many well known women, a few of whom are Mrs. Willard D. Straight, Mrs. Payne Whitney, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. Arthur Iselin, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., Mrs. Courtlandt Nicoll, Mrs. F. Sheehan, Miss Ruth V. Twombly, Miss Mary Alexander, Miss Janetta Alexander, Miss Ethel Harriman, and Miss Margaret Wheelwright.

AVOID RICE POWDER PIMPLES

Never use a face powder that does not benefit your skin. Everybody knows white lead is a deadly poison; it causes blotches and irritations. To avoid white lead face powder many women use rice powder. Specialists have recently discovered that rice powder is almost as bad as white lead. Rice powder is starchy, like bread flour. It is quickly turned into a gluey paste by the moisture of the skin. This swells in the pores, clogs the cuticle, causing enlarged pores, blackheads and unsightly pimples. Prove this yourself. Ask a number of your friends who have enlarged pores, blackheads or pimples what face powder they use. Nine out of ten will say rice powder, or they use "Poudre de Riz," which is French for rice powder. If you value the charm of a lovely complexion stop rice powder. You can now get a powder that really beautifies your complexion and cannot injure the most delicate baby skin. This is the only face powder sold in America at any price guaranteed not to contain rice powder, bismuth, white lead or talcum. It stays on better than any other powder. The specialist who makes this improved powder uses an ingredient that doctors use to heal pimples. Every time you apply this pure powder you give your complexion a real beauty treatment. It helps to prevent enlarged pores, blackheads and pimples. It is so popular that prominent New York dealers find it hard to keep enough on hand to supply the big demand. Probably, because it is only 35c, everybody can afford to use it. You are sure to get this improved powder in Chicago from The Fair or Buck & Rayner's. You can use this same powder as a liquid powder. Just sprinkle a little dry powder in a dry saucer and apply it with a damp sponge. No other powder can be used both ways. When you use this delightful Powder Lamay (French L'Ame) you will be surprised to see how wonderfully it stays on. We will give one thousand dollars reward to any woman who can buy a better or purer face powder anywhere at any price. Out-of-town readers can order White, Flesh or brunette by mail of the American agent, Herbert Roystone, 106 East 19th St., New York.

THE RAILROAD RAIDERS

HELEN HOLMES

LEADING theatres everywhere will soon be showing this new photo-novel—"THE RAILROAD RAIDERS." HELEN HOLMES—the fearless film star who endeared herself to so many motion picture fans in such successes as "The Girl and the Game" and "A Lass of the Lumberlands"—is the heroine of this new chapter-play. "THE RAILROAD RAIDERS" will be presented in fifteen chapters—a new chapter each week for fifteen weeks. It is a spectacular story of railroad life—full of thrills—action—punch!

SEVERAL famous authors collaborated in writing this newest photo-novel—"THE RAILROAD RAIDERS." The story is by Frank H. Spearman. Many of the incidents that are depicted so vividly on the screen, actually occurred in real life on railroad lines of the great West. "THE RAILROAD RAIDERS" is filled with dare-devil exploits—feats performed at great risk to life and limb. It abounds in adventure, love, romance. If you enjoy a motion picture story with strong dramatic climaxes—a photo-novel that throbs with strong sensational incidents—be sure to see HELEN HOLMES in "THE RAILROAD RAIDERS." Ask the manager of your favorite theatre when it will be shown.

Questions and Answers

By High Speed

Owing to the large volume of inquiries for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them, readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Only routes and answers to questions of general interest will be published.

Can you explain in a simple manner what the difference is between amperage and voltage? What is the average voltage required to run an automobile?

CURIOUS, Stoughton, Wis.

A current of electricity flowing through a wire may be measured the same as a stream of water flowing through a pipe may be measured. The amount of water flowing through a pipe depends on the pressure, or head, and the volume of electricity that flows through a wire depends upon the pressure at which it flows. The pressure of an electric current or the force with which it flows is measured in volts. For example, a current of ten volts will flow with a pressure of that amount just as water in a pipe is forced through at a pressure of ten pounds. The volume of the electrical current, or the quantity of it, is measured in amperes. If you wish to go more deeply into this matter you will find an excellent hydrometer analogy in Dyke's Automobile and Gasoline Engine Encyclopedia. Usually the ignition system of a motor car is made so it will operate with a pressure of six volts. In other words, a six volt battery is required.

I am a constant reader of THE TRIBUNE'S automobile department and have been hoping to see an article on overhauling the car and putting it in proper condition for touring. I think all of your readers would be interested in something of the kind. Why not publish one?

SUBSCRIBER, North Judson, Ind.

Here's where we have a good one on you. You must have slipped a cog in your "constant" reading. An article entitled, "Now's the Time to Overhaul the Car and Here's How to Do It," appeared in "The Tribune" on Sunday, March 4.

◆

B. L. M., Chicago.

When you ask for a good route to Peoria you have me stumped. It is a pity that the two largest cities in the state are not linked by good roads, but the fact is that they are not. Some of the worst stretches of Illinois' notoriously wretched dirt roads are to be found between Chicago and Peoria. About the best route runs through Maywood, Naperville, Aurora, Plano, Sandwich, Somonauk, Wedron, Sulphur Lick Springs, Ottawa, Tonica, Mount Palatine, Magnolia, Varna, La Rose, Washburn, Low Point, Cazenovia, Metamora, and Germantown. The distance is 160.3 miles. The Starved Rock trail is followed to Ottawa. I would caution you against making this trip during wet weather.

◆

Of the various routes to the far west, which one do you consider the best? What route is the best marked, the Lincoln highway, the Santa Fé trail, the National Parks highway, or the Yellowstone trail? If you were going to make a trip to the Pacific coast yourself, which route would you choose?

TOURIST, Chicago.

"The Pacific coast" is a pretty broad term and the route to be followed should depend upon where one wanted to go. Usually on a trip of from 2,000 to 2,300 miles the tourist prefers the most direct route. If your destination is Los Angeles or San Diego follow the Santa Fé trail. If you itnend to visit San Francisco use the Lincoln highway. If Seattle is your objective point take the National Parks highway or the Yellowstone trail. All of these routes are well marked and easily followed. The best marked route from Chicago is the Lincoln highway, which is signboarded from Geneva, Ill., on. The best early season route is the Santa Fé trail. None of the other three routes should be traveled much earlier than June 1.

◆

Will you please publish the best automobile route from Chicago to Los Angeles, and also state where maps and full information may be secured?

L. H. J., Chicago.

The detailed route has been published in previous issues. The best route is the Santa Fé trail. Maps and information covering the section to Kansas City may be obtained by addressing Robert N. Carson, care Chicago, Kansas City and Gulf highway, Iowa City, Ia. For maps and information regarding the Santa Fé trail address Automobile Club of Southern California, Los Angeles, Cal.

What is the best method for testing out spark plugs and cylinders to determine which one is missing fire? I tried the scheme of using a screw driver placed against the top of the plug and the surface of the motor, but found it unsuccessful. How wide should the spark plug gap be to secure the best results?

N. E. K., Canton, O.

The screwdriver method is all right when properly carried out. Hold the tool lightly by the wooden handle [not the metal, or you will receive a shock] and place it in contact with both the plug metal and the cylinder head. The plugs that are firing right will show sparks at the points of contact, while the bad ones will not be affected when thus shorted. However, a much surer method is to open each pet cock in turn with the motor running. The cylinders that are all right will shoot heat, flame, and sparks through the pet cocks. The missing cylinders will not do this, and should be attended to. It will be found either that the spark plugs are defective or that a valve is sticking. The spark plug gap should be adjusted to one-thirty-second of an inch or so that an ordinary business card or a smooth dime may be barely inserted through it.

◆

I find that carbon accumulates rapidly in my motor nowadays. I had it all cleaned out a short time ago, but on removing one of the spark plugs discovered quite a bit of carbon deposit. What causes this and what simple thing can be done to clean it out without going to the expense of having it scraped and burned? I always rely on High Speed for dependable advice.

H. A. D., Elroy, Wis.

In these days of poor, low test gasoline it is a wonder we are able to run our cars at all without having special carburetors applied. Naturally a motor that is old and that has loose pistons and worn rings will carbonize more quickly than the engine of a new machine. However, the gasoline we are getting today is chiefly responsible for hard starting and rapid carbonization. Two cheap and fairly successful methods for removing carbon may be resorted to. One is to open the petcocks at night and pour in kerosene oil. Allow this to remain over night, and upon starting the motor in the morning most of the carbon will be ejected through the exhaust pipe. The other way is to start the motor running, and while racing the engine pour about a pint of water slowly into the auxiliary air intake of the carburetor. If you want to determine whether the carbon is being ejected, have some one hold a pail partially filled with water at the end of the exhaust pipe. If the carbon is being removed it will show up on the surface of the water.

◆

Being a new driver and consequently a green one, I am at a loss to know what kind of insurance should be placed on the machine. Will you please tip me off? Have been driving the new car a few days with a "license applied for" sign attached to front and rear. Is this all right? How should one go about it to procure a license?

NEOPHYTE, Chicago.

I infer from your question that you are violating the law by operating a machine for which no license has been asked. If you were not why should you ask how to proceed in applying for a license? The use of signs reading "license applied for" is a bad one and should be discouraged. No such signs are recognized by law and those using them are far more apt to attract the attention of the police than those who carry no tags at all. The law allows one to operate a car without a license tag for ten days after the date of purchase and during this time no sign or tag of any kind need be carried. The automobile editor of "The Tribune" will provide you with a state license application blank if you will send him a self-addressed stamped envelope. Fill out and forward this with a check for the required amount to Louis Emmerson, secretary of state, Sprnigfield, Ill. Most motorists carry fire, theft, and liability insurance and that is what I would advise. Property damage and collision insurance may be added, but the cost is high. Fire and theft insurance, of course, are self-explanatory. Liability insurance covers accidents to others and the companies defend all suits up to $5,000 for a single person and to $10,000 for more than one person. Property damage insurance covers damage to property other than one's own. Collision insurance covers losses or damage to your car caused by a collision.

◆

How should the carburetor be adjusted to secure the best results? I had a repairman adjust it, with the result that it works worse than before.

J. ANDERSON, Chicago.

About the first thing to learn about a carburetor is to let it alone as long as it is working properly. Can anybody tell me why nine out of ten automobile repairmen insist on "monkeying" with a well adjusted carburetor until they succeed in getting it all out of kilter? A well adjusted carburetor allows the engine to run smoothly, evenly, and slowly when the spark is retarded. It should pick up evenly and quickly when the spark is advanced and the throttle opened up. It also should drive the engine at high speed without spitting or coughing. If a popping noise occurs in the carburetor when the throttle is suddenly opened it indicates too lean a mixture. In this case open the needle valve slightly. If the motor runs sluggishly, with black smoke from the exhaust, the mixture is too rich and the needle valve should be slightly closed.

Gives Chicago the First Contest Board Representative to Be Accredited to a Single City, and Here He Is.

Leroy A Hillman

Mr. Hillman has just been appointed Chicago's representative on the contest board of the American Automobile association, and brings us the distinction of having the first official of this kind to be placed in charge of the affairs of a single city. Representatives heretofore have been assigned to a much wider territory.

You'll see a good deal of Mr. Hillman if your interest inclines to races and officially sanctioned automobile tests of one kind and another, for the duties of his position consist chiefly of being everywhere at once. He is a member of the Chicago Automobile club and local branch manager of the Hess-Bright company. Incidentally, he doesn't care much about being called Leroy—just "L. A." is his preference—and this is the first picture he has had taken in years.

Exhaust Echoes

by Sheppard Butler

Further reports on the performance of a Chalmers touring car in a twenty-four hour nonmotor stop traffic run in Chicago last week indicate that, despite the strain on the driving mechanism in starting more than 100 times on high speed [first and second had been removed from the transmission], there was no sign of wear either here or in the clutch. This was the finding of L. A. Hillman of the A. A. A. contest board, who observed the test. Forty-two gallons of gasoline and six quarts of oil were used, the average being fourteen miles to the gallon of fuel and 400 miles to the gallon of oil. To test the clutch a speed of forty-seven miles an hour was made at the Chicago speedway immediately after the traffic run—and this in the face of a high wind. "It certainly was a convincing demonstration," said James H. Levy, the Chalmers distributor in Chicago.

◆

An additional refinement is being incorporated in the new types of Prismolite anti-glare lenses for automobile headlights. This is a small bullseye placed just below the center of the lens and designed to throw a ray of clear light in front and slightly downward, illuminating the road without flashing a dangerous beam in the eyes of approaching motorists or pedestrians.

◆

"The necessity of tilting prices," says R. C. Rueschaw, sales manager of the Reo Motor Car company, "came in threatening guise, but it has proven to be the best thing that ever happened to the automobile industry. The public has become aware all at once, and for the first time, that automobiles are actually made and sold on a smaller percentage of profit than almost any other commodity. The net result has been to place the industry on a firmer foundation in the minds of buyers."

A New-Size Mitchell

Offers An Amazing Value—See This Mitchell Junior

Mitchell standards—Mitchell over-strength—and nearly all the Mitchell extras in a roomy, 40-horsepower, $1150 Six

A 7-passenger car, to be roomy, must measure 127 inches from hub to hub. To have sufficient power under every condition, it must have a 48-horsepower motor. The larger Mitchell is built to fit those requirements, after 14 years of experience.

But he says a 5-passenger car is just as roomy with a 120-inch wheelbase. And that 40 horsepower is enough.

So this year he brings out Mitchell Junior—a smaller Mitchell Six—for those who prefer this size.

Still It is Extra-Large

This smaller car is not skimped. Note its length and power, as compared with other cars

It has the same over-strength as the big car, the same added luxury, and nearly the same extra features. It looks like the big car, reduced by seven inches.

You never saw such value in a high-grade car. It will give you a new conception of what Mitchell efficiency means.

Hundreds of Extras

The Mitchell claims your favor because of its hundreds of extras. These extras, on this year's output, will cost us $4,000,000. They cost you nothing because we save that in our factory cost.

They include

31 unique features—
100 per cent over-strength—
24 per cent added luxury.

Their reason is this: John W. Bate has built and equipped this model plant to build this one type economically. He has cut our factory cost in two. He is building this car for vastly less than anyone else could build it.

The saving goes into these extras. First, to give you a lifetime car. Second, to give you a complete car. Third, to give you a marvel of luxury and beauty.

See the results. See how much more Mitchell gives than others. It will win you to this car.

The Visible Extras

See the 31 features which nearly all cars omit. Things like a power tire pump, a dashboard engine primer, reversible headlights, etc. Every one of these 31 extras is something that you want.

See the extra beauty. We have this year added 24 per cent to the cost of finish, upholstery and trimming. That is saved in our new body plant, which we occupy this year.

The Double Strength

But our greatest advantage is double strength in every vital part. Our margin of safety used to be 50 per cent. Part by part, in the past three years, we have made it 100 per cent.

Now over 440 parts are made of toughened steel. Many parts are vastly oversize. All parts which get a major strain are built of Chrome-Vanadium.

We are building a lifetime car. A car built and tested for 200,000 miles of service. Not a spring has broken—not one Bate cantilever spring—since this standard was adopted.

Come see these new cars now.

MOTORDOM MAKES READY FOR WAR.

Automobile Men Ready, But Roads Present Problem

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 31.—[Special.]—The automobile makers and the automobile users of the United States are already mobilized for war in case war comes, according to Howard E. Coffin, member of the advisory commission of the council for national defense and vice president of the Hudson Motor Car company of Detroit.

Mr. Coffin, who has been handling the industrial organization work of the advisory commission, in an interview with THE TRIBUNE correspondent today, said the government can expect great things from its automobile makers and users.

"We had a proof as to what the factories could do during the Mexican mobilization last year," he said. "The Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the American Automobile association, and the Society of Automotive Engineers at that time all offered their services to the governemnt. The offer was accepted and automobile makers and engineers were sent down to the border, where they studied the needs of the army, especially in the matter of motor trucks. Then they went home and turned out the machines in quick time."

Cars Plentiful; Highways Lacking.

According to Mr. Coffin, the United States has motor transportation resources far in excess of those of the rest of the world combined.

"We have 3,200,000 cars in operation in this country at the present time," he said, "while there are only 800,000 all told in the entire world outside of the United States.

"Our chief difficulty here will not be with the manufacturers of cars or the owners of cars, but with roads. Europe is far ahead of us in its systems of highways. We have lots of good roads in the various states now, but many of their ends don't match up. If we can get a national system of military highways, no one can even imagine of what tremendous service our automobile resources would prove in time of war."

When the question of mobilizing the transportation resources of the country was recently taken up by the council for national defense, Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, was made chairman of the committee to handle it. After but a brief survey of the automobile division, Mr. Willard turned his attention to the knotty problems of railroad, water, and team transportation. He said he could well afford to pass up the automobiles for the time being, inasmuch as they were all ready for service on a minute's notice.

A. A. A. Membership Ready.

Their readiness is due largely to the mobilization last year and also to cooperation between the 102 or 103 makers of cars in the country, the 2,500 or more members of the Society of Automotive Engineers, and the thousands upon thousands of individual owners of cars.

It is estimated that every one of the cars belonging to the more than 140,000 members of the American Automobile association would be at the country's service immediately after a state of war was declared to exist. The officers of the association would turn their attention completely to government work in the event of war and mobilize their cars at once.

Automobile factories will not be used to manufacture munitions. They will have enough to do to turn out cars to meet the demand for transportation facilities, according to the council for defense. In the opinion of the council there are enough munition factories in the United States at the present time to meet every need of the country, no matter how pressing.

Right at this time the council is carrying on a campaign to standardise munitions. Frank Scott of Cleveland, O., is in charge of it. The council has a complete list of all munition plants as well as a knowledge of their output. It is now working on plans so that rush orders of government work can be divided up among them and delivered just as fast as it is humanly and mechanically possible to turn out the work.

Every Industry Mobilized.

The advisory commission will serve as a sort of a go-between for the munition makers and the war department in all cases of difference of opinion, and the standardization committee of the commission will handle such differences.

"Quantity production is the essential thing in the manufacture of munitions during a war," said Mr. Coffin, "and we are bending every effort to bring about the greatest quantity production ever dreamed of. I am sure our munition standards board will succeed in this work."

The council for defense has been aided greatly in its work of mobilizing the industries of the country by the census of manufactures taken last year by the naval consulting board under the direction of Mr. Coffin. More than 2,700 different plants have been listed as of use to the government in time of war and by reference to that census now the governmental officers can tell just what to depend upon particular plants for. The standards board of the council for defense, however, is working on a plan to coördinate the work of all plants of a similar nature, so that there never can be any question as to the government's ability to get what it wants when it wants it.

In demonstrating the prowess of the Liberty car, which he sells in Chicago, Otto C. Owen has found a much favored "stunt" in placing a comparatively inexperienced woman driver at the wheel and letting her negotiate the difficult approach to the Rush street bridge. Not only do the feminine motorists get across without trouble, he says, but they usually declare, when it's over, that they enjoyed the experience.

Inter-City Match Contestants to Face Stiff Rules

Samuel E. Hibben of Chicago, chairman of the committee which is arranging details for the intercity team reliability contest which is to start from Buffalo July 17, has sent from New York the first allotment of entry blanks and rules governing the big contest.

The rules show one or two radical departures from those which have governed Chicago interclub events in the past. Chief of these is a reduction of the time limit at controls from six to two minutes. In other words, drivers checking in more than one minute ahead of time or one minute late will be penalized. This means that it will take expert driving to escape without black marks.

There also are several severe disqualification penalties for violation of speed laws, leaving the course, discontinuing as a contestant, passing the pacemaker, or failure to report at a night control within twelve hours of schedule. Disqualification means a penalty of 1,000 points.

It now seems possible that Denver, Omaha, and Minneapolis will join the list of entries.

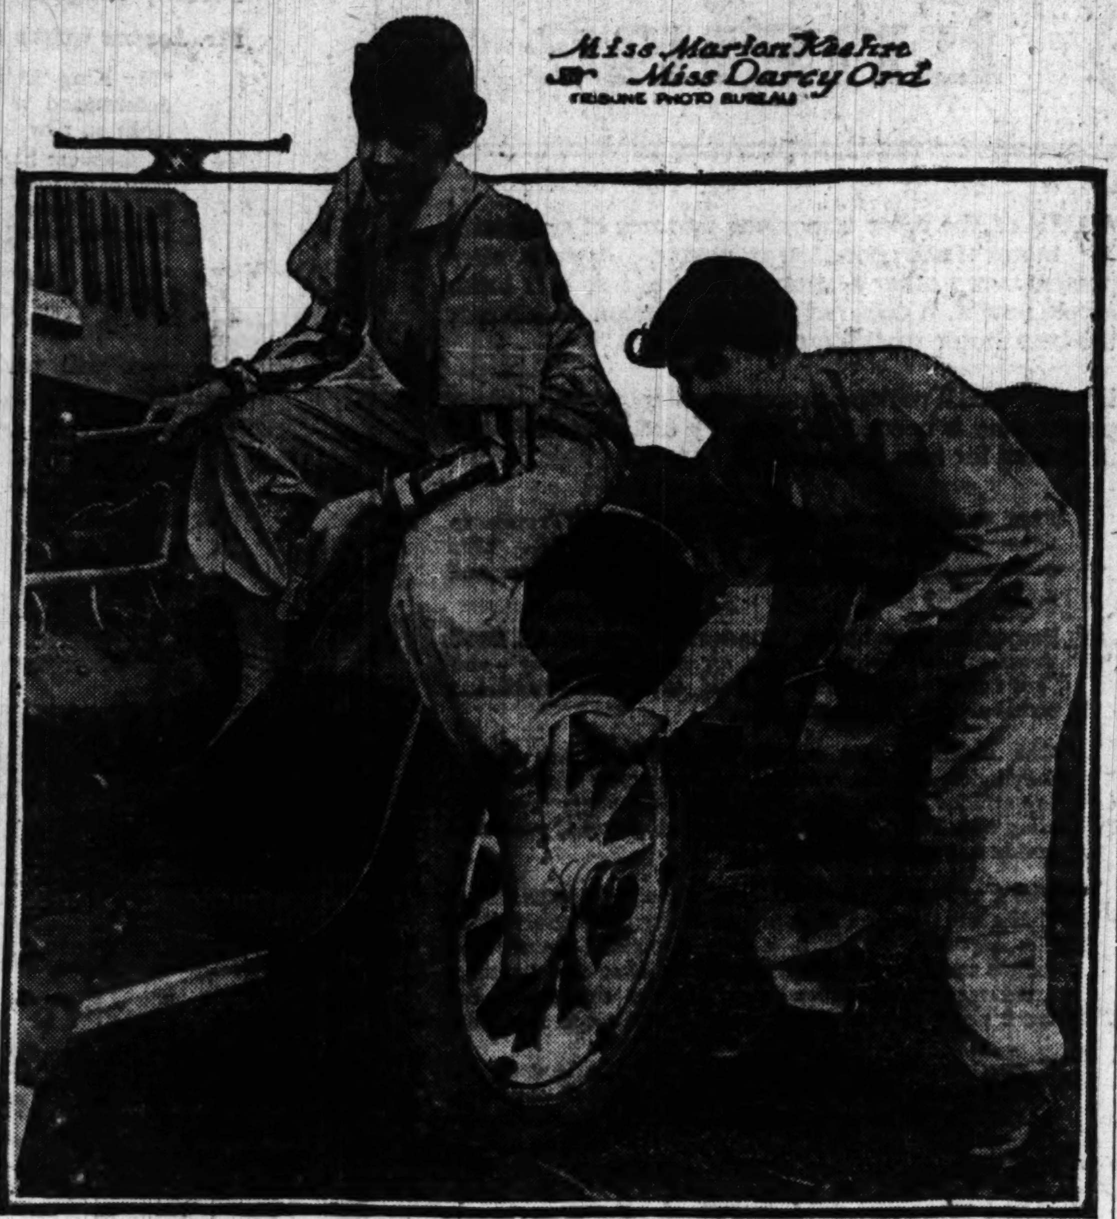
Chicago Women, Members of Navy League Special Service Detachment, Learning Repair Work in Preparation for Possible Military Duty.



Members of the women's special service detachment of the Navy league donned overalls last week for their first instruction in the intricacies of automobile repair work and their first tests in quick starting and engine control. Miss Marion Keehn, secretary of the detachment, and Miss Darcy Ord passed the latter with flying colors.

About sixty women have joined the corps, which is headed by Mrs. J. B. Sardy of Oak Park. The volunteers propose to serve as drivers of ambulances or other military motors and to be able to repair the cars.

DOUBLE CLUTCHING

Know What It Is? Here's How C. H. Claudy Describes It in "Motor Life."

"MY friend here," said the old timer, "has a —— and he can't change from high to second without a grind unless he knows how to do double clutching."

"What in time is that?"

"Double clutching is a driver's trick. It's commonly used on a bad hill in getting into second from high at fifteen to twenty miles an hour. You give a slight push on the clutch pedal, step on the accelerator, push the lever forward, let in the clutch momentarily as your gears disengage—which, which, with the speeding motor, speeds up your gears—then instantly out with the clutch again, home with the lever into second, in with the clutch, and there you are! It takes practice, but it is pretty when well done, and belongs to good driving."

Chicago Motor Trucks Listed for Army Work

By Sheppard Butler

HUNDREDS of motor trucks—proved by the European war to be the backbone of any military organization—would be ready for instant service in Chicago and the surrounding territory if they were needed tomorrow.

Through the quiet activity of the Chicago Automobile Trade association, virtually every truck owner in the city received inquiry blanks last week, asking whether he would volunteer the use of his machines in the event of military emergency and calling for such detailed information as will make Chicago's resources in this direction available at a moment's notice.

Just how many trucks could be placed in the government service hereabouts is not yet known, for the replies are still coming in and the work of tabulation is by no means complete. Enough owners already have enrolled in the volunteer list, however, to make it certain that the reserve fleet will be a huge one.

Under the direction of L. Markle, chairman of the association's special mobilization committee, the automobile men are asking all owners to reply to these questions concerning 1915, 1916, and 1917 models:

How many trucks could you loan for government service?

Of what make are they?

What is their capacity?

What is the chassis type?

What is the body type?

What tires do you use?

Would you place your trucks in service should the need arise?

Would you supply expert drivers?

Names, addresses, and telephone numbers of all owners are being listed for quick reference and available fleets of individual makes are being grouped, so that units could be formed with as little red tape as possible.

Thousands of Trucks Needed.

Should an army of more than 2,000,000 men be called into being in the United States, as has been planned, the motor car transport of food and supplies alone would demand a tremendous number of cars.

An indication of the need was given the Society of Automotive Engineers recently by Capt. Gordon Johnston, U. S. A. According to the army man, a division of 22,665 men needs sixty-seven motor trucks for food and supply transport. This means that 6,700 cars would be needed for this service alone, to say nothing of the thousands of machines for other purposes.

The great difficulty in the military use of automobiles in the United States is not in obtaining them, for there are more than enough, but in the fact that of the 535 makes of American automobiles hardly any two have interchangeable parts. This means that commanders of motor car units, unless they should be given entire units made up of single makes, will face a maze of confusion in trying to carry spare parts enough to provide against inevitable breakage.

Germany foresaw this long before the present war and directed that all cars made in Germany be built on government specifications. When August, 1914, came they were ready. Efforts in this direction have been made in the United States, but they have hardly begun to have an effect. About the best that can be done is the making of canvasses such as the one now under way in Chicago with a view to grouping the various makes as far as possible.

Mobilizing the Motorists.

Owners of motor trucks are by no means the only Chicago automobilists who are getting ready. The Chicago Automobile club, through its military committee, began last week a canvass of its entire membership, enrolling such motorists as volunteered in the first unit of an automobile reserve corps under the direction of Capt. Thomas Francis Howe, I. N. G., a member of the club. This corps is designed to give quick emergency aid to the military authorities whenever it may be needed. Its enrollment is not confined to club members, the lists being open to any automobile owner who will lend his car and his services or those of a driver.

A number of Chicago women, like their sisters in other cities, have formed a unit of their own and are holding weekly sessions for instruction in tire changing, repair work, and the other arts required of expert drivers.

Motorists Supply Government with Data on Those Which Are Available for Military Purposes.

UNDER the direction of Chairman George C. Diehl of the American Automobile association good roads board, a special edition of the A. A. A. transcontinental map has been prepared containing the present main travelable interstate and intrastate roads which might be made to fit into a country-wide system for military purposes. One of these maps goes to President Wilson, one to Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott, one to Brig. Gen. Joseph E. Kuhn of the war college division, and a fourth to Director W. S. Gifford of the council of national defense.

While many A. A. A. state and local clubs throughout the country have offered their services for mobilization purposes, the exact manner in which they would fit into the plans of the war department has not been definitely decided upon. Announcement as to this is expected in the near future.

WINTON SIX

A Car Personally Your Own

To possess a beautiful motor car, created expressly to your own personal taste, is a rare and continuing delight—a delight that most motor car owners have never experienced.

SUCH cars are especially few in America because their successful design and completion depend upon a fine art that is familiar to few automobile manufacturers in this country. To satisfy the canons of taste, and to combine beauty of form and color with mechanical excellence require exceptional skill and a practiced artistic sense.

That art is at your service when you purchase a Winton Six. Through long, specialized experience in producing precisely the desired effects—thanks to the continued patronage and co-operation of discriminating buyers—our artists and artisans are prepared to create for you, in every detail, just the car that will most pleasantly embody your personal desires. Trail Named for Pioneer to Link North and South

FROM Canada to the Gulf of Mexico there will be a new motor road, mapped and market, by early fall if the plans of highway enthusiasts along the so-called Daniel Boone trail are carried out.

"We have made a fine start on the work in Minnesota and Iowa," says President J. B. McHose of the trail organization in a recent announcement, "but we have not as yet pressed the campaign in Missouri for want of time. As soon as the weather settles I expect to go over the Missouri trail from the Iowa line down to St. Louis. In the meantime I am requesting the directors in every county to get busy. We hope to make this Daniel Boone trail the leading highway from north to south."

The route between Minneapolis and St. Louis has been decided, but below St. Louis two routes are under investigation, one going directly south by way of Popular Bluff to Memphis and the other to the eastward along the Mississippi river by way of Cairo, Ill. From Memphis the projected line runs straight to Jackson, Miss., where there are two branches, one going to New Orleans and the other to Mobile. The contemplated trail north of Minneapolis and St. Paul is direct to Duluth, and then along the western shore of Lake Superior to the Canada line.

The name Daniel Boone is one calculated to inspire enthusiasm among the people of the middle west. Boone was a mighty hunter. With his trusty fowling piece he shot deer, bear, and Indians, and had adventures which were a source of never ending delight for the small boy who read about them. The road through northern Missouri follows what the early day path blazers called the "Bee Trace." It is along the ridge or backbone of the state. Tradition has it that Boone and his fellow hunters traveled this trail in the quest of honey and adventure. Close by, at one point, is the cabin where Boone lived when he first went to Missouri.

This summer it is planned to locate the trail from end to end and to establish it by substantial markers. The sign now in use on some parts of the trail contains the name, "The Daniel Boone trail," on a 10x30 inch enamel steel plate, in black and white; the letters D and B are a monogram on the marker.

E. F. Kirchberger, president of the Commercial Truckmobile company, reports that the eastern demand for his product—an attachment for Fords and other light cars—is so great as to make distribution arrangements a matter of grave importance. Mr. Kirchberger has just returned from a trip through the New England states, where he made distribution plans for that territory.

A novel type of car is being built by the Willys-Overland company. This is a Willys-Knight "staggered door" sedan, the door on the right hand side being located in the middle of the car, for passengers, and that on the left at the front, for the driver.

Formation of a national service managers' organization has been proposed, largely as a result of the Chicago association which came into being a week or two ago. E. M. EXHAUST ECHOES

Thermostatic control of engine cooling is one of the new features of the 1917 Marmon. The thermostat is a simple device designed to keep the temperature of the water between 125 and 175 degrees all the time the motor is running.

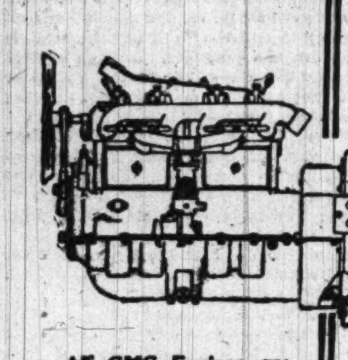
Touring note—G. W. Stratton, who sells Kings in Chicago, drove to Detroit and back with Mrs. Stratton last week. "Coming back," he reports, "we were up to the hubs is mud almost all of the way. We helped tow four others out of the mud and had to be pulled out ourselves twice. I never saw such bad roads in my life.

C. H. Dashiell, Chicago distributor of Dodge Bros. cars, has received word that one Nat Friedman of Perth, West Australia, has broken another overseas road record in a Dodge. Friedman drove from Perth to Kalgoorlee over rough and sandy roads, making an average of 28.4 miles an hour for 365 miles and using a gallon of petrol to every 25.2 miles.

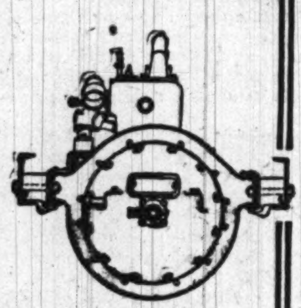
GMC GENERAL MOTORS COMPANY TRUCKS

Engine

TRUCK TALK
No. 12



All GMC Engines are simple and can readily be understood and cared for by the average driver. All adjustable parts are easily accessible.



GMC Engines are mounted on a three point suspension, and are always protected against strain.

ONE of the most important features of successful motor truck operation is power. A truck may possess every other desirable feature, but if it lacks ample power, it does not fulfill its mission and is not the best motor truck investment.

Every GMC Truck possesses abundant power—more power than is needed in ordinary daily service—but it is there for two purposes.

First, because having abundant power, GMC Trucks are never pushed to their utmost in ordinary work. This cuts down the operating cost, the depreciation and maintenance cost.

Second, because having abundant reserve power, GMC Trucks have ample power for any emergency—and "get there"—regardless of road conditions—without strain or injury to the truck.

The Engines used on all GMC models are of the 4-cylinder, 4-cycle, vertical, water-cooled type. They are attached to the frame on a 3-point suspension; traveling over rough or uneven roads the engine is protected and is not subjected to strain.

The Engines on all GMC Trucks are built with larger shafts and bearings than are generally used on trucks of like capacity. This is a very important feature and means much to the truck owner, for over-size bearings and larger shafts assure longer life for the truck, the truck requires less attention, and costs less to maintain.

The water-cooling system on GMC Trucks is a special GMC feature. It is practically impossible to over-heat a GMC Truck in any climate or altitude. Each Engine is provided with a pump that assures positive circulation even under most extreme conditions.

Owing to the various sizes of Engines used on the various GMC models, it is obviously impossible to go into technical details of each model at this time.

We urge you to give us the opportunity to explain the GMC Engine and other GMC units in detail, and welcome the opportunity to tell you of the many distinctive features and improvements on GMC Trucks, which are the result of years of practical truck building experience—features which make GMC Trucks the most practical trucks built—from the standpoint of owner and driver.

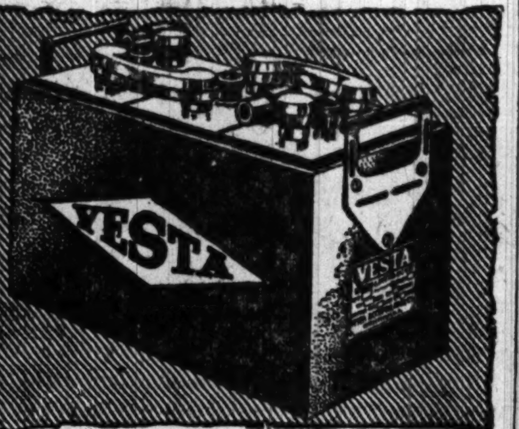
Batteries are Different!



Why VESTA is the Most Wonderful Battery in the World

Three great Vesta triumphs—the most important starting battery improvements in the last twenty years—make Vesta the most wonderful starting and lighting battery in the world.

These three exclusive, patented Vesta discoveries give the Vesta double life. They prevent the various forms of short circuits, the most common cause of battery troubles. They endow the Vesta with greater efficiency, service, economy and satisfaction. Thus is the Vesta different from all other batteries.

The Three Great Triumphs

Vesta scored the first great triumph with Vesta Indestructible Isolator, an ingenious device, which locks the plates apart and prevents short circuits.

Next Vesta announced a second remarkable feature—Vesta Impregnated Wooden Mats, which prevent "treeing" and its disastrous consequences.

Now comes Vesta's third great discovery—the use of Titanium, a rare mineral which greatly prolongs the life of the battery. Titanium enters into the lead plates, hardening them and giving them longer life. It also remains in the battery solution, precipitating minerals and impurities in solution and adding vastly to the efficiency of the battery.

No Other Battery Can Use Them

EIGHT CYLINDER

Year In and Out

THIS is a photograph of Arnold Joerns, 7662 Sheridan Road, President of Arnold Joerns Company; Director, Advertising Association of Chicago; and Secretary of the National Security League.

Mr. Joerns writes of his King "Eight":

"My King 'Eight' has been driven over 20,000 miles and I have determined to keep the old car for at least another year. It looks so new I won't even have to paint it.

"I use a car hard—every day—rain or shine—summer and winter. For over four months it hasn't required an adjustment of any kind. There's real satisfaction in driving this economical, overpowered, obedient, wear-proof car."

AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

Tackling That Glare Problem; One Man's View

THE most troublesome motoring problem of the moment continues to be that which has to do with dangerous glare from automobile headlights. Nobody seems able to agree as to just what should be done, and, lacking advice from the experts, state legislatures and city aldermen are more or less at sea.

In Chicago the ordinance simply requires that you shan't "blind, dazzle, or confuse" the other fellow. That this is ambiguous is shown by the experience of many Chicago motorists who have equipped their headlights with devices officially approved by the police department, only to be stopped at frequent intervals by crossing "cops" with warnings that their lights are too bright.

Among the manufacturers of special lenses a majority are using one of two methods of glare control—diffusion, or softening, of the light days, and deflection, or confinement, of the beams to the surface of the road. At a recent meeting of the metropolitan section of the Society of Automotive Engineers the experts devoted themselves to trying to determine which method is best.

The subject was presented in a comprehensive paper by Alden L. McMurtry, a member of the society, who has devoted much time and study to the headlight problem. A lively discussion followed his address, but no formal conclusion was reached and neither of the principles considered was officially approved.

Mr. McMurtry frankly advocated the deflection principle and urged that it be made the basis of future legislation. "The confusion incident to the problem of regulating glaring headlights," he said, "is caused by the attempt to discover a method or means for the absolute elimination of glare without reducing to any appreciable extent the road illumination. This is practically impossible, as the ultimate solution of the problem must result in a compromise between the value of the road illumination and the glaring effect produced by the lamps. For instance, if the diffusion principle is adopted there cannot be sufficient illumination on the road without causing disastrous glare effects when near the car.

"If the deflection principle is adopted a certain amount of momentary glare due to the position of the car must be permitted in order to gain the advantage of proper road illumination while at the same time (by limiting the height of the beam of light) preventing the effect of glare probably over 85 per cent of the time the headlamps are in use. In suggesting any means for glare reduction which may possibly be adopted in future laws, another thing must be remembered: the effectiveness of the law depends upon the manner in which it can be enforced by the average officer. Therefore, simplicity of regulations is much to be desired. The simplest method of determining glare reduction will be the most effective because of the greater probability of universal enforcement.

"At the same time in seeking simplicity and freedom from highly technical requirements it is unwise to allow regulations to drift into vagueness or ambiguity. The motorist wants to know precisely the limitations of the law. While he has every intention of complying with the law, he also wants the best road illumination the law will permit. A source of light of one candlepower will cause the effect of glare if of sufficient intrinsic brightness. Therefore the specification 'must not glare or dazzle' is most vague. Until we have a standard unit of glare measurement we must not tolerate such vague requirements.

"The principle of the limitation of light zone has been indorsed by various organizations, including the Society of Automotive Engineers. It is the most effective from the motorist's point of view because it reduces glare with the least loss of useful light, and in most applications increases the amount of light upon the roadway. It is the method most readily covered by a simple and easily understood ordinance, an ordinance which is not only effective in accomplishing the desired result, but with which it is easy to comply and which it is correspondingly easy to enforce. When once properly applied any change of voltage or candle power of bulb (providing proper focus is maintained) does not alter its effectiveness. Bulbs of almost any candle power may be used without altering in any way the light distribution or glare reduction.

"Unlike the diffusion method, there is less glaring light near the car, and this is an important item where two cars are passing on a narrow road. Limiting the light zone will not, however, prevent glare when the car is passing over an uneven road, or over the top of a hill. One of the greatest factors of safety in night driving is the projection of light some distance in front of the car. It acts as a warning to others approaching the highway from intersecting roads of the presence of an automobile coming in another direction.

"The projection of light at the side of the road when the automobile is making a turn is a warning to others around the turn that a car is approaching. With the diffusion method this factor of safety is eliminated.

"If the percentage of momentary glare from lamps is deflected so that the light zone is limited, on a level roadway, to 42 inches from the ground, is too great, it may be lessened by limiting the height to 40 or even to 38 inches from the road at a given distance from the car.

"No mention has been made of any devices designed to reduce or eliminate glare, for we must first decide after a thorough discussion which principle of glare reduction will be most effective. With that problem solved we may then consider the various methods based upon the approved principle and later on the devices themselves.

"I do not mean to infer that there are not on the market today effective devices for glare reduction, but I prefer that the subject be discussed with due regard to the order of importance of its respective phases; that is, we must first select the best principle upon the basis of which the design is to be carried out; we must then select the most efficient method of applying this principle; and we must finally see that the method is such that an ordinance can be framed to render it effective. The last requirement means that the simplest form of test must be applicable so that there can be no question regarding its enforcement by officers of average intelligence.

"While there are but two principles to be discussed, there are over four million motor car owners awaiting some definite information regarding the reduction of the effect of glare."

GOOD-BY, STAGE COACH!

Picturesque Old Timers in Yellowstone Park to Be Replaced This Summer by Fleet of Swift Ten and Seven Passenger Touring Cars.

The Old

The New

Once more the romance of other days gives way to the utilitarian efficiency of the gasoline motor. When Yellowstone park is opened for the 1917 season on June 20 folks will look in vain for those careening relics of pioneer times which used to take the sightseers about.

More than 600 old stage coaches have passed into the discard and will be replaced by 175 big ten and seven passenger touring cars of a special design. These are being equipped with folding tops which permit an unobstructed view of the scenery and at the same time furnish whatever protection may be needed. Hand baggage will be carried on special racks installed for the purpose.

Yellowstone park, with its 400 miles of roads, was first opened to automobiles in August, 1915. The stage coaches remained, however, and the usual comment of motorists as they left the park was to the effect that "it would be fine if those pesky dreadnaughts weren't always getting in the way."

Hungarian Makers to Adopt American Ideas

"Automobile and aeroplane motor manufacturers in Hungary have formed an organization as a subdivision of the National Union of Hungarian Manufacturers," says a consular report. "Prior to the war the automobile industry was not flourishing, but war orders have greatly strengthened it, and the association just formed is for the purpose of protecting the interests of the manufacturers and for dealing with questions that will come up after the war, also during the war, to represent the manufacturers at the ministry of war.

"It is possible that American methods will be followed and quantity production of motor cars begun."

Tax Autos by Weight.

WHEELING, W. Va.—Automobiles now pay licenses by the pound in West Virginia. The law fixes the licenses at $10 a year for autos weighing 2,000 pounds or less and 25 cents additional for each 100 pounds over that. Inasmuch as few autos weigh under 2,000 pounds, practically all will be compelled to pay license by weight.

Booming Arkansas New State Highway

CAMDEN, Ark.—County Judge W. F. Tate of Ouachita county and County Judge A. D. Pope of Columbia county will preside over a number of meetings in towns along a proposed state highway from Camden to Magnolia, to be built with federal aid. The first meeting was held in McNeil some days ago and the next will be held at Stephens today. Both county judges have appointed delegates from their counties to attend the meetings. The proposed road will run through Buena Vista, Ogamaw, Stephens, and McNeil, passing through a fertile and thickly settled portion of the two counties. A healthy interest is being taken by people along the route, and the indications are that the road will be a certainty in the near future.

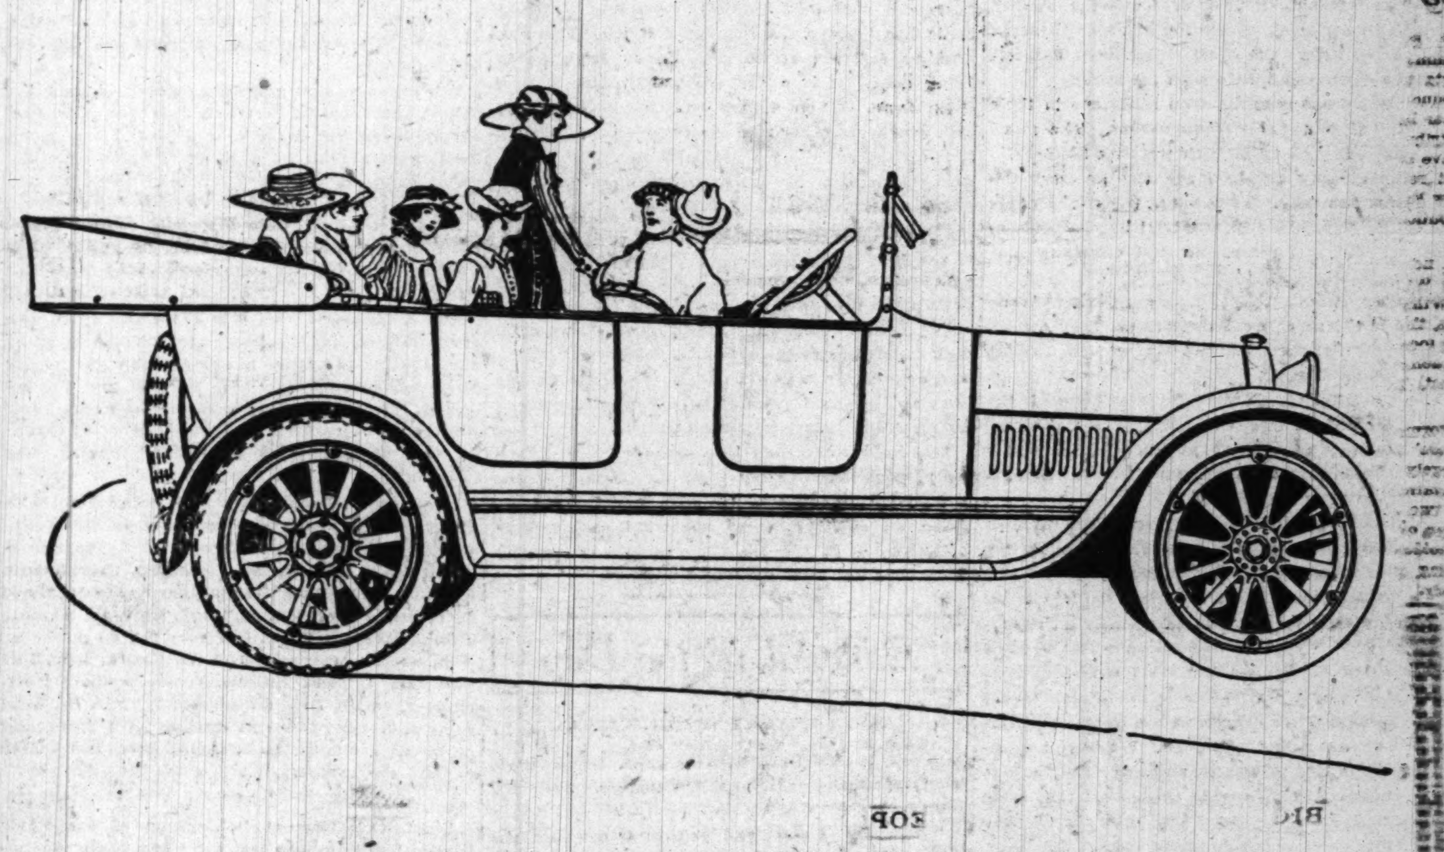
Studebaker



The Studebaker SIX
—An Evolution

THE Series 18 Studebaker Six is an evolution. It is the result of four years' concentrated study of the performance of 300,000 Studebaker Automobiles in the hands of owners.

It is even better than the Series 17, for it embodies ninety distinct improvements of mechanical construction, convenience and comfort.

It has been refined to a point of practical perfection.

It is the lightest car in ratio to its power on the market.

In ratio to power it is the most economical in consumption of gasoline.

Its weight is scientifically distributed, its balance refined to such a point that a single set of tires frequently runs from 8,000 to 12,000 miles.

The roadability, the easy riding qualities of Studebakers are recognized by all experienced motorists.

The manufacturing methods applied in the production of the Studebaker Six have been developed by four years' continuous experience with single basic design. This fact alone has enabled Studebaker to keep its price remarkably low.

Last year the entire Studebaker output was sold early in August. Late comers were disappointed. This year, too, the production is limited. Be wise—place your order now.

"THE TWILIGHT OF THE KINGS."

When the phantasmagoria of European war came out of the demonic shadows and took form as a human reality THE TRIBUNE printed an editorial called "The Twilight of the Kings," now republished in the adjoining column in this issue.

The thought that the republic marched east in Europe did not survive the first six months of the war. It became a bit of rhetoric, without intelligence, seemingly without proper conception of the forces at work in Europe.

Peoples did not present themselves as sacrifices to Moloch, but as willing instruments in the scheme of their nation's destiny. Asmodeus, as he walked in armor, was the popular will. The method might be hideous, but the spirit which offered the sacrifice became glorified. In the magnificence of effort the war became a people's war. And yet the rhetorical prophecy has been fulfilled.

It is the twilight of the kings—the imprisoned czar is longing for his flowers in the Crimea and begging that his son may be allowed to escape confinement. There is now a revolution in Spain. Italy is rocking. The hornets are swarming in Austria-Hungary. Germany faces a deep and rapid evolution, if not, indeed, full circle revolution.

The Atlantic liberalism of the western nations is going east. It has done what the horizon blue of the French infantry and the khaki of the British have not been able to do. It has jumped the German lines and reconstructed the absolutely ruled empire of Russia.

The processes and progress of the war are dwarfed by the already achieved results of it. No military fact is so tremendous as the fact of the imprisoned czar. The arrest of Nicholas Romanoff meant more to humanity than any dozen battles fought in the war—more than the battle of the Marne, the defeat of the Russians in East Prussia, the fall of Warsaw, the retirement from Gallipoli, the overrunning of Roumania.

A war which sought to change maps is changing human institutions. By a violent effort humanity reaches another level. Evolution has been theatric. It has acted before the eyes. Liberalism has followed the cannon and gone with the sword.

The old Europe is dead. The kings are in their twilight. Absolutism is disappearing. The mandarins are being shorn of their peacock feathers.

Results already obtained are the greatest the world ever has seen. They make the social progress of the Napoleonic wars trivial by comparison. They are killing medievalism and crowning modernity.

Germany cannot resist it. Prussianism is as dead as if the allies were in Berlin. They can do nothing for Germany that Germany is not ready now to do for herself.

The republics of Europe have conquered the monarchies of Europe. Democracy is the victor and autocracy already is at its chariot wheel. There can be no peace without victory. Democracy already has the victory.

Europe has gone leagues by suffering when it might have gone only inches without suffering. There is no dead soldier whose death has not this compensation. And it is a wise democracy, a wiser democracy than we know in this American republic.

It is an intelligent, sound minded, sound muscled democracy which knows the faults of the democratic system. It has accepted the ideals and principles and has made them work. We have accepted the ideals and principles and have not tried to make them work. We trust them as if they were automatic. Europe, new born, knows that they work as intelligent beings apply them.

Even as the republics have conquered the autocracies, the autocracies have saved the republics. France and Great Britain are not content with the inefficient individualism of democracy. They could not maintain that complacency and continue to exist.

Democracy in Europe has made absolutism impossible; absolutism has made democracy possible.

The sunrise after the twilight of the kings reveals a Europe of republics and of efficient republics. They have gone east.

THE INDIVIDUAL AMERICAN.

Americans are proud of being Americans. One of the first impressions the American small boy has of himself is that he is capable and that his capability has close connection with his nativity. It has. In this continent the machinery of the world was regulated for the production of supermen. It attracted only those individuals in the European continent who were hardiest and most alert.

The accomplishments of Americans as individuals are always demonstrating superiority in practical affairs. The unlimited confidence we have in ourselves as individuals is constantly justified by our accomplishments.

In science practical devices preceded deduction of theories. If we had to have a machine to do certain work we were able to make that machine.

The list of practical contributions to the world's strength is staggering. The cotton gin revolutionized the industry. The telephone, the telegraph, the cable, the aeroplane, the submarine, the machine gun, barbed wire, internal combustion engines, harvesting machinery, electric lights, sewing machines, automatic machinery, all sprang from American ingenuity. Although we were and still are a pioneer country, we long ago outstripped the British in the technique of most industries.

With all these practical accomplishments there has been demonstrated an organizing ability among individual Americans of phenomenal efficiency. The Belgian relief commission is sufficient evidence. A few men organized to feed a nation and they did it, although it involved keeping a fleet with a special flag on the high seas, occupying semi-diplomatic positions of the most trying nature, and traveling back and forth between fighting nations. The stockyards in Chicago are among the wonders of the world; the Standard Oil company is an international corporation—the beginnings of an international capitalism which may reorganize the world.

And the supreme irony of it all is that Americans are citizens of the United States, which as a nation among nations is a maudlin ineffectual.

FOR ALDERMAN.

The following are the recommendations of THE TRIBUNE for the aldermanic elections. Wards in which no opportunity for choice is presented have been omitted. Recommendations are based upon the best estimates of character available. No account has been taken of the chances of election. Some of the candidates admittedly are defeated before a ballot has been cast. That will not concern the voter who wants his vote to go for a good candidate and not a bad one.

The recommendations follow:

THE MAN ON THE JOB.

Tucked away in a cable from Petrograd last week was a remark by one of the leaders of the new régime which is worthy of note in any democracy. The new statesman said that the most radical of the group leaders, those representing the workmen, had been taken into the administration, where their problems and responsibilities were modifying their excessive radicalism.

This is a universal experience and has been pretty generally misunderstood. When a radical who has been violent in his criticism and sweeping in his proposals quiets down and becomes comparatively moderate after taking public office of an executive nature, it is frequently assumed that he has been corrupted. In some cases this may be true. In most cases it is not true. The change is explained by the simple fact that the critic has become the man on the job. There is nothing easier than to pick faults in what is being done. It is a very difficult matter to get them done. When a man who has had only to look over what other men are doing and talk about it is up against the job itself, he undergoes an inevitable change. He learns by experience the resistances, the checks, and limitations of execution. He finds that many things which seemed plausible or even incontestable in theory do not work out in practice. The responsibility for getting things done curbs the impulse to generalize irresponsibly.

Criticism is necessary to progress. But criticism is not progress. We only prepare for movement when we criticize. It is when theory has been applied—and modified by the requirements of action—that progress takes place.

There are some men who cannot be disciplined by responsibility. They have no instinct of the builder. But such men are few. Most men when given an opportunity to construct and operate feel the call of the job, the pleasure of creative work, the desire of making things go.

Editorial of the Day

THE TWILIGHT OF THE KINGS.

(Reprinted from "The Tribune" of Aug. 2, 1914.)

Before establishing hell on earth the pietistic kings commend their subjects to God. Seek the Lord's sanction for the devil's work.

"And now I commend you to God," said the kaiser from his balcony to the people in the street. "Go to church and kneel before God and pray for his help for our gallant army."

Pray that a farmer dragged from a Saxon field shall be speedier with a bayonet thrust than a winemaker taken from his vines in the Aube; that a Berlin lawyer shall be steadier with the rifle than a Moscow merchant; that a machine gun manned by Heidelburg students shall not jam and that one worked by Paris carpenters shall.

Pray that a Bavarian hop grower, armed in a quarrel in which he has no heat, shall outmarch a wheat grower from Poltava; that Cossacks from the Don shall be lured into barbed wire entanglements and caught by masked guns; that an innkeeper of Salzburg shall blow the head off a baker from the Loire.

"Go to church and pray for help"—that the hell shall be hotter in innocent Ardennes than it is in equally innocent Hessen; that it shall be better in innocent Kovno than in equally innocent Posen.

And the pietistic czar commends his subjects to God that they may have strength of arm in a quarrel they do not understand, that they may inflict more sufferings than they are required to endure and the name of Romanoff be greater than the name of Hohenzollern, that it may be greater than the name of Hapsburg, that its territories shall be wider and the territories of Hohenzollern and the territories of Hapsburg less.

The pietistic emperor of Austria commends his subjects to God, to seek divine assistance to crush the peasants of Serbia, dragged from the wheat field when it was ready for the scythe and given to the scythe themselves.

This is, we think, the last call of monarchy upon divinity when Asmodeus walks in armor. The kings worship Baal and call it God, but out of the sacrifice will come, we think, a resolution firmly taken to have no more wheat growers and growers of corn, makers of wine, miners and fishers, artisans and traders, sailors and storekeepers offered up with prayer to the Almighty in a feudal slaughter, armed against each other without hate and without cause they know, or, if they knew, would give a penny which way it was determined.

This is the twilight of the kings. Western Europe of the people may be caught in this debacle, but never again. Eastern Europe of the kings will be remade and the name of God shall not give grace to a hundred square miles of broken bodies.

If divinity enters here it comes with a sword to deliver the people from the sword.

It is the twilight of the kings. The republic marches east in Europe.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1917; By the Brentwood Co.]

PEERESSES with footlight antecedents and those whose record includes a questionable past or a sensational divorce, have hitherto been barred from presentation at the court of St. James. The late Queen Victoria even went a step further and placed the ban upon girls who had made a runaway marriage instead of one on more conventional lines. It now appears that the crown has exceeded its prerogatives in the matter and that peeresses of the realm, no matter what their antecedents or their conduct, have an official right, dating from ancient times, to presentation at court and access to the sovereign, just in the same way as the peers.

The last occasion of this right being exercised by a woman in open defiance of the monarch's wishes was when, on Sept. 12, 1831, the Countess of Ferrers persisted upon attending in state one of Queen Adelaide's drawing rooms in spite of all the efforts of the lord chamberlain and the other dignitaries of the royal household to prevent her from forcing herself into the royal presence.

The objection to her was that before becoming the second wife of the eighth Lord Ferrers, who was related to George Washington, she had lived with the earl for several years. Moreover, she was of obscure origin, rejoicing in the name of Sallie, and being the daughter of a man known as William Davy. Lady Ferrers, however, insisted upon her rights and prerogatives, and Queen Adelaide, her husband, William IV., and the high court officials, after consulting the great law officers of the crown, found that they had no alternative but to yield.

While, however, they could not prevent her appearing at court and passing before the throne at the drawing room, along with other peeresses or women of the "commoner" rank entitled to presentation, there was no law that could compel the queen to acknowledge her obeisance. And so, when she approached to curtsey before the throne, Queen Adelaide, who was a kind hearted woman, instead of turning her back upon the countess as everybody expected she would do, merely turned her head aside to talk to Princess Augusta, and continued her conversation with the princess as if deeply interested until Lady Ferrers had passed; so that it appeared as if the countess had been unintentionally overlooked, instead of pointedly and officially cut and ignored.

The other women present, however, both in the throne room and in the state apartments leading to and therefrom, made such a point of sweeping their dresses aside as if to avoid being contaminated by even the touch of Lady Ferrers' garments, that they more than made up for anything that Queen Adelaide, in her good nature, might have left undone in the way of a snub; and Lady Ferrers, who left no son, never cared to repeat the experiment.

Queen Victoria, who was extremely arbitrary, absolutely declined to permit any woman to whom she objected to appear in her presence, no matter what her prerogatives as a peeress, and the so-called "Blair" Duchess of Sutherland was never allowed to cross the royal threshold or to appear at any entertainment at which royalty was present.

King Edward was more lenient, and while he never allowed any woman who had rendered herself guilty of any public scandal to appear at court, he induced Queen Alexandra, though with difficulty, to tolerate the presence at her courts of peeresses whose wrongdoings were of a more discreet character and had received no publicity.

On such occasions Queen Alexandra, who, like the late Queen Adelaide, was extremely kind-hearted, would, as if unconsciously, turn her head aside and engage in conversation with those near or beside her until the offending dame had passed beyond the throne.

Lieut. Col. Edward Bellingham of the Royal Dublin fusiliers, who last year was badly wounded at the battle of the Somme, has just been promoted to the rank of brigadier general. His advancement has been rapid. On the outbreak of the war he rejoined the army, in which he had served during the Boer campaign fifteen years previously, and received a commission as lieutenant. At the end of six months he became captain, and in the summer of 1915 major of his battalion of the Sixteenth division. Last year he got his lieutenant colonelcy, and was decorated by King George with the Distinguished Service order, being received at Buckingham palace in private audience for the purpose. Now he is a general.

He is the eldest son and heir to the baronetcy of Sir Henry Bellingham of Bellingham castle, in County Louth, and is well known in New York, where he spent several years with his wife, daughter of Alfred Payne, and widow of Frederick Gough, making his home with her in West Twenty-sixth street.

The name of Bellingham is a familiar one on this side of the Atlantic, especially in New England. For a number of members of the family held office there in colonial days, one of them in particular, Richard Bellingham, having been governor of Massachusetts throughout a considerable portion of the seventeenth century.

They are an extremely old house, dating back to the Wars of the Roses, and have been settled in Ireland since the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Among the distinguished members of the family have been Sir Daniel Bellingham, lord treasurer of Ireland in the reign of James I.; Col. Thomas Bellingham, the guide and A. D. C. of William III. at the battle of the Boyne, in consequence of which Castle Bellingham was partially destroyed by the adherents of James II., and Sir William Bellingham, principal secretary of Prime Minister Pitt, and one of the lords of the admiralty, receiving for his services the baronetcy now held by the family.

Gen. Bellingham, whose sister is married to the colossally rich Marquis of Bute, owner of the whole town and seaport of Cardiff, has royal blood in his veins. For his mother was a daughter of the second Earl of Gainsborough, and as such a granddaughter of King William IV. and of the well known actress, Mrs. Jordan, immortalized in Romney's picture, "A Country Girl."

VACCINES AND SERUMS

THERE is renewed interest just now in the subject of vaccines and serums by reason of the continued successes of serum and vaccine treatment in certain directions and their failure in other directions.

The armies on all the battle fronts, including our own army along the Mexican border, have been free from smallpox and typhoid fever, due to the use of vaccines. The European armies have been free from paratyphoid, also due to vaccines. The trouble with lockjaw in the early days of the war has been overcome, due to the use of serum.

The latest action along this line is the manufacture and supplying free for use of pneumonia serum by the New York City health department. After experimenting for a year or more the New York City health department came to the conclusion that a serum against pneumonia, used properly and in proper cases, would prove helpful. They therefore decided to furnish such a serum, to be used in the early stages of the disease in cases diagnosed as proper for it by laboratory examination.

On the other hand, vaccines and serums have not proven helpful in a large number of conditions for which they have been very widely used. Sufferers find themselves called upon to decide whether or not serums or vaccines are to be used without having much information on which to base a decision.

It is the duty of the physician to place the facts with recommendations before the patient. According to both law and custom, the patient decides, and the physician has no other duty than to act in accordance with the decision of the patient.

In the Lane lectures delivered under the auspices of the University of California Dr. Billings states his opinion of the status of vaccines and serums, especially in relation to focal infections. By focal infections is meant the disease processes in certain organs or locations caused by infecting bacteria, which have secured entrance to the body at one location and which have then been carried to other locations either by the blood stream or by the lymph streams.

For examples: Pneumonia is a form of focal infection in which the pneumococcus gets into the body through the nose, enters the blood, and is carried to the lung. Rheumatism is one in which the infection enters through the tonsils, let us say, enters the blood, and is carried to the knee joint, as an example.

Therefore we are interested in points of entrance, called primary foci; points of location, and the infecting bacteria, and, in some measure, in the route traveled by the bacteria in reaching their final location.

We must also bear in mind that bacteria, having been carried to a secondary focus, may become so much at home there that they grow and multiply, and, having been absorbed, are carried to new or tertiary foci of infection.

Examples: Bacteria enter through the tonsils, reach the blood stream, and are carried to the gall bladder. They locate there and multiply. They are absorbed and carried to the joints, causing rheumatism.

Strictly speaking, the tonsil is the primary focus, the gall bladder the secondary, and the joints the tertiary focus.

However, it is the custom in such cases to refer to the gall bladder as the primary focus. A gonococcus infection extends to the prostate gland or the small pouches next to it—the vesicles. It becomes habituated in this secondary focus. From there it is absorbed and carried to the joints, producing rheumatism.

Primary foci may be located anywhere in the body. The most frequent primary foci are the following: Teeth and jaws (especially in pyorrhœa and alveolar abscess); the tonsils and adenoids; the nose and the mastoid maxillary frontal and other accessory sinuses; the bronchi (bronchitis, bronchitic cavities, and tubercular cavities especially); the intestinal tract and its accessory structures (the gall bladder, the appendix, and the large intestine especially; constipation is a fairly frequent cause); the genito-urinary tract in men and women (the prostate, the seminal vesicles, the uterus, and the Fallopian tubes especially); and occasionally the skin and lymph nodes.

In a study of local infections of the joints Murphy and Kreuscher ranked the importance of these different primary foci in the following order: Tonsils, 25 per cent; teeth, 18 per cent; urethra, 17 per cent; accessory nasal sinuses, lungs, and bronchial tubes, 5 per cent; bladder, 4 per cent; kidney pelvis, 21 per cent; appendix, 2 per cent; gall bladder, 2 per cent; miscellaneous, boils, typhoid, scarlet fever, tetanus, dysentery, 6 per cent.

While this is the order of importance of the different forms of arthritis that Drs. Murphy and Kreuscher were treating, it does not follow that the primary foci of other focal infections rank in the same order.

In chronic rheumatoid arthritis the importance of the different foci of infection would be materially different from that in pneumonia. A given area may be a primary focus of infection without being inflamed, sore, tender, or giving any other symptom. In other cases there may be one symptom without the others.

For instance, the tonsils may be enlarged but not sore or painful. The teeth may appear to be all right. The dentist may not be able to find any tender teeth, or decay, or inflamed gums, yet an X-ray may show that small abscesses at the apices of the roots are responsible for the trouble. However, in most cases, a painstaking examination will disclose some symptom by which the primary focus may be located.

Again, it must be borne in mind that a secondary focus may act as a primary focus. An appendix which has been infected by bacteria absorbed through the tonsils may serve as a primary focus for a case of heart disease.

One of the points mentioned by Billings no doubt occurs to every one. Infections are so very common, why is it that focal infections are so very rare? A majority of children have recurring tonsillitis and yet only a small minority of children have rheumatism or growing pains. Most of the people past middle life have some pyorrhœa; few have rheumatoid arthritis. The proportion of men having prostate trouble and vesiculitis is very much larger than that of men having focal infections therefrom.

What is the answer? Natural resistance. Some persons have natural resistance which holds the infection at the original focus or destroys the bacteria as fast as they enter the blood stream. This natural resistance varies with different persons.

Read of the hardships of the loggers in Wisconsin sixty years ago as told by Isaac Stephenson in his autobiography. They worked in freezing water up to their waists, they slept on the ground in driving rainstorms without cover or shelter. There was an awful death-rate. But the resistant stood it and many of them appeared to be all the harder for it.

When judged by the law of averages it was plain to see the effects of such a life. But judged by its effects on certain individuals such experiences seemed to be not only safe but wholesome. The difference lay in the inherent biological variations in individuals. Aside from the natural differences in the resistance of different individuals resistance varies at different times and under different circumstances.

Pasteur found that whereas a chicken could not ordinarily be infected with anthrax, immersing it in cold water for a few minutes would make it susceptible to that disease.

Among causes which affect resistance disadvantageously are: Physical and mental exhaustion, starvation, exposure to cold, debility from alcoholic dissipation, the misuse of narcotic drugs, and exhausting disease. Among causes which affect resistance favorably are: Exercise, fresh air, cold sponge baths, and massage.

Illustrations of the effects of the stage of nutrition on a single disease are the relative freedom from consumption of fat people and the great increase in consumption in Belgium consequent upon the poor nourishment of the adult population since 1914.

Among diseases which are due—some of them usually and some of them always—to focal infections are the following: Rheumatism or acute rheumatic fever, muscular rheumatism, including lumbago; neuritis and neuralgia, including sciatica; endocarditis, myocarditis, and pericarditis, malignant endocarditis; forms of acute heart disease, chronic heart disease, St. Vitus dance or chorea; gonococcal arthritis, usually called gonorrheal rheumatism; acute Bright's disease, chronic Bright's disease; acute appendicitis, chronic or recurring appendicitis; cholecystitis, or inflammation of the gall bladder; ulcer of the stomach and duodenum; shingles, acute enlargement of the thyroid gland, chronic enlargement of the thyroid, and pneumonia. Under chronic rheumatism rheumatoid arthritis and some cases of gout are placed.

The bacteria which more frequently cause focal infections are the different kinds of streptococci, the different kinds of pneumococci, the gonococcus and colon bacilli, though in lesser degree.

It has been noticed that there is some tendency of primary and secondary foci to hook up in combination. For instance, in rheumatoid arthritis the probable primary focus is the teeth, the plevic infections hook up with sciaticas, neuritis and neuralgias in the legs.

In this particular field there is room for a great deal of clinical study. There is more of a disposition of certain bacteria to hook up with certain organs.

The bacteria which cause ordinary rheumatic fever are very apt to produce rheumatic endocarditis and chorea. When Rosenow grew streptococci from infected gall bladders and injected them into the veins of rabbits they located in the gall bladder. Bacteria grown from appendicitis tend to produce appendicitis, and others from stomach ulcer produce stomach ulcer. He says: "It appears that the cells of the tissues for which a given strain shows elective affinity take the bacteria out of the circulation as if by a magnet—absorption."

Something is known about the disposition of certain bacteria to locate in certain organs, but here, too, there is much room for further clinical observation and laboratory study.

In the treatment of this group of diseases Dr. Billings does not think there has been material gain in recent years. We have gained in that we have learned a good deal about how to prevent focal diseases, but when it comes to the cure of those that have developed we are not much better off than we were ten years ago.

We have found out that persons with chronic rheumatism could and should eat red meat and plenty of other nourishing foods. That was something of a gain. We have stopped drenching these patients with an unending round of medicines—that is something of a gain. It has been found that salicylates are of some service and that arsenic, and especially cacodylate is a good deal of service.

Cleaning up foci of infection, removal of incurably infected organs, drainage of infected areas is advocated strongly by Dr. Billings and all others of experience. He is of the opinion that this drainage should not be done during the active stage of a focal infection. To do so at that time may cause the infection to flare up.

Such faith as Dr. Billings has in vaccines and serums for the ordinary run of these focal infections is in what is called autogenous vaccines. Autogenous vaccines are those made from cultures from the patient himself. The advocates of stock vaccines say that their products are more effective in practice because they save time.

It takes nearly a week to make an autogenous vaccine, and a week may represent the margin between success and failure. As I follow the conflicting reports in medical literature, the trend is away from autogenous vaccines.

For instance, a recent writer in the Journal of the American Medical Association not only said there was no advantage in treating a gonococcal infection with an autogenous vaccine but that a vaccine from any pus coccus would do as well as one from gonococcus.

PAVING WEST LAKE.

Chicago, March 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—What are the prospects of Lake street being paved east of Pine avenue?
T. E. S.

The assessment for paving Lake street between Laramie avenue and Pine avenue has been placed on the latest court calendar, and is now awaiting confirmation in the County court. As soon as the assessment has been confirmed a contract will be awarded and the work started immediately after necessary rehabilitation work by the elevated railroad company has been completed.

OGDEN AVENUE EXTENSION.

Chicago, March 23.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Will the Ogden avenue line be extended to Lincoln park, and if so, how soon?
E. E. McC.

The Chicago plan commission has requested the board of local improvements to take steps to open Ogden avenue from Union park to Lincoln park.

If Ogden avenue is opened between these two points and the Chicago Surface Lines can obtain a franchise it is very likely that extension of the Ogden avenue line northeast from Union park to Lincoln park will be made.

Chicago, March 20.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly give me any information in regard to a street car line on California avenue running from north to south side. Some years ago they brought the tracks and put along the curb stones at Douglas park, but that is as far as they got.
L. P. K.

At one time before the unification of the surface lines the Chicago Railways company proposed to extend the California avenue line south to Twenty-sixth street, but this idea was abandoned.

At present there are no plans for the extension of this line.

WHO WILL CARE FOR OUR FAMILIES?

Chicago, March 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—This government, relying on the volunteer system and the national guard, and, incidentally, ex-members of the service, will in all probability have immediate need for every citizen with military training within a short period. The question in the heart of every man liable to war service is, "What steps will the government take to protect my family while I am away in the nation's interest?"

We hear vague reports of federal aid, but no definite assurance as to the course of action. I believe I am voicing the sentiments of thousands of men with families when I insist that the national government definitely guarantee to provide for those left behind before a single man puts on the uniform. The last Mexican crisis demonstrated that private individuals and charitable organizations had to undertake this problem.

THE MUNICIPAL PIER.

Chicago, March 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Five million dollars of the rate payers' money spent on a municipal pier which is now in a delapidated condition and some thousands more to be outlayed to put it in proper repair for the coming season! Such is the news we learn of one of the city's great enterprises. It is not difficult to surmise the cause, but before attaching blame unjustly upon any one we should like to ask the administration which appointed the commissioner of public works under whose supervision this pile of ruin was constructed to tell us who is responsible for the defective construction, faulty material, and skimping of specifications.

Will we also be advised why concrete, which drops like "sawdust from a leaky doll," was permitted to be used for posts outside the pier building and why the steel work is in need of such repair? The public is long suffering and kind, but surely it will not permit forever having its money unnecessarily thrown away upon the city's gold bricks.

PREPAREDNESS FOR THE FUTURE.

Chicago, March 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The following paragraph is taken from one of Mr. Henning's articles: "The entente allies are opposed to the formation of a large American army because the munitioning of such a force would hamper the output of war supplies for the allied armies. The entente has intimated to the United States that American munitions are needed more than American troops on the European battlefields."

It is quite natural, after two and a half years of siding with the allies by holding Germany strictly accountable, while permitting any and all outrages by her opponents, that the entente should consider that we are going to war to save their skins. A true American will pay no more attention to the wishes of the entente than our big money interests have paid to those of Germany. We have seen fit to give up many rights in order that the allies might have a free rein in exterminating another world power, and by adopting the opposite policy toward Germany we have blocked her attempts to win as effectively as though we had taken up arms against her, until we have brought ourselves to the brink of war. And now the entente allies are pleased and feel that they have won a big victory by getting us on their side to the extent of sending money and munitions.

The real issue is preparedness for the United States, not against Germany but all other nations. The present alliances will not be in effect ten years from now and our preparation must be for the future. We can play no real part in the present struggle. The shame is that nothing has been done this last two and a half years, and that to date the country shows no real understanding of what we need. We want no entangling alliances that can do nothing more than connect us with European politics, but preparedness that will keep us independent of all nations. The only solution is universal military training. Let our newspapers stop publishing what the entente wants us to do, and call upon the people to demand the protection that will come with their own preparation.

THE GERMAN-AMERICANS.

Chicago, March 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial "German-Americans" is one of the best I have read on our present situation with Germany. The article has fully explained the position of those who are of German origin.

The German-Americans will stand by their adopted land to protect it from any invaders, whoever they may be, but it would not be fair to send Americans of German origin whose antecedents fought to save the union across the sea to kill their kin.

SINGING AND SLAUGHTER.

Chicago, March 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The following extract from the recent massmeeting in New York advocating the sending of 100 young wealthy Americans to the battlefield of France, under the command of Mr. Roosevelt, is too beautiful to be forgotten:

"What an hour it would be when a great division of patriotic soldiers from our land marched up to that long battlefield of France under the stars and stripes, greeted by 'Brittania' and the 'Marseillaise,' answering with 'America' and 'The Star Spangled Banner,' led by that former president of ours whose name you know so well!"

Yes, that would certainly be a memorable hour to all concerned, and scarcely less important in meaning and effect than the now famous peace ship of Mr. Ford. By all means let us have more singing and less slaughter, and the war will take a turn for the better.

THE STEEL RING

by Robert Herrick

PARIS, Feb. 21.—The "ruthless" submarine campaign has been on for three weeks, and although it is too early to draw final conclusions it is safe to say that thus far it has been a failure, if its object was, as so widely advertised by the German press, to "bring England to her knees." Great Britain is very much on her feet still, and whatever annoyance the new "blockade" may prove to be to the allies in getting provisions and raw materials, it is already evident that the war cannot be brought to a speedy conclusion by the submarine, no matter how regardless of human life their commanders may be.

Thus again has Germany failed to pierce the steel ring with which she is being slowly strangled. Again her brag and bluster, as a year ago before Verdun, is falling flat and she must search for some other miracle with which to comfort her weary people.

More and more like a wild beast Germany has ramped back and forth within the steel ring of her cage, seeking an outlet to the world, to peace. She has found many a soft spot which yielded to her claws—Serbia, Russia, Roumania—but always before she can claw herself clear to victory the steel ring has drawn taut again and she must begin once more testing the walls of her cage. She cannot escape beneath the seas nor through the air!

Will she snap at Holland and little Denmark, at Switzerland or Sweden? (For "necessity knows no law," and treaties are but "scraps of paper" in the path of those who will to conquer at the cost of another.) Or will she try to smash her way through the Trentina into northern Italy? No one yet knows.

* *

BUT the conviction is growing that it matters little where the next rush is made, how much the steel ring may give: it will not part. Germany cannot claw herself free, to peace! She can stretch the steel ring, but she cannot break it. And she must break it somewhere, somehow, if she is to get the peace which she so desperately needs on any terms that would seem tolerable to her much tried people.

No individual can live in our modern world alone; no nation can live alone. That is the simple moral: alone, a nation strangles and suffocates physically just as the isolated individual strangles and suffocates morally. Germany must break through that steel ring into the outside world not merely to get food and raw materials for her munitions but to start once more the suspended circulation of her industrial and commercial life. Not even the self-sufficient Germans can live alone, cut off from humanity.

So as the submarines with all their cruelty fail to break the steel ring and "bring Britain to her knees," the day of doom draws nearer.

* *

PEACE will come sooner or later, rather sooner than later it seems now, but not the German peace. The steel ring will be cut and Germany will be free to reach the outside world once more. But however the terms of that peace will be drawn, Germany will find another steel ring, which she has herself forged and set around her own neck; an invisible, nevertheless strangling, ring that it will take long years to remove—the ring of prejudice. In my belief this invisible ring will prove the more deadly, the more chastening of the two—the harder one to escape.

I know the essential cynicism of our "business" morality. I know that Germany, while trying to wipe all shipping from the seas, even to the tiny fishing barks of neutral nations, is feverishly building new steamers in her shipyards with which to trade after the war. I know how feeble sentimental protests are in face of possible gains to be won by trading with a former enemy. And I do not think it desirable that Germany should be excluded by treaties from all human intercourse, even if that were possible.

For, after all, the world has got to live with the German of the new generation, and it is to the interest of everybody that this new German should be molded in another pattern from his ancestors. If the German is to be remolded into a law respecting, social human being, he must be allowed free intercourse with the world and all the suggested trade prohibitions of the Paris conference are likely to come to nothing.

Nevertheless the freed German people will feel the pressure of the steel ring which they themselves have forged. Spiritual laws are still operative in spite of the régime of terror and frightfulness to which we have been treated for three years: the very future of the central powers to make their own peace is sufficient proof of that. And Germany will not escape from the application of that invisible steel ring which she has so recklessly put around her own neck.

Probably the German will emerge from his prison the day after peace is declared. (He must have got heartily sick of Deutchland über alle as a three years' steady diet!) Germans were always great travelers, and they will want to see how the world outside looks, and they will want to do business. So we may expect, first of all in the United States, a stream of German tourists and commercial travelers crossing the ocean, which has been cleaned of their deadly inventions.

These first German tourists and commercial travelers will return to Germany in a thoughtful frame of mind, which will be salutary. I expect that an enormous literature of apology and explanation will be produced in Germany after the war, which will consist of two sorts, "How we conquered the world, though the world refused to recognize it, and How good we should have been to the world if it had only yielded gracefully to the German yoke."

This for a term of years, and then let us hope that younger Germany will have come to manhood, having looked on the record in an unprejudiced frame of mind and pronounced its verdict—the drastic judgment of the young—on the deeds of its fathers: "You undertook the conquest of the world in the wrong way, the way that has never paid; if you had acted less like supermen and more like honest men you might not have left us a bankrupt fatherland!" And when this judgment has been delivered the penance of Germany will begin to end.

France Calls Out Class of 1918

By Sterling Heilig

PARIS, March 18.—One week ago the French war minister asked parliament to vote a government bill for calling out the youngest Frenchmen liable to army service. They form "the class of 1918," that is, they will be 20 years old in that year—and 20 is the age when the obligation of military service begins in time of peace. They are to be called together—for the few months of training absolutely necessary before they will be fit to go to the fighting front—in April of this year, 1917. That is, the youngest soldiers whom France will have drafted into her army will be 19 years old.

Note this age, for a great many wrong things will be said about it and against it by parties interested in peace at any price. The French parliament voted a little earlier—in November, 1915—the calling out of the class of 1917; and that class went into training in January, 1916, which was also the young soldiers' nineteenth year. But the propaganda of peace at any price published everywhere that France was calling out 17 year old boys to serve as soldiers. Class of 1917—soldiers 17 years old. Class of 1918—what—18 years old? That will not sound so telling. In both years the youngest soldiers called out by France were 19 years old.

In the American civil war soldiers were taken down to 18 years old. In France, even in time of peace, volunteers could always forestall their compulsory military service by enlisting at 18—with their parents' consent. So it has been in this war, and even younger—just as old officers and soldiers who have long passed the age of compulsory service have insisted on being taken as volunteers. One over 70 years old was killed lately. The last classes liable to compulsory service in case of war when war actually broke out in 1914—that is, men 47 years old of the class of 1887, and 46 of the class of 1888—have been kept on the lists, but they have not been used for active fighting. So it is false and wrong headed for peace propagandists to set up a cry that France is drafting her boys and old men into the army.

An effort has also been made to persuade neutrals that German prisoners and interned civilians are severely treated. In the spring of last year I saw such prisoners employed on the docks at Marseilles—and they were given a time for siesta after their lunch. The hired laborers—Spaniards and Algerian Kabyles—had no such privilege and looked enviously at them. At Bordeaux in autumn I saw Austrian prisoners cultivating little plots of waste land for themselves and eating the salad they had grown. Something more astonishing still has just happened.

What is called a concentration camp had been prepared for German prisoners—wooden barracks quite new, with proper floors and windows and conveniences and heating facilities. Before the Germans were brought there the barracks had to be inspected to verify that they fulfilled the exigencies of Germany, without which reprisals are executed on French prisoners and interned civilians held by Germans.

The stories of such French prisoners who have been exchanged or allowed to come to Switzerland because of lasting sickness, like tuberculosis, are not comforting, particularly with reference to food and medical attention. At any rate, the brand new French prison camp, which would eventually have had to come under the supervision of the American embassy [it was before the rupture of diplomatic relations with Germany], were rejected by the French authorities as not up to the mark of German exigencies. They did not wish to give the least excuse for reprisals on French prisoners in the German prison camps.

Well, what was thought not good enough for German prisoners, with whom Frenchmen are at war, has been turned over to the native volunteers who come from tropical Annam to help France. They are small, deft with their hands like their Chinese neighbors, and make themselves useful generally. So far they have not complained of their new barracks, not even of their being cold in this first real winter which they have ever known.

Another example will show how little justification there is for a campaign carried on to influence neutrals against this employment of her own colonials by France, in whose parliament they are represented. Carters and scavengers have been overworked in Paris during the severe winter at hauling coal and flour. To take their place in street cleaning, first, women were enlisted for the sweeping—and they were real Parisians. Then, for the heavy work of lifting and carrying, Kabyles from the interior of Algiers were recruited.

It is hard to see why they are called black savages by the Germans, who blame the French for using them, for many of these Kabyles are blue eyed and as fair skinned as many Germans. They are of the primitive Berber race, as old as the Egyptians, and have the strength of their Atlas mountains.

Tommy a Tragic-Comedian at Trench Burial.

By Patrick MacGill.

Patrick MacGill is the young Irish author of "Children of the Dead End" and "The Rat Pit," novels; "Songs of the Dead End," verse; and "The Red Horizon," one of the most popular of war books. He has been serving in France.

LONDON.—It was in the trenches near B—— last summer. I was sitting on the firestep cleaning my rifle when I noticed a man coming along the trench toward me carrying over his shoulder a wooden cross.

"What are you going to do with that?" I asked him when he drew near. I could now see the inscription on the cross; it read: 'A notre devote fille.'

"It's to put over me mate," said the man. "Poor boy, he got killed yesterday and we buried him behind the trench. So I wanted somethin' to put over him, and as luck would have it a shell dropped into the graveyard beyont there and flung this over on top of me dugout."

"Can you read French?" I asked. "The inscription . . ." But I went no further. To the Irish soldier the symbol meant everything; the inscription did not matter and the cross itself was fashioned in commemoration of the departed; the sexless, silent dead.

Here in the vicinity of the trenches were the graves of soldiers innumerable. At every turn where a gap in the parados opened to the rear they stared you in the face, the damp, clammy mounds of clay with little crosses over them. Each inscription, when there was one, told of the same tragedy.

A soldier had been killed in action on a certain date; his name, number, and regiment were given and his mates had placed little bunches of flowers on his grave. When his regiment moved off the flowers faded. Maybe the man's cap was left there on the black earth, but in course of time the kindly grasses covered it up.

Farther back, near the banks of the canal, was a well ordered graveyard where death was allowed most of its customary reticence save when now and again casual shells dropped on the spot and delved into the graves. I have often visited the spot, and a quiet afternoon last August found me there amongst the graves.

How quiet the place was. On my right I could see the wide winding street of a deserted village, its homes, its tall poplars, with their green branches, and my soul felt strangely quieted!

In its peace, in its cessation from labor there was neither anxiety nor sadness. It seemed as if the houses, all intact at this particular spot, held something sacred and solemn, that in them all was good. They knew neither evil nor sorrow. Here was peace, the desired consummation of all things. But it was the peace brought about by war, the peace of the desert and death.

I looked at the grave near me, saw the cross and its rude lettering. This was the epitaph, this and nothing more: "An Unknown British Soldier."

On a grave adjoining was a cheap gilt vase with flowers. English flowers, faded and dying. I looked at the cross. One of the Coldstream guards lay beneath. He had been killed in action six months before. I turned up the black edged envelope which lay on the vase and read the badly spelled message:

Here lay Canadians, Australians, Frenchmen, and Germans. Many of the French had bottles of holy water placed on their graves under the crosses. Several soldiers of a mountain battery were buried in a corner near the village wall. The barn in which they were billeted was hit fair by a high explosive shell. Thirty-one were killed.

Now they rest in the bosom of the kindly earth, under crosses fashioned from biscuit boxes. On the back of one of the crosses was the wording in black: "Biscuits 50 lbs." Most of the epitaphs on the crosses were short and concise and ran as thus:

Private 900 J. Smith —— Regiment.
Killed in Action 1st June, 1916.

And under it stamped on a bronze plate was the information: "Erected by the Mobile Unit [B. R. C. S.] to preserve the record found on the spot."

The British soldier feels it is his duty to tend his comrades' graves, and I can call to mind many instances in which soldiers have been caught by the sniper's bullet as they went out to bury their fallen comrades. Once at G—— in the spring of 1915 we found a soldier of the Munster fusiliers under the floor of a trench. Killed in a charge the previous winter he had fallen into the mud of the trench and was trampled down.

We uncovered the body and buried it anew behind the parados, placing a rosary which we found on the body over the grave.

But even in burying the dead the British soldier, one of the bravest and most cheerful of created beings, finds scope for that humor which is peculiarly his own. All soldiers who have been in the trenches near Cambrai will recollect Cock Robin Pump and the epitaph over the dead robin which was buried beside it. The poor bird was killed by a "coal box"; a Tommy buried it and was moved to poetry in inscribing the epitaph. The verse ran thus:

"Cock Robin's dead beside this pump;
A coal-box hit him such a thump—
And this is all we've got to tell:
We'll lick the swine that fired the shell."

TOMORROW night may see us officially at war with Germany. The great war consciousness which has blotted out in the minds of Europeans all other consciousnesses—the consciousness of the future, of the betterment of the race, of the impulses of generations toward a more individual freedom and a more universal nationality—may come to occupy our minds nationally. We will be divided between a passionate pacifism and an even more passionate patriotism.

Fate is doing our thinking for us these days, and our actions are the direct results of those thoughts. Until we have felt the press of war, however, our thoughts, although colored by the brooding war consciousness, may still admit the truth of a few fundamental principles which are of no creed, no ism, but which are the sincere conclusions of one of the great thinkers of the age. After war is a part of our daily life we may treat our Bertrand Russell (if America has any) just as England has treated hers.

Bertrand Russell is not in the obvious sense a pacifist. His "Why Men Fight" (Century) is a series of lectures which to the obvious minded appear to preach the sedition of objecting to fighting. What they do preach is the importance of examining with keen, incisive thought, judicial temper, and a broad, tolerant mind the elements in human nature which impel us to war, and to translate the results of that examination into a preventive of future devastations. We had better read "Why Men Fight" now, before we lose our perspective on abstract thought and naturally come to look upon the lectures as the English authorities have.

The case of Bertrand Russell is almost as famous as the Romain Rolland case. Mr. Russell, a grandson of Lord John Russell, once premier of Great Britain, and the heir to the present Lord Russell, was until recently a lecturer at Trinity college, Cambridge, and is celebrated internationally as a mathematician and philosopher. He has an American wife, and there were rumors that he would be invited to the chair left vacant by the death of Prof. Josiah Royce of Harvard. He was to have delivered a series of lectures at Harvard during this year. Convinced that man's spiritual freedom is his most precious possession, he tried to lessen the hardships of the conscientious objectors to war. In consequence he was arrested, fined $500, dismissed from Cambridge, prohibited from lecturing in the United Kingdom (lecturing was his means of earning a living), and forbidden to come to America to fulfill his engagement at Harvard.

About Christmas Bertrand Russell sent a message to the president of the United States appealing to him to bring peace to Europe. The message was brought by a special messenger to avoid the English censor, and it was printed in all of the newspapers of this country at that time. Bertrand Russell is undoubtedly the most dramatic figure in literary England today.

The Public library has posted a list of Russian histories in the open shelf section, and all the books on the list have been out since the posting. Sonia Howe's "One Thuosand Years of Russian History" has been asked for oftener than any of the others. Vainly, however, does one go through Russian history for the germinating of the revolution—which is the most dramatic event of the great war, to my mind. "Modern Russian History" (Knopf), by Alexander Kornilov, translated by Alexander S. Kaun, is the only history of Russia in English which gives anything of Russian history after the '80s. M. Kornilov's history has just been published, and the library has ordered it, but has not received its copies yet. The last volume of the history was published in Russia in 1914. In some additional chapters Mr. Kaun gives a history of the reign of Nicholas II., now just plain Mr. Romanoff. Alexander Kaun lives in Chicago; he taught at the University of Chicago, and has done much critical writing, which you probably have come across. There are better translators of Russian, but none of them has attempted anything more important in historical literature than bringing this work of Petrograd's most popular lecturer and historian to English readers.

"Men, Women, and Ghosts" (Macmillan) is Amy Lowell's latest poetical contribution to the betterment of the world. Short stories in verse make up most of the volume, and—mirabile dictu!—some of it is regular old fashioned po'try. Amy Lowell has an angle on life, one can't deny that. It's humorous, delicate, sometimes femininely fantastic, sophisticated, and often satirical beyond the ways of poets.

Arthur Davison Ficke is sailing this month for Japan to lecture and read from his poems at several of the Japanese universities. When Witter Bynner was in Chicago he said that he was going with Mr. and Mrs. Ficke to the orient. I haven't heard definitely whether it was only the expression of a hope or the statement of a certainty. It is strange how little recognition Arthur Ficke has had in the middle west. He was known and praised most highly in England before America had anything to do with him. Only lately has Davenport, Ia., where Mr. Ficke lives, come to be a great town literarily. Eunice Tietjens, herself a poet of rare charm, told me once that Arthur Ficke is primarily a poets' poet, that his work is profoundly respected by other poets. Mitchell Kennerley's rejuvenation as a publisher is celebrated by the publication of Mr. Ficke's newest volume of verse, "An April Elegy." Perhaps you remember "Sonnets of a Portrait Painter," or "Earth Passion," or one of the other seven little volumes of rare beauty.

John Galsworthy is the subject of the eighth volume of the "Writers of the Day" series (Holt). These little volumes of criticism are written by writers about writers. Sheila Kaye-Smith, author of "Sussex Gorse" (Knopf), which has had unlimited praise, both in the author's native England and in America, is herself a novelist of great power. She writes of John Galsworthy most illuminatively.

"Lines Long and Short" (Houghton-Mifflin), by Henry B. Fuller, is Spoon River seen by venerable, rose glassed eyes and understood by a heart full of the humor which a man who has had wild enthusiasms in his youth finds in his later life. The Lines are tales of lives, many of them failures, but told with spots of color, with quips of style (even in verse) which makes them great fun to read.

The matter of "The Genius" (John Lane) is not yet settled. The appellate division of the Supreme court is deciding whether the Society for the Suppression of Vice was in the right when it warned the publishers to withdraw the book. A copy of "The Genius" is the "Exhibit A" of the publishers' defense. The justices have to read it. Theodore Dreiser and his publishers contend that his work has artistic and literary value. The vice com—— But I needn't go over the matter, which occupied so much space in the press last fall. Far from suppressing the book permanently, the author and his publisher decided to obey the command of the commission for a time. In the meantime the Authors' league came out strongly for the book and against the censorship. It's more than possible that the Supreme court will say it's an artistic addition to American literature; but you never can tell what courts are going to do after the famous decision in our Chicago courts that Bacon was the author of the Shakespeare plays.

"Where did you get that list of best sellers that you had in the paper yesterday?" came over the telephone early Monday morning. I explained that it had come from a book store which probably has among its customers more of the intellectual than the popular book readers, and that I had used the list because it is indicative of what one class of book readers buys. "But what is 'Central Europe'?" the voice insisted. "I thought I knew most of the war books, but I seem to have missed that." "Central Europe" (Knopf) is at the same time the greatest and the most popular book that has appeared in Germany since the war began. Friedrich Naumann, the author, is a member of the reichstag, and his discussion of an economic union of the states of central Europe as a possible outcome of the war has been regarded by the allies as an authoritative pronouncement of German intentions.

"Only a Dog" (Dutton) is the chronicle of a dog's devotion in the great war, which in its truth rivals any fiction of that love which asks nothing but to be accepted. The story of the dog "Army" was told to the author, Bertha Whitridge Smith, by Maj. Edgar, R. A. M. C., of Montreal. The beautiful little drama happened near Armentieres, in Flanders, and there one may find the big grave and the little one beside it, both marked by the same cross, and on it: "No. 678962—Private Rice and Army."

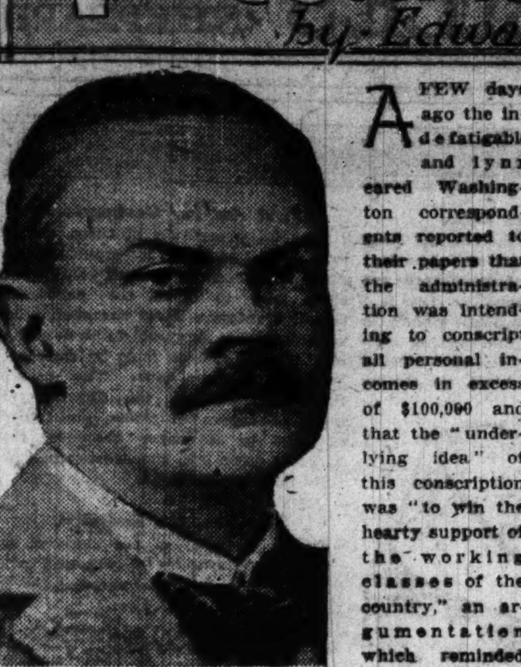
"Whatever money comes from the sale of this little book," the author says, "will be used for materials to make dressings for the wounded soldiers of the allies." I confess that, despite the fact that the book is written in the words of the dog, and not remarkably done, there were real tears in my eyes when I had finished the little volume.

While it is being determined in England whether or not publishers are to be classed as essential in war times news comes from Germany that the publication of books there is being encouraged as much as possible for the purpose of keeping up the spirits of the people and that one German firm has actually issued a complete edition of Dickens.

Sir Herbert Tree has a reputation among his friends for being just as good a story teller as he is an actor. Those of us who are merely his stage acquaintances can judge his powers for ourselves. A volume of his short stories called "Nothing Matters" (Houghton-Mifflin) pleads for him.

CONFISCATION

by Edward Goldbeck



A FEW days ago the indefatigable and lynx eared Washington correspondents reported to their papers that the administration was intending to conscript all personal incomes in excess of $100,000 and that the "underlying idea" of this conscription was "to win the hearty support of the working classes of the country," an argumentation which reminded me of the caustic French definition of socialism: "Le socialisme c'est l'argent des autres."

As this flabbergasting report has not been denied by the administration, we must take it seriously, difficult as that is. It seems to have been launched as a ballon d'essai, and will probably soon come to earth pricked by the pungent disapproval of the press. One thing, at least, has been convincingly demonstrated by this escapade into the azure of fancy—that free speech must not be muzzled with the beginning of the war.

If projects of this kind can be put forth, the criticism of the newspapers is our only hope of salvation. I am going to discuss the idea, not because there is any danger of its being realized, but because it shows paradigmatically one of the pernicious tendencies of our age. At first I shall give some reasons why such a measure would be obnoxious from the opportunistic point of view; in other words, why, at this moment and under the present circumstances, it ought to be avoided. Then I shall look at it from the standpoint of principle. At first the practice, then the theory; at first the urgency of the hour, then our lasting needs.

* *

FROM the practical point of view, a calm observer might say as follows: The foremost aim of the administration at this moment must be to inspire confidence. The confidence of the nation will be given to the administration if our leaders show poise as well as activity, cool headedness as well as energy. The plan of a confiscation of all the incomes above $100,000 is absolutely without precedent. Nothing like this has been done in those countries which have been in war now for over two years, under the pressure of gigantic financial needs, and our country, before war is even officially declared, takes the most extreme step imaginable!

A resolution like this cannot create an atmosphere of confidence: utmost distrust in the resources and the spirit of the nation could not act differently. The idea is panicky, and all level headed persons will say: If this is the beginning, what will be the end? An administration which "on the verge of war" comes out with proposals of this desperate kind will hardly be able to lead, restrain, and moderate public opinion.

But such is our methodless method. We burden single individuals with the duties of the state, and then we are astonished that the individual gets rebellious and tries to shake the burden off. Is this war the rich man's war, and has the bulk of the nation no interest in it? Must the rich people be punished for our going to war? The plan of the administration seems to justify this opinion. If this is so, if it is really the rich man's war, then it would be better to give it up ere it is begun and negotiate for an understanding before it is too late.

If, however, it is the nation's war, then do not put the heavier burden on the shoulders of the rich man, but distribute it equally among all—i. e., in proportion to the economical strength. If war has any moral justification, it is in the fact that everybody feels himself equalized with his neighbor in a great idea and a common duty, but an open injustice, a thoroughly arbitrary measure, like this, destroys this wholesome feeling.

It is up to the state to find the money. Taxation, as our constitution says, must be "uniform," and one cannot begin a war in teaching the nation how to get out of disagreeable duties. If we act this way we give the American democracy—the richest country in the world—a testimonum paupertatis which will make us the laughing stock of the belligerent nations. We ought to be careful about the impression we create on the other side: the capital of respect which we have piled up there is by no means inexhaustible. In three years, if things should have gone badly, such measures might be discussed. "Three years? That is impossible." Maybe; but the right way to look at emergencies of this kind is to be optimistic with regard to the ultimate success, pessimistic with regard to the work, the time, the sacrifices which may be necessary to attain it. If we begin with the climax, whither will this ascent lead us?

The temperament of the rulers must adapt itself to the temperament of the nation. John Bull is slow, he needs men who stir him up. With a nation like the English, the prime minister may, perhaps must, exaggerate a little and sound the tocsin every now and then. Uncle Sam is emotional; his leaders ought to be cautious, sober, and lag behind rather than stimulate. Demos is fickle, the administration must be all the more steadfast. To begin with the most abnormal measures conceivable is a terrible mistake, as we are only too apt to become hysterical, and one of the most important tasks is to keep the business life of the country in a normal condition.

* *

WAR produces depression. Business activity is stimulated by artificial means as the war goes on, but the first psychological effect is depression. The business man thinks of possible losses, of unavoidable risks, and he becomes warier than in peace. In such a moment of widespread hesitation or timidity he reads that all incomes above $100,000 are going to be confiscated. Why above $100,000? Is there any special reason for this demarcation? None. So the probability is that in half a year we shall draw the line at $50,000 "to win the hearty support of the working classes."

But where is the guarantee that we shall stop there? All the workmen will be convinced that a man can get along beautifully on an income of $25,000, of $10,000, of $5,000. And that is true. Only, I doubt very much that business will flourish under these conditions. The lack of work which is a concomitant of every war (until the whole country becomes an ammunition factory and a dependency of the army) will impoverish the workman. No confidence, no initiative. No initiative, no work. The laborer will be dissatisfied, because the captains of industry are dissatisfied. Their loss will not be his gain.

A golden rule would be this: Not to interfere with the business life of the country unless it is absolutely necessary. Do everything to make it stable, but don't shake its foundation, if you can avoid it, and particularly not in the first weeks, the period of transition and assimilation.

This nation is heterogeneous, and therefore no measure should be recommended which has not the effect of uniting the Americans, of whatever origin they may be, to whichever set they may belong. An act of arbitrary discrimination does not unite; it is bound to embitter, to separate, and to dissolve. Such a measure, I read in the paper, "would convince the men who fight that while they were contributing their share to the country's defense all others were being compelled to do the same."

Here we have it again, the abominable doctrine that the poor man pays with his blood, the rich man with his money. I cannot imagine anything more demoralizing than that. Nothing but universal military service will do away with this rotten sophistry, this monstrous mental aberration.

These are some of the practical reasons which throng on you at the first glance, but from the standpoint of principle there is something more to say.

* *

THE foundation of our political building is liberty and equality. "Liberty," Fox said in the famous speech of Dec. 1, 1784, "consists in the safe and sacred possession of a man's property." We know that property must not be made a fetich, that the ideas about property have changed at different periods of human development, that the needs of the nation are more important than the immovability of any institution whatsoever, but all this cannot destroy the fact that property is the base of our individualistic society. Legislative interference on this domain ought to be very cautious. If the operation is "successful" and the patient dies, we don't think very highly of the surgeon. At our present stage of civilization the notion of "property" is so inextricably interwoven with "liberty" that it seems very difficult to separate them.

Our political building is based on that other cornerstone of equality. What else can this equality mean but that rights and duties are the same for every citizen with regard to the state and its law? Equality is an empty word if congress can decree that all the incomes above $100,000 are to be confiscated. That is legalized robbery, and the Supreme court would probably declare the measure unconstitutional, but the very possibility of such plans shows that we are treading the thin crust of a volcano. But such is the trend of modern democracy; and how should it be different?

Bebel said: "We must win the political power and use it to conquer the economical power." The masses will soon be wise enough to understand that they can expropriate the rich without any revolutionary efforts, simply by means of the ballot. But the government ought not to lead the way into the paradise of economical chaos, which will prove a purgatory highly disappointing to those who are preaching the gospel most ecstatically.

* *

WE have heard a lot about social justice in these last years, and especially in the matter of taxation this beautiful phrase turns up again and again. One of the popular catchwords is "progression." But Thiers, in his book "De la Propriété," says trenchantly: "La proportionalité est un principe, mais la progression n'est qu'un odieux arbitraire." (Proportionality is a principle, but progression is only odious arbitrariness.)

If you think that Thiers is obsolete, read Leroy-Beaulieu, who pronounces: "The system of progressional taxation is bad, you may consider it from any standpoint whatsoever." (Traité de la science des finances, vol. I., p. 150.)

Or, if you do not believe the Latin scholar, then listen to the Anglo-Saxon McCulloch: "No taxation of income can be just if it does not leave the single individuals in the same proportion and relation to each other in which it found them. The moment one gives up the main principle—i. e., to take from all those liable to pay taxes the same proportion of their income or fortune—one is, as it were, on the sea without helm and compass and there is no injustice or madness which may not be committed." (Principles of Political Economy.)

If these scholars condemn relatively harmless and universally accepted progression in such unambiguous words, what terms of indignation and disapproval would they use to deprecate an expropriation like the one which now was announced to the stolidly patient American citizen? I defy anybody to tell me about a measure of this despotic and irrational character taken by any European government.

Of course such a decision would be popular with very many people. They feel that political equality is not of very much avail without economical equality, and so they are hailing every leveling law or statute, as it satisfies that greedy and green eyed monster "envy" which lurks at the bottom of our craving for equality. Social justice for the poor! Very well; but where is the social justice for the rich? Is he to be treated as an outlaw? If so, it will be necessary and advisable to found a league for the protection of property against a legislative interference which sooner or later would prove dangerous to the national welfare without relieving the poorer classes.

* *

IF it would have been safe to assume that this "war measure" would remain a single and unrepeated act, one could have submitted silently to this crude radicalism, but the general tendency of which it is a symptom and an outgrowth must be fought. The petty, invidious, short sighted animosity of the masses against "Capital" must be denounced ruthlessly and the richer classes must regain the courage to stand up for their rights and for "fair play." To combat any kind of arbitrariness is much more imperative in this country than in the old countries. The price of liberty is constant suspicion, and we can only dam off the threatening deluge if we in time remember the wisdom of the Roman: Principiis obsta!

AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

Country Facing a Shortage of 'Gas,' Says U. S. Expert

ENGLAND DOES WITHOUT

A cablegram from London last week announced that the British supply of petrol is so short that at the expiration of the current licenses in April none at all will be available for private motors.

THERE seems to be little doubt that motorists will have to pay more in the future for gasoline than they have in the past. This is not necessarily because of any combination, but is simply due to the fact that the demand for gasoline is increasing and the visible supply of oil is decreasing.

Experts say that from 25 to 50 per cent of the oil in the present fields has been taken out. Mr. Williams, consulting petroleum technologist of the bureau of mines, points out that the initial product of the 24,000 new wells completed last year was less than that of half as many of the 14,000 new wells in 1915.

All the evidence indicates a gradual decline of output. At the same time demand is growing, here and abroad, and prices are high.

Exports of mineral oils last year were $201,000,000. Because there are 3,250,000 automobiles in use in the United States and the annual addition to the number is about 25 per cent, Mr. Williams says that unquestionably this country is facing a shortage of gasoline. Improved methods will increase the yield of gasoline from a given quantity of crude oil, but this will not compensate for reduction of output at the sources of supply.

New oil fields may be found, but it cannot reasonably be expected that they will make up for the loss due to the gradual draining and exhaustion of the old ones. It is well known that there has been great waste in the industry. This should be prevented hereafter, if possible, by legislation. There are mining engineers who say that the drilling of wells should be under federal supervision. There should be careful conservation of the oil that remains.

Secretary Daniels said a few weeks ago that when our navy began to use oil fuel it was believed that the domestic supply of petroleum would last for at least fifty years, but only twenty-seven years had been allowed in recent estimates.

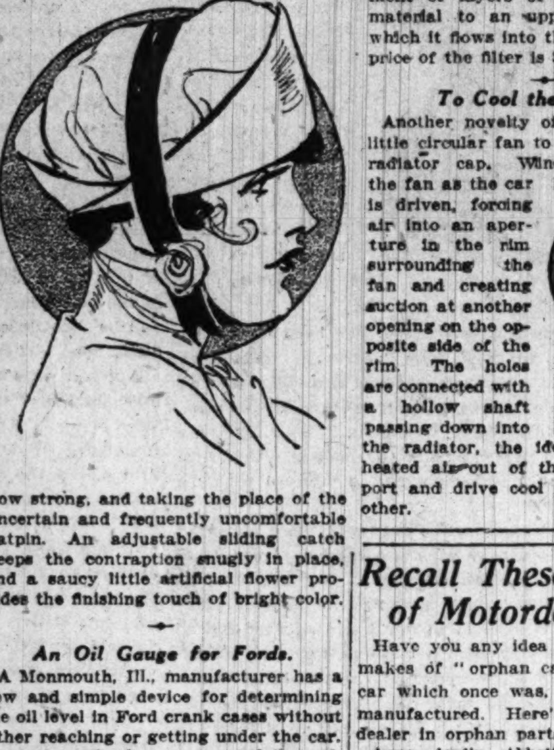
The navy used 842,000 barrels of oil in 1916, and will need almost twice as much this year. Secretary Daniels predicts that 6,700,000 barrels will be consumed six years hence, and war would require multiplication of the estimates by three.

In this connection it might be remarked that Henry Ford is so convinced that some substitute for gasoline will have to be found that he has a whole force of experts experimenting with kerosene and alcohol.

The LITTLE THINGS THAT HELP

When Breezes Blow.

For the woman who motors and likes the little touches that are at once smart and utilitarian, the department stores are displaying a fetching novelty. This is a band of rather narrow black ribbon to be worn under the chin and passing completely over the top of the hat, holding it firmly, baffling any wind, no matter how strong, and taking the place of the uncertain and frequently uncomfortable hatpin. An adjustable sliding catch keeps the contraption snugly in place, and a saucy little artificial flower provides the finishing touch of bright color.



An Oil Gauge for Fords.

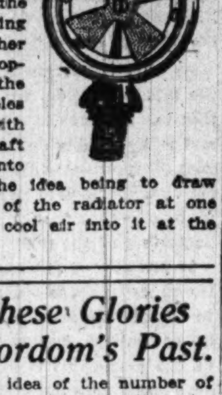
A Monmouth, Ill., manufacturer has a new and simple device for determining the oil level in Ford crank cases without either reaching or getting under the car. It consists of a lever connected through joints with the two petcocks. The lever projects through the mudshield just behind and under the hood, and between mudshield and petcocks it passes through a barrel which contains a spring. A slight pull on the handle opens the petcocks. When it is released the spring closes and locks the petcocks, preventing oil leakage. The device costs $2.

First Aid for Carburetors.

A useful precaution in these days of low grade gasoline is provided in a filter designed to permit only pure, clean fuel to reach the carburetor. Gasoline enters a lower chamber, where all sediment is supposed to be deposited, and from which it may be drawn off through a drain cock. The gasoline then rises through the filtering element of layers of gauze and special material to an upper chamber, from which it flows into the carbureter. The price of the filter is $3.

To Cool the Radiator.

Another novelty of the moment is a little circular fan to be attached to the radiator cap. Wind pressure whirls the fan as the car is driven, forcing air into an aperture in the rim surrounding the fan and creating suction at another opening on the opposite side of the rim. The holes are connected with a hollow shaft passing down into the radiator, the idea being to draw heated air out of the radiator at one port and drive cool air into it at the other.



Recall These Glories of Motordom's Past.

Have you any idea of the number of makes of "orphan cars"? That is, a car which once was, but no longer is, manufactured. Here's a list that one dealer in orphan parts supplies:

Acme, Austin, Abbott, Areocar, Alpena, American, Alco, Argo, Atlas, Barnes, Benham, Bergdoll, Brush, California, Carnation, Cinco, Continental, Carhart, Cartercar, Carthage, Century, Clark, Colby, Courier, Crescent, Cricket, Croxton Keating, Cutting, Dart, Dragon, Dayton, De Luxe, De Tamble, Demot, Durocar, Elmore, Ewing, Everitt, F. Gossip of the Auto Trade

Forty-three gypsies and six dogs in seven Hudson touring cars left Chicago the other day for the south and east, where they will spend the summer. Chief Eli Miller, who knows all about transmissions and differentials, says he's forgotten what the picturesque old time gypsy wagon looked like. Huh! And there's going to be a motorized circus this summer.

◆

Much interest has been shown in a Mercer touring limousine which the Schillo Motor Sales company is showing. A sliding window just abaft the driver's seat is lowered when the owner drives, making a sedan, or raised when the chauffeur is on duty, creating an aristocratically exclusive rear compartment. The car, say its makers, is equally adaptable to town use or long distance touring.

◆

"There is one underlying phase of motoring which is often overlooked," says Max Hagelstine, service manager of the Studebaker corporation. "Yet it is the base of many lubricating troubles. I refer to what is known as gasoline leakage. It is generally caused by a certain amount of mixture which is not burned and finds its way into the crank case, diluting the oil and gradually destroying its lubricating qualities. Motorists can avoid this trouble by the use of a good motor oil and frequent draining of the oil in the crank case."

Artillery Picks France's Motor Roads for Ruin

TO understand the magnitude of the road problem that France will face at the conclusion of the war, one must realize the extent to which shell fire has been concentrated on improved highways to the exclusion of other portions of the landscape.

A returned member of the American ambulance corps, who drove an ambulance for more than a year in the vicinity of Verdun, thus describes the difficulty:

◆

"It is impossible to station big guns at any great distance from an improved road, because the road is necessary in transporting the gun. These guns are usually in concealed situations, but the enemy, by means of aerial observation, soon locates them and commences to shell them. Perhaps the fire gets so hot that they must be moved, in the night. The process of moving means recourse to the highway again in most cases.

◆

"The result is that the highway and its vicinity is under a continual shellfire, even where the prime object is not to damage the road. However, the latter motive usually enters into the calculation. I have seen details of soldiers hard at work patching shell holes in the road, while aeroplanes passing overhead made them a target for hand grenades. That is road work under difficulties."

PAIGE
The Most Beautiful Car in America

THIS new Paige Linwood "Six-39"—in the three months since it was announced—has won a distinction remarkable even for Paige Cars, which year after year establish records for instantaneous popularity.

This new Paige Linwood is already recognized as the most easily sold and the most eagerly bought five-passenger moderate-price motor car on the market. That has been its reception and achievement in three months.

You will find the explanation for this—when you see the Linwood—in the beauty of line and design, in the spacious roominess, in the elegance and comfort of every feature that go to make up luxurious motoring.

You will find the explanation for this in the power and responsiveness of the motor, in the ease of control, in the ease and security and pleasure of driving the Linwood.

The five-passenger Linwood is a blood-brother of the Big Paiges, designed by the same engineers, built of the same high-grade materials and same painstaking workmanship.

ART by Louise James Bargelt

Monticelli Group Now at Institute Full of Imagery

OVER at the Art institute now hang a score of pictures by A. Monticelli, who, at the end of a long life of keenly enjoyed pleasures and indefatigably applied labors, said: "I can still derive an exquisite thrill from a rich yellow or a velvety black. They give me now, as always, my supremest moments."

It is a loan collection, this exhibit, just recently hung, but to enjoy it fully I think one should know something at least of the man himself. With some pictures this is not so. They are not so entirely the reflex of the artist's temperament and self. But with Monticelli he and his pictures are inseparably one. His moods, like living things, still hover about the canvases; his emotions continue to dominate them; after all the years one can feel the ghost of his spirit vaguely, but tangibly, linked with the material creatures it once so feverishly produced.

Monticelli was born in 1824, but when the Barbizon painters of France came to their own Monticelli was forgotten. The French war of 1870 had sent him south back to the land of which he was a natural child. He was wandering from town to town, painting pictures for the food that he ate and the clothes that he wore. The court of France fell and a new France emerged, but Monticelli went on dreaming his dreams of beautiful women and fairy woods and wonderful courts and courtiers.

◆

It was there in the south where he could abandon himself to his temperament, become the plaything of whatever emotion he might choose, away from professional criticism and the stimulation of professional rivalry, that he gave himself up intoxicatedly to playing with color. A true romanticist in every sense of the word, he created rich, sensuous effects in his paintings, produced moods essentially emotional, and mastered his peculiar charm of light, a witchery of gold and red in which he bathed his figures.

Not unlike Diaz is his "Pet Dove," and something of Corot is in his woodland scene "The Lark," but over and above everything else they are Monticellesque. His paintings are full of imagery. Sometimes his figures seem actually to melt into thin air, to dissolve and become as though they were not. If you are fond of Swinburne, whose poems one may read for the pure delight of their sound and the magic of their rhythm, then, too, you will like these paintings for the sheer glory of their color and the poetry of their form.

Monticelli's later life lost much of its gay irresponsibility. He had little money. He was reduced to a garret with actual want stalking constantly beside him. He became lost in his illusions, absinthe hastening his end. Those who knew him said he hung red curtains at his windows and let the sun bathe his room in a warm, red glow. And they added, too, that the very air seemed enchanted by the strange spirit of the man.

◆

This week marks the close of the seven exhibits which have been at the institute for a number of weeks. From a point of view of public interest and popular approval these exhibits have achieved a high water mark of success. It was impossible to chance in the galleries of the new annex at any time when there were not visitors looking eagerly at the Cushings, the Davies, the Gruppes, the Rosens, the Levers and Lawsons, the Peytons, and the sculptoral pieces of Proctor.

Not all of the temporary exhibits will go, however. The Whistler etchings are to remain for some time. The prints by Hokusai, odd blue and white pictures in all variety of fantastic design, now hang in the room adjoining the Monticelli paintings. And the Haney pencil drawings of land and water and human abode in rather primitive forms are still in the corridor outside of the print rooms.

According to the terms of Mr. Lathrop's will the whole collection of Whistlers will eventually become the property of the Art institute.

◆

The exhibition of books by the Caxton club is to last until April 17. There are in all about 100 volumes on the fine arts and related subjects. Books also have been loaned by members of the Ryerson library of the institute, and the majority of the volumes exhibited are of limited editions on hand made paper.

The Young Fortnightly has presented to the institute print department etchings as follows: "Rue Eginhard," by Lester G. Hornby; "Through the Old Gate," by Beatrice S. Levy, and "Cliffside," by Ernest D. Roth. This group of etchings was selected by the print department of the institute.

◆

In response to a number of requests from out of town readers in regard to the lectures and concerts to be held at the institute during April, I will quote the following announced lectures and subjects: Tomorrow Mr. Taft will lecture on Rodin; on Tuesday there will be a concert by the Musicians' club; on Thursday Mr. Taft will speak on "French Sculpture Since 1910," and on Monday, the 9th, on "German Sculpture of Recent Date." On the 10th Charles Francis Browne will lecture on "Early American Portrait Painters," and on the 12th Mr. Taft will speak on "Recent Sculpture of Northern Europe." On the 16th he will speak on "Augustus Saint Gaudens," and on the 17th there will be a concert by members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. On the 19th Mr. Taft will give his lecture on "American Sculpture of Today."

◆

The Sunday concerts at the institute are to conclude on April 29. Following them will be a different series of five concerts under the direction of the Society of American Musicians.

◆

On Thursday evening a reception at the galleries of the Art institute opens the annual architectural exhibition. As has been the custom for some years past, this exhibition is given by the Chicago Architectural club, the Illinois Society of Architects, the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects, and the Art institute.

This is the thirteenth annual exhibition, with its purpose, as before, of presenting to the public a review of the best that is contemporaneous in architectural work. The men in charge of the exhibit claim they have expended every effort to produce the best exhibit ever collected. They have secured the support of the practicing architects of the state, with the end in view of encouraging the general support of the architects as a body. Furthermore, they have endeavored to eliminate a preponderance of exhibitions not having architectural significance without eliminating in any way the various interesting and artistic features which are so closely allied to the profession.

Among the special features of this occasion are to be some rare antiquities of furniture, draperies, and hardware loaned through the courtesy of Martin A. Ryerson and R. T. Crane Jr. A special feature of design has been created as an entrance to the exhibition, which takes the form of an Italian garden. There are also to be some special exhibits selected from the current display which is being held by the Architectural league of New York.

This exhibit is to last until April 25, and recalling the tremendous success of the last year's exhibition, there is every reason to expect really big results from this one.

◆

A new exhibit by the professional members of the Arts Club of Chicago opens tomorrow afternoon.

Name and address

The Lesson of the Border
Says,—"Winther"

WE are ready now to show you the Winther 3½-4 Ton Truck.

We have now in Chicago, available for inspection, a Winther 3½-4 Ton Military Duty Truck.

First: This truck is, beyond question, engineered to a nicety never before found in any other motor truck in the world.

Second: This truck will operate consistently with fewer hours out of service for repairs and maintenance than any other truck in existence.

Winther
Military Duty Truck

THIS BEING TRUE, it is a self-evident fact that the Winther Military Duty 3½-4 Ton Truck makes possible truck operation at lower cost than has ever been the case in the past for a truck of this rated capacity.

THE MARKED SUPERIORITY of Winther Military Duty Trucks does not rest upon our word.

THERE IS A VERY DEFINITE REASON why it stands the "grief" of commercial motor hauling better than any other truck has ever been able to do.

THAT REASON is that this truck alone of all trucks is the result of the lesson learned on the Mexican border, where a half hundred trains of 27 to 33 trucks each, of America's leading builders, were put to such a test as trucks had never before been given, not even on the battlefields of Europe—and all failed.

THE TRUCK which can operate day in and day out over Mexican trails, with excess loads, at high speeds, and remain intact and trouble free from radiator to rear axle, is the truck also which will cut operating costs to the bone in commercial use on Chicago streets.

THIS TRUCK is not to be marketed in the usual way. Inquiries may be addressed to the undersigned with the assurance that you will not be annoyed by salesman's importunities, nor will your mail be cluttered with "literature."

WE ARE READY, however, with our engineers to discuss this truck with interested principals and decide whether it can be of service to you. We are prepared to finance your purchase of this truck if you desire.

Appointments for inspection may be made upon application by phone, letter or wire to our Sales Department.

Morris and Beasly:

"If I'd known she was going to be late I could have finished that last game of pool. Ain't it awful the sacrifices a fellow will make when he's in love? Here she comes now. Gee, but she's a pippin."

"Hello!"

"Leave me alone."

"How much of a loan shall I leave you?"

"You've got a terrible nerve."

"Yes, that's what is giving me toothache."

"You're some kidder."

"And you're some kid. Where are you going?"

"I'm not going. I'm coming back."

"Where from?"

"Work."

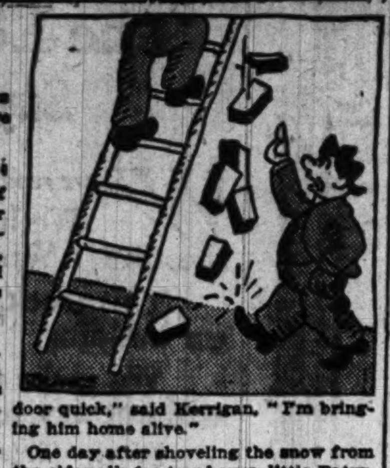
"Is that your lunch box?"

"Why, no; that's a piano I always lug around with me so I can have music with my meals.'"

Harry Breen: Kerrigan is a man of decided likes and dislikes. The other night we were having dinner in a restaurant and I said to him: "Kerrigan, do you like lettuce?" "No, sor, Oi don't," said Kerrigan, "and what's more, Oi'm glad Oi don't, for av Oi did, Oi'd ate it—and Oi hate the stuff."

In his younger days Kerrigan was a bricklayer and once he dropped a hodful of bricks on the foot of a man who was passing. When the man protested, Kerrigan said: "What yer kicking at? Why, I've seen a bloke get killed stone dead and he niver made such a bloomin' fuss as you're doin'."

One time Kerrigan and I spent the summer in the mountains. He wanted to go hunting, so he borrowed a gun and set out in search of a bear. A little while later I spied Kerrigan in the distance running home at full speed with a bear behind him. The bear was gaining on him at every step. "Open the door quick," said Kerrigan. "I'm bringing him home alive."



One day after shoveling the snow from the sidewalk for two hours little Patsy, who lived right next door to Kerrigan, began to cry. "What's the trouble, my little man?" said Kerrigan. "A bad tramp come along and stole the snow shovel from the boy next door." "Well, my lad, it's a very nice thing to be sympathetic," said Kerrigan, "but you mustn't worry so over other people's affairs." "It ain't that," said the boy, "I'm crying because he didn't steal my shovel, too."

The Story of a Great Success

THE STORY OF THE LIBERTY SUCCESS is a story of a square deal to the American people.

Before this car was even on paper, a group of prominent and successful men who had made automobile history saw a definite need not met by any car then being sold.

They knew the American people wanted to get away from the hard work of driving and the discomfort of riding, more or less common to all moderate sized cars.

A SINGLE IDEAL

So they built a car around one single ideal—the owner's interest. Feature after feature was included—features that other cars lacked—until the Liberty had every feature to make it satisfy owners in actual use.

OWNER SATISFACTION POINTS

They included such definite owner "satisfaction points" as the simple chassis design—the heavy, sturdy, five-inch frame—the correct balance, causing it to hold the road under all conditions—the easy steering—the easily operated clutch—the smooth and silent gear shift—the easily operated but powerful brakes—the absolutely reliable emergency brake—the elimination of grease cups—the seats made comfortable by properly shaped upholstery—the easily adjusted curtains—the wide doors—the handy tool compartment—the weather-tight windshield—the easy springs.

A car resulted which drives with the utmost ease.

A car resulted which rides with a long, easy, silent swing—over the roughest roads.

Because this car was so sturdy, so strong, so dependable, so American—they called it the Liberty.

Liberty features of "owner satisfaction" have been so patent that it has only been necessary to mention them and ask that the Liberty be tried out—hard—in comparison with other cars.

PUBLIC HAS BOUGHT THOUSANDS

Thousands of Liberty cars have been sold on this "comparison basis." They have given universal satisfaction. Ask any Liberty owner and the answer will always be the same: "The best car I ever owned." Ask any Liberty dealer and he will tell you: "We handle the Liberty with the lowest service cost of any car in our line."

This is the story of Liberty success—a story of a square deal to the American people.

THE CAR YOU WANT

This is the sort of car you want—one designed from the first to satisfy you by delivering miles in comfort economically and well—the one car including all features of owner interest.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

APRIL

Early April.

THE slow processes of spring are tediously undramatic to folk who have lived their fill of February. Such snow and wind weary people, who have begun to feel the confinement of the four walls and who want open casements through which comes the evening song of the thrush, giving twilight a voice, the night song of the hylas, giving darkness a melody, and the cry of the whippoorwill, giving midnight its threnody — such people, weary, ask that spring be dynamic and certain.

They ask that it break through the frost and appear radiant and resolute, unwavering and determined, to proceed by unfaltering processes from hepatica and bluebirds to wild roses and tanagers, without a waver in purpose or a hesitation in accomplishment.

The greater drama is in the slow sureness of undemonstrative progress. A violent force is wonderful in the instant of its explosive violence. But more wonderful is the tightening grip of a steadfast power which is so sure that it does not need violent effort for expression.

The new hollyhock leaves showing where the snow has lately gone are more dynamic than a sudden burst of violets. The blossoms of the alder, lengthening and developing their pollen in the new strength of the sun, are more wonderful than an upspringing of May apples. And the voice of spring, the unconquerable voice of the great change, is the song of a meadow lark in a field upon which, after a night of skirl and flurry in early April, a fresh fall of snow lies.

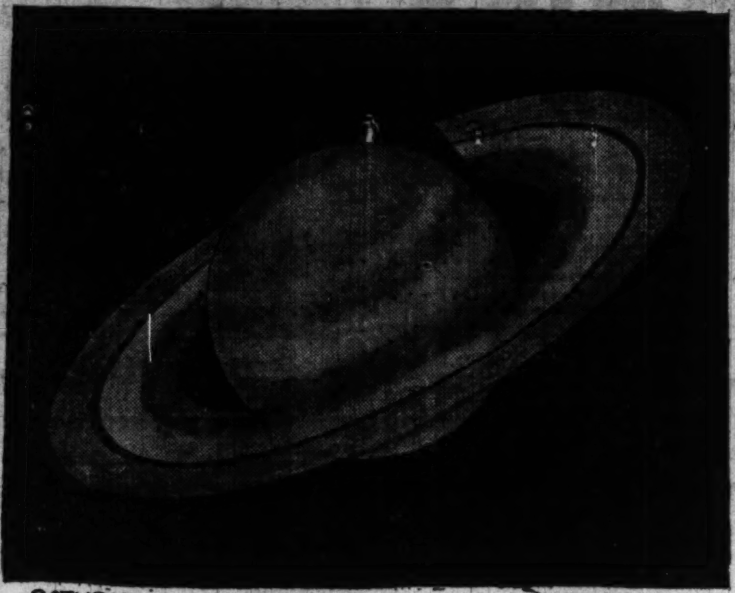
ASTRONOMY

by CLIFFORD RAYMOND



SATURN — OBSERVED MARCH 24, 1917, 8:30 P.M. DRAWN BY S. F. MAXWELL.

SATURN, THE GAS AND LIQUID WORLD.

SATURN is part sun, part world. It does not give light and heat, but it has a steaming, heavy atmosphere and may be regarded as a world at its birth. It has gone through the processes of inorganic evolution, from the simplicity of gases to the complexities of metals, and, celestial terms, is nearing the time when, if other conditions than conditions of composition, were favorable to organic evolution, the beginnings of life might find their simplest forms.

It could not support life now. Its resemblance to a sun would prevent that. Saturn is different from any other objects to be observed in the sky. Its rings alone are enough to give it distinction, but for the present purposes of discussion it is wonderfully interesting as the illustration of the period in inorganic evolution when a world has almost been prepared for whatever experience it might have with organic life.

In it can be seen a period of this earth before organic life was constituted in the simplest forms out of the constituents of air and sea water. The elements constituting sea water and air are the elements constituting the living being—oxygen, nitrogen, carbon, hydrogen, sodium, potassium, phosphorus, sulphur, calcium, magnesium, iron, and silicon.

"These are the elements created in the processes of inorganic evolution. They are the elements found in the highest types produced in organic evolution. The simple beginnings of them are found in the hottest star, in the type of sun which has a heat of 30,000 degrees centigrade. The complex results of them are found in the human being.

What was begun when meteors bombarding a dark sun transformed it into gases revealed in a nebula finds its expression in the life on the earth. Organic evolution which produces and develops life is a continuation of the inorganic evolution which has been traced from the hottest stars to the cooled world. "We are akin to the stars."

Saturn's rings, which make it in appearance a celestial object unlike any other in the heavens, are 173,000 miles across and are composed of moonlets and dust particles. The planet is next to Jupiter in size and is almost twice as far from the sun as the larger planet. In development it is the youngest of the sun's system, with no solids, but with liquids and gases.

Vaudeville Wit.

"Can I see you home?"

"You can if your eyesight is good, but my mother doesn't approve of my meeting young men on street corners."

"Your mother is right. After this, we'll meet in the middle of the block."

"And, besides, we've never been properly introduced."

"I'm taking the same chances you are."

"Sir!"

"I'm the only son of a man who's made all kinds of money."

"Honest?"

"What's the difference as long as he's made it?"

Pslams of Life

by J. P. McEvoy

A DIPLOMATIC MOVE.

My missus is a lovesome thing
When she is feeling gentle,
Her smile is as the smile of spring
Upon the lowly lentil;
She sympathizes with my woes,
She soothes me when I'm puny,
And bears with me although she knows
I'm cracked and also loony.

My missus is a lovesome thing,
My verse she does admire;
She always lets me have my fling
(God help him, he's a liar!),
My guide, philosopher, and friend
In every quirk and quand'ry,
And never does she fail to send
My collars to the laundry.

My missus is a lovesome thing,
She comforts and caresses,
And only in the fall and spring
She buys expensive dresses;
A gracious wife, a regular pal,
And cute as Mary Minter. . . .
(I hope this verse will square me up
For banqueting all winter.)

586.8 Miles

Through the Heart of Chicago

---in 24 Hours---

A Typical Chalmers Performance

At 12 noon Monday, March 26, a stock Chalmers seven-passenger touring car with first and second gears removed, was started north on Michigan Boulevard through Chicago traffic.

At noon Tuesday, March 27, the Chalmers was stopped at the starting point. It had gone 586.8 miles through Chicago's densest traffic. The motor had never been stopped. Nothing but high gear was used.

To prove conclusively Chalmers flexibility on high gear, the low and intermediate gears were removed from the transmission.

The car was a standard Chalmers seven-passenger touring model, complete with standard body, top and full equipment. The same model you can buy today.

An average of 14 miles per gallon of gasoline was attained, an excellent example of Chalmers economy.

586.8 miles, most of which through the famous congested Chicago "loop" district, is a wonderful feat. This performance on high gear is even more wonderful. It is without an equal.

It is an indorsement of the motor. It proves Chalmers reliability. It demonstrates Chalmers cooling. It shows Chalmers flexibility and perfect control. It is a new achievement.

A condensed summary of the signed certificate issued by the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association, under whose supervision the test was made, is reproduced below.

> New York, March 29.—This is to certify that the Chalmers seven-passenger car above mentioned was a fully equipped stock car. It was driven for 24 hours through Chicago traffic. Only high gear was used. The motor was never stopped during the run. The mileage obtained was 586.8 miles. The gasoline consumption was an average of 14 miles per gallon.

Some Other Chalmers Achievements

Chicago to New York
On June 7, 1916, a Chalmers stock car shattered all existing road records between Chicago and New York, making the run of 1,047 miles in 31 hours. The best previous time was made by a Packard, driven by F. C. Patterson, whose time was 35 hours, 43 minutes.

Dallas to San Antonio
Another famous train—the Katy Limited—was beaten by a Chalmers between Dallas and San Antonio. The Chalmers made the run in 9 hours and 22 minutes—1 hour and 33 minutes faster than train time.

Giant's Despair Mountain Climb
On October 6, 1916, a Chalmers captured the free-for-all event at the Wilkes-Barre hill climb on Giant's Despair mountain, winning the $1,000 Hollenbeck Trophy and defeating four 12-cylinder cars, several well-known racing creations and many of the highest priced and highest-powered American cars.

Detroit to Indianapolis
On June 12, 1916, the Chalmers set a new record over the roads between Detroit and Indianapolis, 305 miles, making the trip in eight hours, 23 minutes.

Atlanta to Chattanooga
June 24, 1916, a Chalmers lowered all records between Atlanta and Chattanooga. The distance of 125 miles was covered in 3 hours, 53 minutes. This is faster than the time of the Dixie Flyer, the fastest railroad train of the south.

Wins Pike's Peak Climb
August 11, 1916, a Chalmers carried off first honors in the 230 cubic inch class on the terrific grades of Pike's Peak in Colorado. Its time was within a few seconds of much higher-powered, and specially built machines.

The Chalmers seven-passenger touring car used in this non-stop run is on display in our showroom windows. With it are a few handsome Chalmers trophies. We have duplicates of this type Chalmers ready for immediate delivery.

EMERGENCY SALE

The contractors agreed to have our additional floor ready for our big opening by April 2d, but they have disappointed us. It will not be complete before 10 days or 2 weeks. Meanwhile we are overloaded with a tremendous stock of Bedroom, Dining Room and Living Room Furniture, which must be disposed of regardless of cost, on account of lacking the proper space to display our Furniture and Rugs. This will enable you to save 25% to 50%. Buy now, if you need anything this Spring.

GROUND FLOOR

The New Orleans Great Northern Railway opens for farm settlement the immense acreage of the great lumber company lands along its lines in Mississippi and Louisiana.

Growing towns, churches, schools, lumber companies, shipbuilding, turpentine distilleries, pine oil, and paper mills have sprung up all along the line of the railroad, but timber being the chief asset, the land itself, regardless of its great agricultural worth, has been carried on the books at a mere nominal value.

As the timber is being cut and the stumps and discarded tree trunks and limbs in the logging field are being ground into pulp for pine oil, turpentine, and the manufacture of paper, an immense acreage of virgin land close in to the railroad, towns, factories, churches, and schools is being left for farm occupation.

Unless the railroad settles these lands with farmers it will fail to provide for a chief source of revenue when the timber is gone, and the railroad, with its future means of support materially at stake, will therefore afford every aid in the matter of prices, terms, and co-operation in obtaining settlers on the land.

WRITE WALTER S. AYRES, INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER, N. O. G. N. Ry., 864 McCormick Bldg., Chicago, Ill., how to obtain first hand a desirable farm out of this great body of cheap virgin land.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

CITY VS. COUNTRY

MANY A FARMER BOY would be better off if he had stuck by the farm. The young man from the country often has to accept a menial position in the industrial life of the city. Driving a trolley car in the city is by no means so independent or rewarding a pursuit as that of the young farmer who hauls his load of milk to the near-by station. In the city he finds to his great delight that he is getting more wages than ever before, but soon discovers that he is in the grip of high prices and that everything he uses he has to buy, with net results in actual dollars saved in favor of the country.

INDEPENDENCE, MOREOVER, is enjoyed by the farmer more than by the city man. The farmer has a profitable business of his own. Most city men work for some one else.

NOR DOES THE FARM RENTER progress so fast as a farm owner. He has to pay a large portion of his profits to the land owner for rent. The farm owner is the man who gets ahead fastest. Spring is here! It is the time to investigate and buy land. Get busy and secure a farm home of your own!

I AM MAKING IT POSSIBLE for any one with a little ambition to own a farm. My lands in Michigan's Fruit and Clover Belt cost only $15 to $25 an acre. My terms are very liberal; $25 to $100 down, $7 to $15 a month for 40 acres, and lower terms for smaller tracts. The lands are located in Manistee, Mason, Lake, Wexford, Kalkaska, and Antrim Counties, near good markets, towns, schools, etc. The soil is good for clover, rye, oats, wheat, buckwheat, ninety day corn, vetch, potatoes, beans, and all root crops. Poultry, cattle, sheep, hogs, pay well here. In the production of its apples, pears, plums, and cherries Michigan is one of the leading states. I employ agricultural advisers to show new settlers the best methods of farming for our district.

INQUIRE ABOUT the feature in my contracts which insures your life while you are purchasing the farm.

NEXT EXCURSION to the lands occurs Tuesday, April 10. PRIVATE CARS. Round trip from Chicago, including meals, berth, and automobile trip over the lands, $12.95.

WRITE AT ONCE for my 72-page booklet giving complete information about my lands, or call for it if you can and get a large map, and see samples of 1916 crops and stereopticon views. Office open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

FOR SALE—

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO OWN

A TEN ACRE POULTRY AND FRUIT GARDEN IN A COMMUNITY WHERE THERE HAS NEVER BEEN A FAILURE?

WHERE friendly supervision and co-operation keep you from making mistakes.

WHERE there is already established a successful poultry plant with a housing capacity of 12,000 birds, with an incubator capacity of 10,000 eggs.

WHERE the company takes care of the two most hazardous and expensive features for you, namely, breeding and hatching. You devote your time to eggs and your garden.

WHERE the company will build your home, your poultry plant, set out your orchard, clear your ground, fence your property, furnish you baby chicks and feed for them, and teach you how to care for them and be a real "SUCCESS" in the poultry business.

WHERE the company purchases right at your door everything you can produce at the highest market prices. You don't have to worry about selling your products.

If this sounds good, do yourself justice—come up and investigate. Let us show you a "HOME" proposition that is "DIFFERENT." Let us prove to your absolute satisfaction that we HAVE DONE what others HAVE PROMISED. Let us show you this mammoth poultry plant and greenhouse. Let us show you our hotel and community house, capable of accommodating 200 guests—not a RESORT HOTEL, but a real hotel, with baths and everything that a modern hotel should have, and, best of all, let us introduce you to over six hundred satisfied owners of gardens in this big, happy community.

If you think you would like to own ten acres in this community and pay for it on small monthly payments, come up and let us show you a thousand feet of moving pictures of the property.

At any rate, send for our booklet, "Chicks and Cherries." It tells you a lot of things you should know about commercial poultry farming.

Remember, we have no failures here. The company has spent its own money on the necessary experiments—you don't have to spend yours that way. Come up and see us.

FOR SALE—NEW FARM OPPORTUNITY IN ONE OF THE GREATEST STATES IN THE UNION. A new line of the Santa Fe is tapping a rich and fertile prairie section of Northwest Texas, near the Oklahoma line, where already many farmers have MADE GOOD in a big way with wheat, hogs, and live stock. Here, if you ACT NOW, you can get first choice—get in on the ground floor of a great opportunity. You can get in AHEAD of the railway—ahead of the people whom the railway will bring—ahead of those who act more slowly than you do. This is the chance of a lifetime for a man of moderate means. A certain number of thrifty, farseeing farmers can acquire good land at an astonishingly low figure and on long, easy terms. If you have confidence that a great railroad, like the Santa Fe, would only recommend what it considers a good thing, and because it wants to see new territory developed and wants newcomers to PROSPER and PRODUCE—then write me TODAY for particulars about this district. Mild climate, social advantages, schools, churches, telephones, good roads. Everything there but enough men with their families. Will you be one of the fortunate first comers to reap the advantages of a section that has been minutely inspected by a Santa Fe agricultural agent and pronounced RIGHT? Write me NOW and let me send you a copy of the special illustrated circular we are getting out. C. L. SEAGRAVES, 1105 Railway Exchange, Chicago.

CADILLAC
Rebuilt Automobiles.

BUYING A REBUILT AND GUARANTEED CADILLAC FROM US ELIMINATES THE SPECULATIVE ELEMENT OFTEN ASSOCIATED WITH THE PURCHASE OF A USED CAR.

BY REBUILT WE MEAN THAT THE CAR HAS BEEN TAKEN ENTIRELY APART, EACH PART EXAMINED, AND, IF NECESSARY, REPLACED WITH A NEW PART MADE AT THE CADILLAC FACTORY. THE ENTIRE CAR REPAINTED AND REFINISHED LIKE NEW, ALL EQUIPMENT PUT IN FIRST CLASS CONDITION. THE ENTIRE CAR, IN FACT, CAREFULLY RECONSTRUCTED UNTIL IT IS AS GOOD AS NEW IN EVERY DETAIL.

WE WILL HOLD A SPECIAL EXHIBITION OF THESE CARS THIS WEEK, BOTH IN STANDARD AND SPECIAL FINISHES AND IN A VARIETY OF BODY STYLES.

HER LOCHINVAR MARRIES HER DESPITE THEFT

Dixie Carter, the Department Store Girl, Escapes Trap.

Dixie Carter came to Chicago about a year ago, very bravely, to earn her own living. She hadn't much of an idea of how to go about it, but she liked pretty clothes, and she finally got a position in a State street department store, where she worked hard all day helping lovely and unlovely ladies to buy heaps of beautiful dresses.

Dixie never had any beautiful dresses herself. There was a nice young man back in the southern town Dixie came from, who was trying very hard to earn enough to buy her the pretty things she craved. He had saved enough to give her a diamond ring, which she was never, never to part with, and which she cried over on lonely nights in her dingy little room on Clark street.

The Well Dressed Woman.

Then one day a well dressed woman whom Dixie had sometimes waited on spoke to her confidentially over the counter something like this:

"Now, Dearie, I don't mean no offense, but you ought to have some doll clothes. Nix on this simple style. You can't get by with it in Chicago. Now I'm the head of the department store where I work, and I picked up a dream the other day that'll just suit you. It don't look good on me, and I'm goin' to give it to you."

Dixie wanted a new dress, and she went with the generous stranger. When the gown was safely on the victim's back and out of the store from which it had been thus calmly taken, she was informed that she was wearing stolen goods, and that she must obey orders. Dixie was honest, but terrified. Before she could sum up courage to return the goods she and 19 other pretty young department store saleswomen were arrested as members of Rose Schlessinger's gang of shoplifters.

Released on Probation.

The innocent appearance of Dixie and her story led to her release on probation, but she was not satisfied. She came of a family of Puritans, and she must inflict some self-torture to atone for her sin in loving finery. She gave up her diamond engagement ring as payment of her fine, and then wrote to the young man that she was "disgraced for life," and he was free.

The young man had just had a "raise." He put another diamond ring in his pocket, telegraphed Dixie that he didn't care what she was, she must be Mrs. Niceyoungman, caught the next train, and married Dixie on his arrival in Chicago.

A "friend at court" got the young woman permission to leave the state, and she went back with her husband to the little town where she came from, where, a letter just received says, she will live happily ever afterward. Her name never was Dixie Carter at all. The real name mustn't be told, for her mother's sake.

The "villainess" of this story also got away from town and is still being looked for by the police, but another member of her gang will be tried in the Criminal court in a few days.

Produce "Dips" at Once, Irate Judge Tells Cop

William Gilhooly and George Williams, pickpockets, failed to appear before Judge Barrett yesterday, where they were accused, with "Mickie" Frank, of trying to fix a jury in a murder trial. Lieut. James V. Larkin reported his failure to arrest them.

"These men are plying their trade right in the loop," said the judge angrily to Lieut. Larkin. "You get them in here by Monday."

NOTHIN' DOIN'

Denies She Is to Wed, Though License Bears Her Name.

Miss Mae Kolb, who has been conspicuous as a member of the Illini club, declined to admit last night that she is going to be married. She would not admit she is the Mae Kolb for whom a marriage license was issued yesterday. But the marriage license record reads: "Bryce Smith, 28, 849 Sheridan road; Mae Kolb, 24 years old." Miss Kolb was called on the telephone and she said: "Nothin' doin'."

1 DEAD, 1 HURT, AS AIR BLAST WRECKS PLANT

Engineer Killed When Dredging Company Tank Explodes.

An explosion of a compressed air tank killed an engineer, dangerously wounded a fireman, and totally destroyed, with a loss of $50,000, the plant of the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company yesterday at 1092 North Branch street.

Daniel Weise, the engineer killed, was caught in burning wreckage and could not be extricated. Streams from the fire hose were played upon him in an effort to keep back the blaze while rescuers could make headway, but it was without avail.

Burned and Crushed.

When the firemen reached Weise he was so badly burned and his skull so crushed that he died in the ambulance. He had been with the company for eighteen years and lived at 222 North Fairfield avenue.

Joseph Tomichke, a fireman, living at 1415 Augusta street, was thrown more than forty feet by the force of the explosion. He was removed to the Alexian Brothers' hospital, where it was said he is in a critical condition.

Building Demolished.

The building of the dredge and dock company was one story in height and extended from 1106 to 1200 North Branch street. In the building was a huge compressed air tank, used for purposes of light and power. It was said this tank had been subjected to too high a pressure.

The explosion rocked the entire building and wrecked it so that a complete reconstruction will be required, it was said.

ASKS INVESTORS IN MEXICO TO ENTER PROTEST

Alexander Heyman, an attorney in the Marquette building, is about to issue an appeal to the people of Chicago who have interests in Mexico, in the hope that concerted action may be taken to protect their interests there.

Mr. Heyman is secretary of a mining company that has been operating near Durango, Mexico.

"It is seemingly useless to try to do anything with our interests in Mexico," said Mr. Heyman, "and we even cannot get satisfaction from the office of the secretary of state. An edict has been issued giving a limited time to begin operations, and if this is not done the property is confiscated.

"The only way we have been able to pay our taxes is through the British consul at Durango, and even then we are tied up. There is nearly $25,000,000 of Chicago investors' money tied up there."

26,466 Families Added to Chicago in 1916

The 1916 report of Le Roy T. Steward, superintendent of mail delivery in Chicago, made public yesterday, shows that in 1916 Chicago's families increased by 26,466, Chicago's buildings by 10,464, and Chicago firms by 367. The largest number of families are served by the Humboldt postoffice, through which 39,519 families get their mail. Chicago postal service covers an area of 20.19 square miles and reaches 343,537 buildings, 719,232 families, and 13,406 firms. The Ravenswood district showed the largest increase.

1917 TO BE YEAR UNPRECEDENTED IN PROSPERITY

Auto Output Increasing—Stocks, Bonds Soaring—Consumer the Goat.

BY MARK WATSON.

New York, March 31.—Harbingers of 1917 industrial activity are numerous and they point to another year of industrial prosperity so enormous that even the unprecedented figures of 1916 will be eclipsed—unless international developments force a different conclusion.

Six of the leading automobile companies have made their forecasts for the current fiscal year, three of them corresponding with the calendar year, the other three ending Dec. 31. Every one of the six promises a great increase over last year's output, one more than doubling its production.

1,450,000 CARS.

Nearly all have raised the price, but uniformly they declare the advance is not great enough to cover the increase in labor and material charges. Their aggregate output last year was 990,000 cars. This year they promise to put out 1,450,000 cars, an increase of nearly 50 per cent in number and much more in aggregate value.

Steel production is now at its height and last year's unprecedented figures are likely to be passed long before the end of the year. Ignoring the matter of volume, which depends to a great extent on traffic conditions, fuel supply, and the like, prices are now 45 per cent higher than a year ago, and everything indicates still further advances. The heads of the largest steel companies predict much heavier earnings on their stocks.

$7,000,000 INCREASE.

In the realm of copper comment is not required further than to point to the figures published today showing dividend payments on leading copper stocks. Last year's distributions established a new high record, but progress in the first quarter of this year points to the establishment of another record.

The distribution in March, 1916, was $20,160,000. This last month it was $27,650,000. In the first three months of last year it totaled $29,600,000. In the corresponding period of 1917 it reached $45,300,000.

GREAT RAILROAD ERNINGS.

Dividends of the Standard Oil companies in the first quarter reached the unprecedented total of $23,126,000, excluding a $7,500,000 stock dividend by one of the group. The "independent" oils have for the most part been distributing dividends on the highest scale in their history.

That the railroads are piling up the greatest gross earnings of their history is well known. At present their net revenue is under that of last year, but the promised relief from the interstate commerce commission will help out this situation.

Exports are establishing new high records. Every industry, practically, is doing a record business in 1917 and getting higher prices. That last is the rub. The man who is paying for the prosperity is the ultimate consumer. He, as usual, is the goat.

ALDERMAN HIT FOR $15,000 FOR AUTO INJURIES

Fritz A. Eck, a motorman of 934 Newport avenue, was awarded a verdict of $15,000 for injuries in an automobile accident in 1915. A jury before Judge Kavanagh of the Superior court decided that Ald. Walter Schuett of Evanston had inflicted injury upon the motorman on the night of March 10, 1915, and should pay that sum.

The accident happened in Howard avenue at the end of the Clark street line in Evanston, where eight street cars were standing. The men took down the number of the automobile, which led to the arrest of the alderman.

Eck was adjusting the lever at the switch when an automobile struck him, breaking both legs, some fingers, and, according to evidence, injuring his brain. He has worked only six months since.

Ald. Schuett is expected to appeal.

MRS. HANAFORD OF EVANSTON GETS DIVORCE

Mrs. Annabelle Hanaford of 1241 Emerson street, Evanston, who charged that her husband sought to make her a domestic in the home of his wealthy parents in New York, was granted a divorce from Roy Forbush Hanaford yesterday by Judge Thomson. The suit was not contested. Mrs. Hanaford receives $500 alimony.

They were married in St. Joseph, Mich., June 25, 1909. Mrs. Hanaford is the daughter of Mrs. Matilda von Segerlund of Evanston.

Mrs. Ethel Harrington, 810 Clark street, Evanston, her sister, and Miss Louise Cardott, who lives with the latter, were witnesses for Mrs. Hanaford. Mrs. Harrington filed a bill for divorce last January on the same day Mrs. Hanaford filed hers.

Move South Water Street to City Pier, He Suggests

A plan of transforming the freight floor of the municipal pier into a gigantic fruit and vegetable terminal was suggested yesterday by O. K. Earl, a commission merchant, in a letter to Commissioner of Public Works Frank I. Bennett.

Mr. Earl says the city could derive an annual rental of $500,000 if space on the freight floor of the pier is let to wholesale commission men. In this way, he wrote, South Water street would be practically moved to the pier and congestion in the downtown district would be relieved. Access to the pier could be had by boat and by rail with freight car ferries.

Mr. Bennett said that he had not considered the matter.

Trade in wheat futures was uneven yesterday with the market extremely nervous. Resting spots showed May delivery ⅝c lower than previous close, while deferred months were ⅜c higher. Selling of May against purchases of July wheat was done on a considerable scale and was chiefly responsible for the relative weakness of the near delivery. All futures displayed early strength and later reacted sharply, May at one time being 2⅞c under previous close. Houses with eastern connections were free sellers on the bulge.

Local shorts became too aggressive on the selling side, however, and when some good buying appeared near the finish they made a rush to cover, causing the final rally. Buying of May and some July wheat by Updike was a late feature.

Wheat Reports Unfavorable.

Many unfavorable crop reports from the winter wheat belt again reached the trade. The most alarming conditions were reported in Kansas and Nebraska, as has been the case recently. However, the forecast is for probable showers in Kansas, while many of the agricultural experts in Nebraska claim that the crop is not as badly injured as generally believed, and they advise farmers to wait for a week or so before plowing up more fields.

Winnipeg advices were to the effect that planting of spring wheat in the Canadian northwest this year will be much earlier than usual under favorable weather conditions, although labor was scarce. Export demand for wheat yesterday was lighter with no material business reported. Clearances for the day were 113,000 bu, against 1,026,000 bu a year ago. Primary receipts were 1,188,000 bu, against 1,050,000 bu last year.

Corn at Higher Range.

Corn ranged higher and finished with net advances of ⅛@⅝c. There was active buying of May corn by Bartlett-Frazier and the Armour grain concern, but general trade yesterday was much lighter than on the previous session. Fair selling was done by houses with eastern connections. The market was helped by the strength in cash corn, latter selling at better premiums for choice grades. Prices in the sample market were steady to ½c higher. No shipping sales were reported. The southwest markets were not so strong, however; in fact, Kansas City reported a weakening of premiums.

Foreign advices on corn were bullish and the Argentine crop returns are reported as discouraging. Seaboard clearances of corn for the day were 246,000 bu. Oklahoma report for April makes farm reserves of corn 17 per cent, against 27 per cent a month ago. Primary receipts totaled 789,000 bu, against 599,000 bu a year ago.

Oats Display Firmness.

Oats were rather firm and closed around best prices. Resting spots showed net gains of ¼@⅜c for the active months, while September was fractionally lower. The Armour concern was a good buyer of May oats early. Toward the end the market was helped by the rally in wheat. Cash oats were steady, with local shipping sales 5,000 bu. A good eastern and southern demand for cash oats was reported. Clearances for the day were 17,000 bu. Primary receipts totaled 905,000 bu, against 532,000 bu a year ago. London oats advanced 2s 9d and price now is equal to nearly $1.55 per bu.

Provisions ruled easier. Realizing sales hel dprices down and general trade was moderate. There was some fairly good buying on the dips. Local meat shipments for the week were 17,663,000 lbs, compared with 16,961,000 lbs a year ago, while lard shipments were 6,462,000 lbs, against 6,607,000 lbs a year ago.

Further Loss in Rye

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

Sentiment in wheat was a good deal mixed yesterday. May sold off more than the July and there was some undoing of spreads by cash interests who sold the May and bought the July. There was not so much pressure on the July on account of the indicated rains as expected and shorts were forced to cover easily. In the last hour short covering following a little commission house support recovered most of the early losses. It is understood private reports on the condition of winter wheat will be given out Monday and will be bullish. There was no particular change in the character of the news from Nebraska and Kansas.

Cash sales of wheat were only 5,000 bu. Cash prices were firm here and weak in the northwest. Receipts at Minneapolis continue unexpectedly heavy, and it is understood considerable Canadian wheat is being bought by northwest mills. The seaboard reports did not indicate much of any new business, but prices were firm for wheat at the gulf and also at the seaboard. Minneapolis reported about 200 cars of Canadian wheat in the day's receipts.

A Winnipeg wire to Clement-Curtis said: "Conditions in regard to spring work on the farms generally indicate an advance as compared with last year. In reply to long distance inquiries made by the Free Press yesterday it was learned that farmers in the Brandon district will be able to bed in their plowing and seeding within a week or so, especially in the higher lands. This would be a fortnight earlier than in former years. There is an abundance of moisture and the warm weather is working to advantage."

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 60,000 bu for one day. Kansas City stocks of wheat decreased 607,000 bu for the week.

Reports from Sullivan county, Ind., were bullish, some estimates placing crop promise at about 50 per cent.

The Oklahoma April report, as wired by King of Toledo, makes the condition of winter wheat 76, against 71 in March and 67 a year ago. Condition at harvest last year was 61. Farm reserves were placed at 3 per cent wheat, against 5 per cent in March; corn, 17 per cent, against 27 per cent in March; oats, about 9 per cent. The northwest part of the state needs rain.

In regard to the seeding of spring wheat in Nebaska Winters of Hulburd-Warren-Chandler had the following from Omaha: "There will not be any general seeding of spring wheat, as it is too late to get the seed. The country wanted spring wheat contingent on delivery within a certain time. This could not be promised nor the seed guaranteed."

No. 3 grades of corn were 2½@3c over the May, the cash market showing no weakness relative to the futures. No sales of corn were reported and oats sales were only 15,000 bu, the general cash trade being extremely light. Offerings from the country were a little larger from some sections. The car supply for shipment east is still limited.

Nebraska reports were bad yesterday, some of the advices indicating nearly a total loss in the southern sections of the state. In the north the outlook is better, but the general condition for the state is said to be extremely discouraging.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 39 cars; corn, 111 cars; oats, 203 cars; rye, 5 cars; barley, 18 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 36,000 head, and for all next week 135,000 head.

Minneapolis reported a slower demand for all grades of wheat. Several of the mills were practically out of the market. No. 1 northern blue stem was quoted 10@18c over May.

The rate of interest for April, 1917, has been fixed by the finance committee at 6 per cent.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, March 31.—The cotton market showed a decidedly firmer tone today. Liquidation was much less active after the heavy selling of yesterday and prices recovered about half of yesterday's loss, with May selling up to 18.99c and October to 17.87c. The close was several points off from the best under realizing, but the tone was very steady at a net gain of 5 to 17 points. The week end figures showed comparatively small spinners' takings, but there was an increase in the amount on shipboard, which led to expectations of increased exports. There seemed to be no change of sentiment as to the probable action of congress next week, but it was urged around the ring that nervousness over possible political developments had already found a pretty full reflection in the trading of the past week. Sales of print cloth at Fall River for the week were estimated at 400,000 pieces, against 180,000 for the same week last year. Port receipts today were 19,979 bales; for the season, 6,226,046. Exports today, 26,744; for the season, 4,333,266; stock, 1,191,568. Futures:

The hog market opened strong on fresh receipts of only 11,000 head, but packers refused to follow the trend of the market and prices closed 10c lower than on Friday in the absence of strong support from eastern shippers. The latter took only 1,500 hogs. Best sales were made at $15.55, although $15.60 was bid and refused early. The bulk made $15.15@15.45. Packers bought 9,700 hogs at the low prices in force late and about 5,500 were carried over unsold.

Final prices made hogs largely 35@40c higher than a week ago, while pigs showed a gain of 25c. The average price of all hogs here this week was placed at $15.10, a new high record, and compared with $15.00 last week. Receipts for the week aggregated around 142,000 and showed an increase of 33,000, although standing 7,000 short of arrivals for the same week a year ago.

CATTLE.

With the exception of choice beeves, beef cattle at Chicago this week closed at a decline of 15@25c from a week ago. Cows and heifers were 10@15c lower, while calves suffered a loss of $1.00@1.50. Receipts of the latter were among the largest on record, and the break in values was a logical consequence. Receipts of beef cattle also showed a substantial increase, and the reduction in prices, which was largely a readjustment after the inflated values enforced during the unsettlement of marketings because of the railroad difficulties, was conservative. The market closed in a healthy condition, with the trade looking forward to healthier and more satisfactory operations this coming week.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week, 175,500, against 119,400 the preceding week, 141,400 a year ago, and 113,100 two years ago. Total for 1917 to date, 2,145,000, against 1,894,000 the same period in 1916.

SHEEP.

Sheep closed on a firm basis and 10@15c higher than a week ago, while lambs showed a gain of 15@25c. Receipts for the week showed a moderate increase, which was more than offset by enlarged shipments and more aggressive buying by local killers. Record prices were made and well maintained, the market closing in a healthy condition at the advance. Lambs topped the week at $15.70 and sheep at $13.00.

In Foreign Stock Markets.

LONDON, March 31.—The stock exchange had a quiet session today, with base metal shares a feature of strength, especially Australian. A fair business was transacted in home funds at steady prices except the 4½ per cent war loan, which was weak on reports of a large amount of stock unconverted. Foreign bonds were irregular. The American department was quiet and featureless. Rubber shares were easy in sympathy with the commodity. Money in good supply. Discount rates quiet. Bar silver, 36½d per ounce; money, 3¾ per cent; discount rates, short bills, 4¾ per cent; three months, 4¾ per cent.

PARIS, March 31.—Trading was quiet on the bourse today. Rentes, 61f 35c; exchange on London, 27f 81c; 5 per cent loan, 88f 30c.

Erie Railroad.

G. M.—The Erie Railroad company for years has been devoting all earnings to betterments and has reached a high state of operating efficiency. In 1915 it earned almost $7,400,000 over fixed charges and stockholders began to see dividends in the near future. In 1916, however, operating expenses and taxes grew, and although gross earnings increased by over $7,000,000 net decreased by $2,316,361. Interest and sinking fund charges increased and the surplus applicable to dividends was only $4,580,581. This works out at about 1¾ per cent on common stock. Recently a blanket mortgage was authorized under which it was planned to do all future financing. However, the credit of the road is judged to be insufficient at this time, so $15,000,000 of two year 5 per cent notes have just been sold to pay $13,280,000 of 5½ per cent notes which fall due on April 1. Evidently it would be imprudent to begin dividends while short term financing is necessary.

Kentucky Utilities.

F. C. G., Baraboo, Wis.—The Kentucky Utilities company made a large increase in earnings in 1916. Gross gained 13½ per cent, without counting the earnings of some properties acquired during the year. Net gained nearly 19 per cent, being $195,917. This covered bond interest one and four-fifths times and total interest charges, with a margin of about 30 per cent. The balance was $44,443. It covered the 6 per cent dividend on $500,000 of preferred stock one and one-half times. On the common ½ per cent was paid, leaving $9,443 to be added to surplus. During the year the company sold $391,300 first mortgage bonds, increasing the issue to $2,022,000. It bought in $35,000 of debentures and reduced its floating debt.

Los Angeles Union Terminal.

M. T. M., Warren, O.—The Los Angeles Union Terminal company owns nineteen acres in the wholesale district of that city, has built two large warehouses, and is erecting some market buildings, to be occupied by a public market which has been in successful operation for seven years. The company has just issued $2,250,000 of serial bonds secured by first mortgage on its property, which is said to be worth $4,834,100. The margin of security is wide, but, of course, the bonds are not yet seasoned, the entire project being comparatively new.

Brief Answers.

S. H. J.—The Racine-Truscott-Shell Lake Boat company failed two years ago. Machinery and other personal property was sold for $25,000. Real estate at Muskegon is to be sold at auction about May 1. There is no way of knowing how far the proceeds of the sale will go toward satisfying the $720,000 of bonds.

C. J. C., Kaukauna, Wis.—The 6 per cent adjustment bonds of the reorganized St. Louis and San Francisco railway have sold between 70¼ and 76 since Jan. 1. The six months' interest to Dec. 31 has been declared payable April 1. Net income available was nearly four times the amount needed.

C. F. G., Sterling, Ill.—The Northern Insurance company of New York was formed in 1900 by consolidating two young companies. The Northern has $350,000 of capital and $361,957 surplus. Its underwriting has been profitable. It formerly paid 6 per cent dividends. In 1912 the rate was increased to 7.

SUGAR.

CHICAGO, March 31.—Sugar prices were quoted by the wholesale dealers per 100 lbs: Cut loaf, H. & E., $9.08; powdered, standard, $8.18; standard, cane granulated, $7.90; beet granulated, $7.70; extra C, $7.15; canary, $7.20.

NEW YORK, March 31. — SUGAR—Raw quieter, but firm, and prices were well maintained. Close, 4⅞c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 5.89c for centrifugal and 5.01c for molasses. Refined: Unchanged at 7.25@8c for fine granulated. Futures: Unchanged to seven points higher. May sold from 4.97c to 5.05c, closing 5.04c; July 5.08c to 5.04c, closing 5.13c; September 5.17c to 5.22c, closing 5.22c; December 4.82c to 4.85c, closing 4.87c.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, March 31.—There was a further decline in the market for coffee futures here today under continued liquidation. Closing prices: April, 7.48c; May, 7.55c; June, 7.62c; July, 7.69c; August, 7.75c; September, 7.81c; October, 7.85c; November, 7.90c; December, 7.95c; January, 8.02c; February, 8.10c; March 8.16c. Spot coffee dull, nominally unchanged. Rio 7s, 9¼c; Santos 4s, 9⅞c. The official cables reported no change in Rio. Santos spots were 100 reis, and futures 50@100 reis lower. Santos cleared 16,000 for New York and Rio 15,000 for New Orleans. Brazilian port receipts, 15,000; Jundiahy, 8,000.

OKMULGEE
Producing & Refining Company

IS paying 10%—2½% quarterly dividends. And earnings are over $3,000 every twenty-four hours, approximately $1,000,000 a year.

THIS COMPANY is the consolidation of seven established, dividend paying interests. Its holdings consist of over 10,000 acres of oil and gas leases in prolific fields of Oklahoma and Kansas. At the present time 53 wells are producing 1,500 barrels a day and the refining capacity is 1,000 barrels daily.

NEW WELLS are being added each month and, as only 2% of the Company's property has been developed to date, the earnings should show a steady increase.

AT THE PRESENT PRICE OF $6.00, we consider this stock an exceptional investment opportunity. The stock is soon to be listed on New York and Boston Curbs. Write, call or 'phone for descriptive booklet which gives full information on this issue.

METALS.

NEW YORK, March 31.—COPPER—The market has been quiet during the past week with the situation showing little or no change. Some of the smaller dealers were said to be offering electrolytic for third quarter around 30c to 31c, but the larger agencies quoted 31c to 32c. IRON—Unchanged.

NEW YORK BANKS SHOW A LOSS IN EXCESS RESERVE

$28,958,210 Drop in the Surplus, Due to Cash Decline.

The surplus reserve of the New York banks showed a decrease of $28,958,210 for the week. The shrinkage was due almost wholly to a loss in cash of a little over $29,000,000. The reserve in the vaults of the banks declined $35,000,000, while there was an increase of over $6,000,000 with the reserves held in the federal reserve bank. On the surface there was not apparent the occasion for the large cash loss. However, the excess reserve stands at $113,807,150. The figures follow:

Chicago Securities.

The advance in Wilson & Co. shares has apparently come to a halt. The price closed yesterday at 81¼. The transactions were similar in character to those of the previous two days.

Swift & Co. shares were inclined to be firm, though the final quotations showed no improvement over initial prices. Cudahy was up one point from the opening, with trading in fair volume.

Union Carbide sold up two points to 202, against a close on Friday at 199½. The concentrated selling order which one large local house has been executing appeared to have been disposed of and thereafter the market firmed up. The stockholders will meet on April 3 to vote an increase of 40 per cent in the authorized capital. What further action will be taken is problematical.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

Stockholders of the Tamarack Mining company have been notified that in accordance with the action at a special meeting March 16 declaring a $60 dividend in liquidation the rights and assets of the Tamarack company have been delivered to the Calumet and Hecla Mining company. On presentation of stock certificates or receipts at the Merchants National bank therefor the dividend will be paid at the bank.

Robert J. Herts, Douglas Kent, and C. McGee Baxter have been elected members of the New York stock exchange. The membership of Franklin W. Hopkins has been posted for transfer to Elmer H. Bright and that of Robert S. Crocker to Edmund W. Nash. The transactions were made at a consideration of $63,000 for the memberships, against $64,000 for the last previous sale.

Local bond dealers say the market is waiting Washington developments. Meanwhile a moderate volume of business is being transacted. Outside the offering of a French loan, a number of other new issues have come upon the market and helped to stimulate buying by investors.

Following the advance in soft coal rates from the west, if general rates are advanced by the interstate commerce commission, the Erie will be put on its feet, according to Wall street authorities. These latter say that freight congestion and higher wages in operating costs have been responsible for the decreases shown recently in earnings.

Earnings of the White Motor company for the year ended Dec. 31, 1916, show a balance of $3,701,041, being equivalent to 23.13 per cent on the $16,000,000 capital stock outstanding, or $11.56 a share on the 320,000 shares of a par value of $50 each.

George B. Kurtzon, president of the Garden City Plating and Manufacturing company, was elected a director of the Ogden Avenue State bank in place of Arthur C. Amsler, who resigned. Forrest Pratt has been elected a vice president of the Edgewater State bank.

The directors of the Chicago, Duluth and Georgian Bay Transit company have elected Charles J. Bour president and general manager to succeed Robert C. Davis, deceased. Mr. Bour was formerly vice president.

SHRINKAGE IN QUOTATIONS.

New York, March 31.—Liquidation in moderate volume, combined with short selling, both probably impelled by misgivings regarding forthcoming developments in the international crisis, caused a general shrinkage of quotations in today's two hour session.

Some of the leaders, including United States Steel and standard rails, declined to lowest levels of the week, recording extreme recessions for that period of 2 to 5 points. Munitions and equipments, as well as shippings and metals, followed the general trend, which became more pronounced towards the close.

Petroleums and motors, sugars and specialties of no definite class were freely offered at concessions of considerable fractions. The heaviness of Reading, St. Paul, New York Central, and several other high grade rails was brought about on comparatively light sales.

Pool issues were the only features of strength, Ohio Gas continuing its upward march at a gain of 5 points to the new record of 135¼. Wilson Packing, Virginia Iron, General Motors, and Utah Copper were higher by 1 to 2 points. In the main the list closed at lowest prices of the day.

Exchange Strengthened.

Developments bearing upon financial matters included the increased strength of Scandinavian exchange, due to the payment by Washington of $25,000,000 to the Danish government for the Danish West Indies, additional exports of gold to Spain, and the purchase of $10,000,000 of Baltimore and Ohio railroad trust certificates, maturing in annual installments during ten years.

Weekly reviews of the mercantile agencies report no abatement of the heavy purchasing power by the public, this condition being stimulated by buying for government account.

The bond market manifested an easier tone today on small dealings. In government bonds the only change of the week was a decline of a point in coupon 4s on call.

A GUARANTEED 10% INVESTMENT
With a Perfectly Logical Reason for Its Liberality

The refinancing of corporations is practically always handled by brokers, who charge 15%, or more, commission.
We have decided to handle our own issue, thereby eliminating extravagant selling costs, and instead of paying 7% on our preferred stock, as is usually the case, we are adding an additional 3% per year, over a period of 5 years, making a

10% Preferred Stock, giving our stockholders the BROKER'S COMMISSION

We feel that, although this is the first time this method has been employed, it is entirely reasonable, as the security back of the investment will cause the stock to sell itself.

PROBABLY the most important event of the week was the announcement of the plans of Sherman T. Cooper, the builder, for the erection of the big eleven story Cooper-Carlton hotel at the southeast corner of Fifty-third street and Hyde Park boulevard. It is particularly interesting following as closely as it does the other comparatively recent big building projects in that immediate vicinity, such as the Sisson and Breakers hotels and the Jackson Shore apartments, as this group of high grade lofty buildings constitutes one of the most important developments in the history of the city.

They testify to a recognition of the peculiar advantages of locations along the lake for structures of this kind in the vicinity of Jackson park, and particularly when that district shall have been beautified by the prospective South Shore drive.

It is possible that in time all of these fine buildings would have materialized without this prospective beautiful creation, but there is little doubt that their present planning is largely due to a belief in the imminence of this splendid undertaking.

Other Hotel Projects.

There are other hotel projects reported on the south side in the vicinity of Jackson park. One of them is said to involve the property at the southwest corner of Stony Island avenue and the Midway, which was acquired by a Mr. Coyle from the late L. G. Fisher nearly three years ago. Mr. Coyle has been selling stock by mail and it is said he [illegible] seeking a loan of about $300,[illegible] purpose of carrying out his plans.

The Cooper-Carlton will front 153 feet on Fifty-third street and 175 feet on East End avenue and will overlook East End park, a beautiful spot, and the lake. The land has been owned by Mr. Cooper for several years, he originally acquiring the west half of the entire block. He has been holding the Fifty-third street corner with the purpose of improving it with a big hotel when the time was ripe. That time he considers has now arrived and it is stated the preliminary work of construction will begin at once.

Of Highest Type.

The proposed building, which will be of the highest type of construction, will be of modern Roman design. It will be of reinforced concrete construction with an exterior finish of dark pressed brick, trimmed with terra cotta and granite. On the first floor there will be nine shops for the convenience of the guests of the hotel and to serve the rapidly growing needs of this locality. There also will be elaborately decorated and appointed lobbies, banquet and dining halls. The ballroom will have a separate entrance from the street and will be connected with the banquet hall by a separate passageway.

Another feature which is found only in the best type of hotels will be the service which is to be provided on each floor, with service pantries and kitchens so that guests can be served in their rooms. The building, which was designed by Architect Henry L. Newhouse, will contain 380 rooms, and together with the land will represent an investment of about $1,350,000. In connection with its construction S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a serial bond issue loan of $800,000, two to ten years, at 6 per cent.

Buy Site for Material Yard and Warehouse

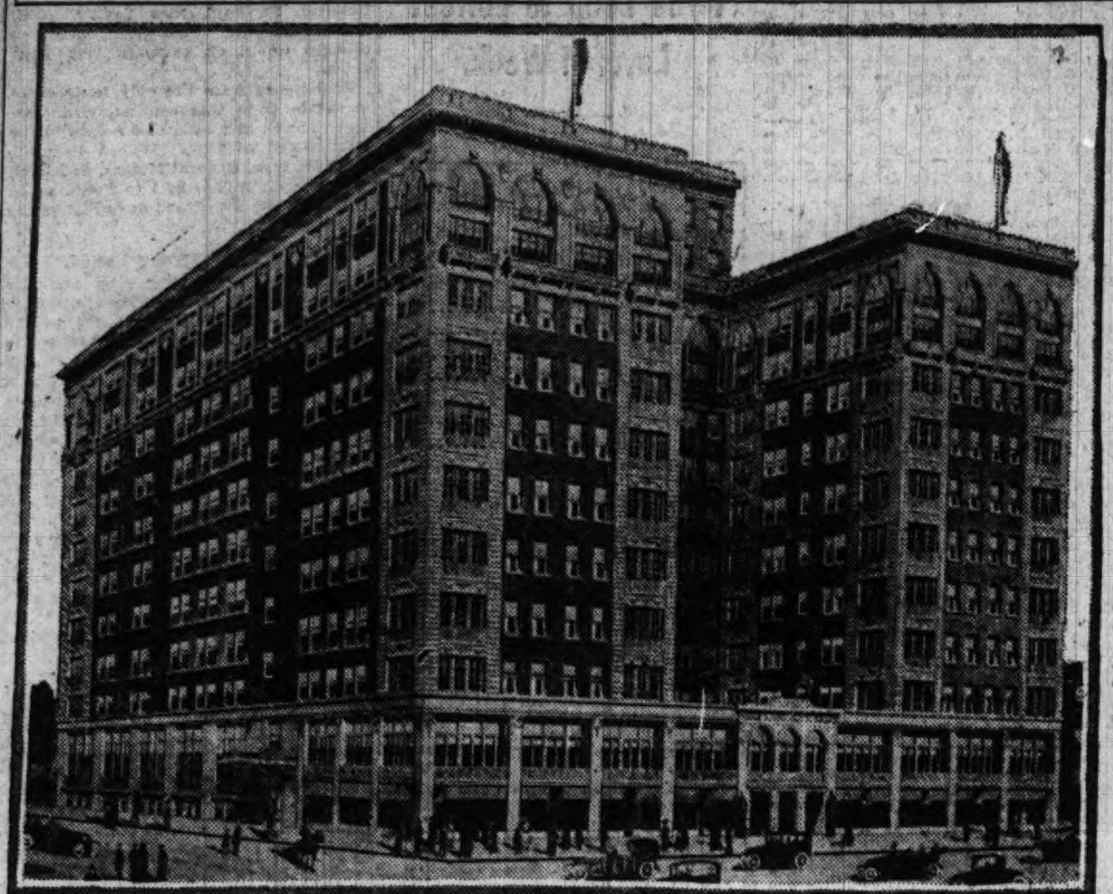
Charles R. Kappes and Louis B. Beardslee, managers of the Division street manufacturing district, have sold for Otis W. Hinckley and Frederick J. Kasper, trustees, to the Chicago and Oak Park Supply company, a plot of 82,602 square feet in Division street, west of Kral avenue, for a reported consideration of $18,000. The property will be used as a material yard after the expenditure of about $25,000 in improvements, including an office and warehouse building, traveling crane, etc.

Week's Building Cost Record for Some Years

The week's big total of $5,577,200 of permits issued by the city building department is the largest week's total for several years. It was due to the permit for the construction of the big warehouse in the Central Manufacturing district to be occupied by Montgomery Ward & Co., the cost of which was estimated at $1,850,000; the $1,800,000 new building to be erected by the telephone company, and the permit for the Sisson hotel at Fifty-third street and the lake, [illegible].

THE COOPER-CARLTON

New Eleven Story Hotel to Cost $1,350,000 Which Will Be Erected at Fifty-Third Street and Hyde Park Boulevard.



THREE DEALS MARK WEEK IN LOOP REALTY

Most Important Is at Sherman and Polk Streets.

Taken as a whole the week's market made a fairly good showing. There was a fairly good movement of business property, while manufacturing property, which has been inactive for several weeks, made an excellent showing. The downtown district was represented by three transactions, the most important covering the property at the southwest corner of Sherman and Polk streets, with a frontage of 80 feet on Sherman street and 106½ feet on Polk street. It has old two and three story frame and brick improvements, which are said to have been given no value in the transaction. The property was sold by John Maitland of England to George B. Ogle of George A. Ogle & Co., publishers, a nominal consideration being given.

The property was sold clear, but Mr. Ogle gave a trust deed to W. W. Baird to secure a purchase money mortgage of $50,000, due Jan. 15, 1920, and bearing 5½ per cent. The board of review valued the land at $102,612, but it is understood the actual consideration was in the neighborhood of $80,000. Baird & Warner represented both parties to the transaction and will continue to handle the property. No plans are said to be had regarding its improvement.

It is interesting to note that although the property was placed under contract early in December of 1916 it has been impossible to close the deal before, owing to the delays in the mails between this country and England.

Another downtown deal was the sale by the Northern Trust company, trustee, to Isa W. Kahn of the fee of the property in Fifth avenue, sixty-nine feet north of Madison street, 19x80¾ feet, for $46,000, the purchaser giving back a purchase money mortgage to secure $40,000, five years, at 5½ per cent. The land belongs to Charles H. Starkweather and is leased to J. L. Kesner for ninety-nine years from Dec. 1, 1904, at an annual rental of $2,000.

Record also was made of the sale by Carl M. Bernegan and Louise, his wife, to Keuffel & Esser Co. of N. J., drawing materials, of the building and leasehold interest in the property in South Dearborn street, 236 feet north of Harrison street, forty feet, east front, to Federal street, for a stated $49,000.

Fine Residence Plans for "Streeterville"

An important transaction in the "Streeterville" district, involving fine residence improvements, was the purchase by Bertram M. Winston from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, of the property in Delaware place 252 feet east of Lincoln Park boulevard, 50x109 feet, north front, a nominal consideration being given. It is understood, however, that the sale was at the rate of $300 a front foot. Mr. Winston plans to improve with two four story and English basement dwellings, containing fifteen rooms each, and of the highest class. Mr. Winston has not decided whether he will offer them for sale or rent them.

Anti-Cruelty Society Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Anti-Cruelty Society of Chicago will be held in the east room of the Hotel La Salle at 2 o'clock next Saturday afternoon, April 7. Moving pictures showing rescue work for animals and "dogs of war" in action will be shown. A cordial invitation is extended to every one interested.

99 YEAR LEASE ON MADISON ST.

An important West Madison street long term lease closed late in the week and involving an important improvement covers the east frontage between Harlem avenue and Elgin street, 160 feet on Madison and 150 feet on Harlem and Elgin. The property, which is vacant, has been leased by John J. Marshall to Frank A. Carelin et al. for a term of ninety-nine years from Jan. 1, 1917, at a reported annual rent of $3,000 for the first five years, $3,500 for the next five, and $4,000 for the remainder of the term. Capitalized on a 5 per cent basis, the rent for the first five years is equivalent to $60,000, which is at the rate of about $380 a front foot. It is stated the lessees plan the erection of a three story building to contain six stores on Madison street, twelve apartments, and a theater in the rear with a seating capacity of 1,000. It is stated work will begin May 1 and that the cost of the building will approximate $150,000. Frank A. Carelin & Co. represented both parties.

Type Founder Barnhart Sells Winnetka Home

A notable deal in Winnetka residence property was the sale by Morris W. Barnhart, formerly of Barnhart Bros. & Spindler, type founders, to Paul P. Bird of Lake Forest of the Barnhart residence on Ridge avenue. There is over an acre of ground running from Ridge through to Forest avenue, while the house is a large and attractive structure. It is in the southwest part of Winnetka, adjacent to and overlooking the Indian Hill Golf club. While the consideration is not disclosed, it is said to have been about $35,000. P. W. Bradstreet of Winnetka represented both parties.

April Makes New Record for Torrens Registration

April made a new record in the way of the number of initial registrations under the Torrens system, the number being 130, with a total valuation of over $600,000. The nearest approach to this was 124 for October, 1916.

MIEHLE TO BUILD FINE RESIDENCE NORTH OF PARK

Inventor Buys Revell Land Near Sheridan Road.

One of the most interesting transactions of the week was a sale of vacant land in the exclusive residential district north of Lincoln park involving the construction of another fine residence by Robert Miehle, inventor of the Miehle printing press.

Mr. Miehle's purchase comprised 75 feet north front in Wellington street, 76 feet east of Sheridan road, with a depth of 199 feet, and was acquired from Alexander H. Revell, the consideration in the deed being of a nominal character. It is understood, however, the property has been held at $500 a front foot.

The property is in the restricted residence district near the park and will be improved with a handsome residence this year by Mr. Miehle. The sale was negotiated by Callistus S. Ennis & Co., who state that several new residences will be constructed in that district in addition to those announced and in process of construction.

Residence on North State Bought by Harvester Man

One of the most interesting market happenings was the purchase by George A. Ranney, secretary of the International Harvester company, from Joseph B. Terbell of the residence property on the east side of State street, 200 feet north of Schiller street.

The lot fronts 35 feet with a depth of 130 feet, and it is improved with a three story stone front dwelling containing about thirteen rooms. While a consideration of $10 is given in the transfer, the actual price is said to have been about $45,000.

The purchaser gave a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company to secure a purchase money mortgage of $20,000 seven years at 5 per cent.

Plan Family Hotel for Negroes in Wabash Ave.

A long term lease filed for record during the week involves the location of a Negro family hotel in Wabash avenue just north of Fifty-third street. The lease covers the property at 5258-60, which has been leased by Eugene F. Manns to Violet Westbrooke for a term of ninety-nine years from Jan. 15, 1917, at an annual rental of $1,320 for the first ten years, with a 5 per cent increase for every five years for the succeeding forty years, and a 7½ per cent increase every ten years for the remaining forty-nine years.

The present improvements comprise a four story apartment building, which it is proposed to remodel itno a family hotel for Negroes.

Leases and Loans.

THERE was nothing doing of an important character in either leases or loans last week, outside of the Straus & Co. $800,000 loan to Sherman T. Cooper, the showing being the poorest of the season. There are several big leases covering store space in the downtown district pending, but brokers report difficulty in closing. Some of them, however, are certain to go over this week, and one in particular, is of a specially interesting character.

E. N. Duerlein & Co. have leased for A. A. Moore of Winchester, Conn., to the Atlas Specialty company, the third floor at 18-22 East Twenty-fourth street for a term rent of $14,000. The space leased comprises 12,000 square feet and will be used by the Atlas company for the manufacture of fabric accessories for automobiles.

L. W. Bowen of John R. Magill & Co. reports the closing of seven leases, mostly in the wholesale district, with term rentals up to $4,500.

The National Life Insurance company of Montpelier, Vt., through S. Yorndorf & Co., its local agents, has made a loan of $63,000, five years at 5½ per cent, to Mary Hewson, secured by the forty-two flat building at 6227-39 Drexel avenue. It is a refunding loan.

Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company have underwritten a serial bond issue loan of $110,000, two to seven years at 6 per cent, to Max Blatt on the property at the southwest corner of North Clark street and Estes avenue, 100x202 feet, being improved with a business block and theater, the latter having been leased to Ascher Bros. for a term of ten years at an annual rental of $11,500.

ALEX. W. HANNAH SELLS PROPERTY IN SHERIDAN ROAD

A transaction of much interest in Sheridan road property was the sale by Alexander W. Hannah to Chester A. and Raymond C. Cook, as trustees under deed of trust dated Dec. 1, 1910, of the property at the northeast corner of the road and Windsor avenue, 93¾x123 feet, improved with a three story apartment building. A nominal consideration is given, subject to an incumbrance of $65,000, but the actual figure is said to have been in excess of $100,000.

The purchasers have leased the property back to Mr. Hannah for a term of twenty-five years at a reported annual rental of about $5,000.

Mr. Hannah plans extensively to remodel the building so that it will contain seven shops on the ground floor, several offices, and about twelve apartments. The transaction is said to have been of a rather complicated character.

New Masonic Temple Plan on Winthrop Ave.

The North End Masonic Temple association has just acquired the last of 150 feet of frontage on Winthrop avenue 175 feet north of Argyle street, for which about $26,000 is said to have been paid. It will be used as the site of a two story Masonic temple to cost about $150,000. It will be occupied by the North Shore and Edgewater lodges and Lincoln Park commandery and by Loyal chapter, R. A. SCREW COMPANY BUYS 20 ACRES FOR NEW PLANT

Chicago Concern Expects to Spend Over Half Million on Buildings.

Factory property, for the first time in several weeks, cut a prominent figure in the week's market.

After considerable delay, owing to the difficulty of securing the vacation of certain stub end streets by the city, the Chicago Screw company, now at Fillmore street and Homan avenue, has closed the purchase of a tract of about twenty acres, or 850,000 square feet, comprising the four blocks bounded by Division and Augusta streets, North Kilpatrick avenue, and West Forty-eighth street; also a half block facing Augusta street.

The property lies south of the Pettibone, Mulliken plant, and it adjoins the Chicago and Western Indiana Belt Line tracks. The individual grantors were G. T. Stodder of Bangor, Me.; A. [illegible] Hume of New York City, Martha H. Frost of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and F. [illegible] Hathaway of Los Angeles, Cal. Together with the compensation paid the city, which is said to have been around $50,000, it is understood the company paid something over $200,000 for the property, which, because of its excellent switching facilities, is admirably adapted to the needs of the company.

No Plans Decided On.

It was stated yesterday that no plans have yet been decided upon regarding the details of the buildings to be erected by the company, but it is thought they will probably exceed materially $500,000 in cost. It is understood the company is desirous of making the proposed improvements as soon as possible, as its business is said to have outgrown the capacity of its present plant. R. Le Roy Huszagh represented the screw company in the transaction, while Speis & Walson represented the eastern owners.

Another deal in factory property was the purchase by the Berhalter Health Food company from three different grantors of the entire north frontage on Diversey parkway, between Herndon and Ward streets, 224x120 feet, for a total consideration of $18,500. The company plans to begin at once the erection of a two story brick and stone building, to cover the entire lot, to cost in the neighborhood of $120,000. The company makes a specialty of whole wheat bread.

High Street Deal.

Record was made of the acquirement by the Atlas Copper and Brass Manufacturing company from Alexander [illegible] of the property in High street, 181 feet east of Diversey parkway, lot [illegible] feet, a nominal consideration being given. The property was acquired some time ago by the company and has been improved with a one story factory building, which the company is about to move into.
